THE SAME. Large-paper Edition, limited to 150 copies, printed on linen paper. With photogravures printed on India paper. Two volumes, full vellum binding, in box, royal 8vo.

Ever since the first publication of "The Marble Faun," travelers and lovers of Rome have used the book as a souvenir, and have found in its pages a most agreeable record of impressions created by the Eternal City and by the works of art preserved there. So satisfactory is the book in this regard that it has become the custom of visitors to Italy to collect photographs of the statues, paintings, and buildings referred to in the romance, and to interleave the book with them; and this is so common that dealers in Rome and Florence keep such photographs arranged and ready for the traveler.

It has seemed judicious to act on this hint, and choose fifty of the best subjects, carefully selected photographs of which have been secured, and reproduced in photogravures. The subjects chosen are the following: The Faun of Praxiteles, The Dving Gladiator, Saint Cecilia, In the Catacombs, Hilda's Tower - Via Portoghese, Guido's Beatrice Cenci, Piazza del Popolo, Fountain of Moses in the Pincian Garden, View from the Pincian Hill, Grand Stairs from the Piazza di Spagna, Canova's Studio, The Rape of the Sabines, Fountain of Trevi, A Roman Peasant, Trajan's Column and Forum, The Coliseum, Interior of the Coliseum, Arch of Constantine, Arch of Titus, Roman Forum; Approach to the Capitol - Statue of Marcus Aurelius, Guido's Saint Michael, Capuchin Crypt, Medici Gardens, Dining Room of an Italian Palace, The Laocoon, Grand Ducal Square and Palazzo Vecchio in Florence, Titian's Magdalen, The Three Fates by Michael Angelo, A Fresco by Giotto in the Church of St. Francis at Assisi, A Gateway of Perugia, Angel by Fra Angelico, Statue of Pope Julius III., The Transfiguration by Raphael, Interior of St. John Lateran, Saint Peter's, Statue of St. Peter, Interior of St. Peter's, Castle of Saint Angelo, The Ghetto, Apollo Belvedere, Seven-branched Golden Candlestick, Porta San Sebastiano, Arch of Drusus: Appian Way, Cecilia Metella's Tomb, Venus de' Medici, The Campagna - Appian Way and Claudian Aqueduct, The Pantheon, The Tomb of Raphael.

The result is an unusually valuable and attractive work, which cannot fail to be equally desirable for gift purposes and for a permanent memorial of Rome as seen and depicted by Hawthorne.

Oliver Wendell Holmes.

THE AUTOCRAT OF THE BREAKFAST TABLE; or, Every Man his own Boswell. By OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES. An entirely New Edition from new plates, with engraved title-pages from designs by Mrs. Henry Whitman. In two volumes, 16mo, carefully printed and tastefully bound, gilt top, $2.50.

A limited number of copies have been reserved from the first edition, and will be issued in cloth, paper label, uncut edges, at $3.00.

This edition of Dr. Holmes's most famous book has been prepared with the utmost care to meet the demand for so delightful a work in an attractive style suited to its classic merits.

It is distinctly an edition for the book-lover — the book-lover who reads his books, and who desires a good reading edition of those he loves best; and yet wishes them to have a certain cachet suited to their contents. This has been the idea of the Publishers in printing these volumes. The decorations of their title-pages and also the binding have been arranged after designs by Mrs. Henry Whitman.

William Dean Howells.

CHARACTER AND COMMENT, selected from the Novels of W. D. How-ELLS. By Minnie Macoun. 1 vol. 16mo.

Not a few distinguished writers must be read continuously, wholesale one may say, to be enjoyed. But the humor and shrewd sense of Mr. Howells are so abundant that his books are full of noteworthy and delicious sentences, complete and perfect in themselves. The book above named is made up of such, and cannot fail of a hearty welcome.

Mary Howitt.

MARY HOWITT. An Autobiography. Edited by her Daughter, MARGARET HOWITT. With several Portraits, and about thirty other Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo.

Mary Howitt has left so fragrant a memory in the world of letters that the story of her long and useful and happy life will be read with deep interest. This story she has herself told, with that frank simplicity and truthfulness which characterized her life and her writings. The work and nobleness of William Howitt have fitting and tender commemoration. Their felicitous community of tastes and occupation, their delightful home wherever they were, and many letters of great personal and literary interest, lend to these volumes an unusual attraction.

J. Franklin Jameson and Others.

ESSAYS IN THE CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES, in the Formative Period, 1775–1789. By Graduates and Former Members of the Johns Hopkins University. Edited by J. Franklin Jameson, Ph. D., Late Associate in the Johns Hopkins University, Professor of History in Brown University. I vol. 8vo.

CONTENTS: The Predecessor of the Supreme Court, by the Editor;

The Movement towards a Second Constitutional Convention in 1788, by EDWARD P. SMITH, Ph. D., Professor in the Worcester Polytechnic Institute; The Development of the Executive Departments, by JAY C. Huggenheimer, A. B.; The Period of Constitution-Making in the American Churches, by WILLIAM P. TRENT, M. A., Professor in the University of the South; The Status of the Slave, 1774-1789, by J. R. BRACKETT, Ph. D.

This volume contains the results of original research by members of the Johns Hopkins University into one of the most important periods in the history of the United States, when the Constitution was being shaped. It sets forth newly discovered facts, or known facts in their true relation and significance, and will appeal strongly to all students of the history of our nation and the development of its institutions.

Sarah Orne Jewett.

BETTY LEICESTER: A Story for Girls. By SARAH ORNE JEWETT, author of "Deephaven," "A White Heron," "The King of Folly Island," "Play Days," etc. I vol. square 16mo.

If Miss Jewett can write anything more delightful and more nearly perfect than her unsurpassed sketches of New England scenery, life, and character, it is a story for girls. She understands girl-nature perfectly; she knows the thoughts, the fancies, the ambitions, the charming nonsense, and the fundamental nobleness and right-heartedness of true girls; her sympathy with all these is strong and fresh. Readers of Miss Jewett can imagine how attractive a story "Betty Leicester" is, what a pure, gracious atmosphere pervades it, how full of humor and sunny wisdom it is. It has a direct relation to the holiday season.

William Cranston Lawton.

THREE DRAMAS OF EURIPIDES. The Medea, The Hippolytos, and The Alkestis. By WILLIAM CRANSTON LAWTON. I vol. 16mo.

Mr. Lawton has the rare art of being able to make the ancient world and its literature familiar to the modern reader without modernizing the thought and without an awkward and archaic form of expression. This book is a clear and admirable introduction to an intelligent conception of the Greek drama. It contains a fine metrical translation of the three dramas of Euripides above named, with such explanatory and illustrative remarks as give the reader a distinct and adequate impression of these dramas as produced on the Athenian stage. The excellent classical scholarship, the historic imagination, and the literary quality of the book, are all noteworthy.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

BALLADS, LYRICS, AND SONNETS. Selected from the Poetical Works of Mr. Longfellow, and brought out in uniform style with Browning's Lyrics, Idyls, and Romances. 16mo, gilt top, $1.00; half morocco or half levant, $3.00.

A very tasteful little book, containing many of Longfellow's choicest short poems, and admirably suited for gift purposes.

Abbot Lawrence Lowell.

Essays on Government. By Abbot Lawrence Lowell. 1 vol. 16mo.

CONTENTS: Cabinet Responsibility and the Constitution; Democracy and the Constitution of the United States; The Responsibilities of American Lawyers; The Theory of the Social Compact; The Limits of Sovereignty.

These essays have a threefold claim to attention,—the intrinsic value of the several papers, the important service rendered by any well-considered effort to treat questions closely connected with the wise government of the republic, and an author whose family is associated with the best American literature. The book is heartily commended to that constantly enlarging class which regards the study of political science and history as not only very interesting, but in a high degree patriotic and even indispensable to the wisest and most useful citizenship.

Jacob Merrill Manning.

SERMONS. By the late JACOB MERRILL MANNING, D. D., pastor of the Old South Church, Boston. With a fine Steel Portrait of Dr. Manning. I vol. crown 8vo.

Dr. Manning for nearly a quarter of a century occupied, as colleague of pastor, the pulpit of the famous Old South Church of Boston. This conspicuous position he adorned by his ability, his scholarship, his gifts as a public speaker, and his fervent patriotism, as well as by those spiritual forces and graces which are of the first importance in a clergyman and pastor. From his most noteworthy discourses enough have been selected to fill a volume and in some good degree to illustrate the variety, the earnestness, and the influence of Dr. Manning as a preacher. The book cannot fail of a hearty welcome not only from his own communion (the Congregational), but from all who appreciate the value of the discourses, and the broad, truly catholic spirit of the author.

Greville Macdonald.

ON THE FUNCTIONS OF THE NOSE. By Dr. GREVILLE MACDONALD.

Dr. Macdonald, already favorably known as an author, is a son of George Macdonald, the popular novelist. This brief treatise he devotes to the nose and its functions, bringing to his subject the results of the latest medical investigation.

Harold Murdock.

THE RECONSTRUCTION OF EUROPE. A Sketch of the Diplomatic and Military History of Continental Europe from the Rise to the Fall of the Second French Empire. By HAROLD MURDOCK. With an Introduction by JOHN FISKE, and several Maps. 1 vol. crown 8vo, $2.00.

Within the last forty years have occurred many important changes in political map of Europe. Napoleon III. won Savoy and Nice from Italy, and lost Alsace and Lorraine to Germany. Italy itself has become a united nation instead of an aggregation of kingdoms, duchies, etc. Germany is now an empire, absorbing and organizing into her own powerful system a host of States, large and small; and other significant changes have taken place. These Mr. Murdock has described, both the facts and their causes, so that his work is in great part a history of Europe since Louis Napoleon became Emperor of France. Numerous maps add greatly to the value of this work, which is made yet more valuable and attractive by an Introduction from Mr. John Fiske.

Mary Pickering Nichols (translator).

GUDRUN. A Mediæval Epic, translated from the Middle High German by MARY PICKERING NICHOLS. Carefully printed, the decorations being taken entirely from German books, generally of the sixteenth century. With a colored Fac-simile of a page of the original MS. of the Poem. I vol. 8vo.

"Gudrun" is a Mediæval German epic of the twelfth or thirteenth century, and a companion poem to the Nibelungen Lied. Like this it shows a high poetic imagination, and gives a picture of the manners and warlike spirit of the times, but brings into greater prominence the tender traits of the early German race, especially in the adventures and character of Gudrun, the maiden heroine. It is not only an interesting work to the scholar, but as a tale it appeals to the sentiments and taste of the general mind. This interesting work has been translated into English verse, and is the only complete English translation of the work yet made.

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

THE STRUGGLE FOR IMMORTALITY. Essays by ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS, author of "The Gates Ajar," etc. 1 vol. 16mo.

CONTENTS: What is a Fact? Is God good? What does Revelation reveal? The Struggle for Immortality; The Christianity of Christ; Psychical Opportunity; The Psychical Wave.

Miss Phelps's writings abound in evidences of her keen interest in this material world, and even more in testimony to her profound and reverent curiosity concerning "worlds not realized" yet. She cherishes "those thoughts that wander through eternity," and in the book announced above she gives the result of her thinking on some of the greatest and most inspiring subjects that can engage the human mind. There must be a host of thoughtful readers to whom this book will be peculiarly attractive.

Riverside Aldine Series.

Choice books of American literature, brought out in specially tasteful form and style. Each volume, 16mo, $1.00. A limited number of copies reserved from the First Edition, with paper label, uncut, each volume, $1.50.

To the ten volumes in this series, named below, will be added: —

II, 12. WALDEN. By H. D. THOREAU. In two volumes.

13. THE GRAY CHAMPION AND OTHER STORIES. By NATHANIEL HAW-

"Walden" is Thoreau's most famous book, illustrating his consistent practical philosophy, his love of nature, and his marvelous faculty of observation and description.

The book of Hawthorne's stories contains The Gray Champion, The Canterbury Pilgrims, My Kinsman Major Molineux, The Snow Image, The Old Manse, Feathertop, Drowne's Wooden Image, The Wives of the Dead, Wakefield, etc.

Following are the volumes already in the Riverside Aldine Series: -

- I. MARJORIE DAW, AND OTHER STORIES. By THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICK
- 2. My Summer in a Garden. By Charles Dudley Warner.
- 3. Fireside Travels. By James Russell Lowell.
- 4. THE LUCK OF ROARING CAMP, AND OTHER STORIES. By BRET HARTE
- 5, 6. VENETIAN LIFE. In two volumes. By WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS.
- 7. WAKE ROBIN. By JOHN BURROUGHS.
- 8, 9. THE BIGLOW PAPERS. In two volumes. By J. R. LOWELL.
- 10. BACKLOG STUDIES. By CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER.

Riverside Classics.

Cabinet Editions of Favorite Books, in tasteful 16mo volumes. The Series includes The Vicar of Wakefield, Picciola, Mrs. Caudle's Curtain Lectures, Paradise Lost, Lalla Rookh, Paul and Virginia, The Lady of the Lake, and The Clockmaker. To these will be added

THE ENGLISH OPIUM EATER. By THOMAS DE QUINCEY. Including Confessions of an English Opium Eater and Suspiria de Profundis. 16mo, $1.00.

Riverside Library for Young People.

A series of books designed especially for boys and girls who are laying the foundation of private libraries. The books included in it are not ephemeral publications; both the authors and the subjects promise that they will be books to last.

History, Biography, Mechanics, Travel, Natural History, and Adventure will form the principal portion of the Library, but occasionally a Story of special excellence will be added. The following volumes have already appeared:—

- 1. THE WAR OF INDEPENDENCE. By JOHN FISKE. With Maps.
- 2. GEORGE WASHINGTON: an Historical Biography. By HORACE E. SCUDDER. With a Portrait and Illustrations.
- 3. BIRDS THROUGH AN OPERA-GLASS. By FLORENCE A. MERRIAM. With Illustrations.
- 4. UP AND DOWN THE BROOKS. By MARY E. BAMFORD. With Illustrations.

Each, 16mo, 75 cents.

The Christian Union pronounces this "one of the most interesting and promising series of books lately projected," and adds: "Its educational value to fathers and mothers, as well as to schools, can hardly be overstated; and if the first two volumes are to be taken as establishing the standard of the series, its success and importance are already assured. Mr. Fiske's "War, of Independence" and Mr. Scudder's "George Washington" are each in their way models of judicious and interesting treatment. The story of the Revolution, as Mr. Fiske tells it, is one of surpassing interest. His treatment is a marvel of clearness and comprehensiveness. . . . Mr. Scudder's biography of Washington is a fit companion volume for Mr. Fiske's little history. It tells the story of the great patriot, soldier, and statesman with simplicity, sincerity, and completeness. It is not too much to say of these books that they ought to be put into the hands of every boy and girl, not only because of that which they contain, but because of the soundness of their form."

Of the two other volumes, Mrs. Olive Thorne Miller, a very competent judge, remarks in The Epoch: "'Birds Through an Opera-Glsss' is one of the most thoroughly delightful books for young people that has come from the press this year. I heartily recommend it. 'Up and Down the Brooks' is a charming book, full of the most fascinating details in the lives of little-known insects, and opening a rich field of study and interest accessible to every country child. It cannot be too highly recommended to parents."

To these will soon be added: -

5. COAL AND THE COAL MINES. By HOMER GREENE. With Illustrations by the Author. 16mo, 75 cents.

Mr. Greene writes from full and familiar knowledge on a subject of great interest. He describes the different varieties of mineral coal, tells where they are found, and then gives a clear and very satisfactory description of the modes and processes of mining.

Other volumes are in preparation and will follow in rapid succession.

Kate Sanborn.

THE RAINBOW CALENDAR. By KATE SANBORN, author of "A Year of Sunshine," "Purple and Gold," etc. 1 vol. 16mo.

Miss Sanborn is well known as a lady of large and familiar acquaintance with the best literature, and as having excellent judgment and taste, which give unusual value to a volume of selections made by her. "The Rainbow Calendar" fully justifies her wisdom and tact in this respect, being a little book of choice sentences in prose and passages of verse from the best writers, for each day of the year. Its value is greatly enhanced by the fact that it is not limited to a single year, but is good — and very good — for any one of many years to come.

John Campbell Shairp.

PORTRAITS OF FRIENDS. By JOHN CAMPBELL SHAIRP, late Principal of the United College, St. Andrews, Professor of Poetry at Oxford, author of "Aspects of Poetry," "Poetic Interpretation of Nature," etc. With a Character-Portrait of Principal Shairp by his friend Professor William Young Sellar, and a Portrait on Steel. I vol. 16mo.

This volume contains papers by Principal Shairp on Thomas Erskine of Linlathen, Bishop Cotton of Calcutta, Arthur Hugh Clough, Norman Macleod, Dr. McLeod Campbell, and others. They are marked by the same combined vigor and refinement which characterize the books published by him during his lifetime, with a pronounced and sympathetic loyalty to the noble friends he commemorated and to the high principles and aims which shaped his career and character. The tribute of Professor Sellar and the fine portrait of Principal Shairp will be welcome to his American readers.

Charles E. Stowe.

THE LIFE OF HARRIET BEECHER STOWE. By her Son, Rev. CHARLES E. STOWE. With New Portraits on Steel of Mrs. Stowe, Portraits of some of her Relatives and Eminent Contemporaries, and other Illustrations. Printed on pica type, and tastefully bound. 1 vol. 8vo, $5.00. (Sold by Subscription.)

No American woman of our time has enjoyed a wider or more admiring clientage of readers than has Mrs. Stowe, and for many reasons there has been a keen general interest felt in her as a woman as well as a writer and reformer. This biography, written by her son with her sanction and assistance, will be peculiarly welcome. It will be practically an autobiography. and will be found as entertaining and in some respects as touching as any of her novels over which the civilized world has laughed and wept. The book is written with great frankness, and is very rich in letters by Mrs. Stowe and letters written to her by a multitude of distinguished persons on both These letters were written in the intensely interesting sides of the Atlantic. political period of Mrs. Stowe's active career, and they vividly illuminate aspects of her character and events in her life not generally known, but which will possess a profound interest for her readers. Many illustrious figures, including of course the famous Beecher family, move through the pages of this work; great events cast their shadows on it; and the story of this remarkable woman, who would have gained a most enviable renown even if she had not written "Uncle Tom's Cabin," will touch and interest thousands upon thousands who delight to do her honor.

Hannis Taylor.

ORIGIN AND GROWTH OF THE ENGLISH CONSTITUTION. An Historical Treatise in which is drawn out, by the Light of the most recent Researches, the Gradual Development of the English Constitutional System, and the Growth out of that System of the Federal Republic of the United States. By Hannis Taylor. I vol. 8vo.

To this important work Mr. Taylor has devoted the study and researches of fourteen years. His plan is to unfold, after the method of the modern historical school, the progressive development of the two Constitutional systems (English and American) as one unbroken story. The direct purpose of the work is a commentary upon the English Constitution, but a purpose hardly less prominent is that of a commentary upon the Constitution of the United States. Mr. Taylor has submitted proofs of the somewhat extended Introduction to several eminent historical scholars, among them Bishop Stubbs, the famous author of the Constitutional History of England, who writes: "I think I may congratulate you on the production of a piece of sound, thorough, and interesting work." Mr. John Fiske writes: "It seems to me in every way admirable. It shows thorough mastery of the subject, with rare clearness of statement. . . . Your book is evidently a masterpiece, and I shall await its publication with impatient eagerness."

M. Boutmy, author of "Etudes de Droit Constitutionnel-France-Angleterre-États-Unis," a member of the Institute, and Director of the School of Political Sciences of Paris, says: "I have naught but praise for the article, so full, so complete, so admirably written, and which attests a possession so perfect of all the sources of information touching the subject."

Alfred, Lord Tennyson.

INTERLUDES, LYRICS, AND IDYLS. Selected from LORD TENNYSON'S Poetical Works, and brought out in uniform style with Browning's "Lyrics, Idyls, and Romances." 16mo, gilt top, $1.00; half morocco, or half levant, $3.00.

A beautiful little volume, comprising many of Lord Tennyson's best short poems, and admirably suited for use as a gift.

William Makepeace Thackeray.

THE COMPLETE WORKS OF WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY. Illustrated Library Edition. In twenty-two volumes, crown 8vo. Fully illustrated. Carefully printed and tastefully bound. $1.50 a volume.

This edition will be more complete than any other edition of Thackeray's Works now published, either in Great Britain or in America. The very great literary grace and the remarkable felicity of touch that characterized everything which Thackeray wrote give an especial attraction to all his writings, even the shortest sketches and most unstudied trifles. The fact that this edition is so full will give it a peculiar value for those who properly appreciate Thackeray's almost unequaled charm as a writer.

A distinguishing feature of this edition is a series of biographical and bibliographical introductions to the volumes, giving such information with regard to the time and the circumstances of the writing of the several books as is in any respect desirable or necessary for a fuller understanding of the same.

This edition contains over sixteen hundred illustrations, is printed from large type on good paper, and is tastefully bound, forming a very desirable edition of Thackeray for the library.

The arrangement of the volumes is as follows: -

- I. VANITY FAIR. I.
- 2. VANITY FAIR. II.
 LOVEL THE WIDOWER.
- 3, 4. Pendennis.
- 5. Burlesques, etc.
- 6. Memoirs of Yellowplush.
- 7. HISTORY OF SAMUEL TITMARSH, ETC.
- 8. BARRY LYNDON, DENIS DUVAL.
- 9, 10. THE NEWCOMES.
- 11. Paris Sketch Book, etc.

- 12. IRISH SKETCH BOOK, ETC.
- 13. THE FOUR GEORGES.
- 14. HENRY ESMOND.
- 15, 16. THE VIRGINIANS.
- 17. PHILIP. I.
- (PHILIP. II.
- 18. CATHERINE.
- 19. ROUNDABOUT PAPERS, ETC.
- 20. MRS. PERKINS'S BALL, ETC.
- 21. Contributions to Punch, etc.
- 22. MISCELLANEOUS ESSAYS.

The Boston Literary World says: "An edition handsomely printed and strongly bound, in volumes of convenient but not small size, retaining the many characteristic illustrations from the author's own hand, which lend such a charm to 'Vanity Fair' and 'The Newcomes' in particular, and yet of moderate price, has been a desideratum. This lack Houghton, Mifflin & Co. seem to us to have supplied, in a manner which leaves little if anything to be desired. . . . The Introductory Notes are a new feature of great value in this library edition. These are meant to give every interesting detail about the origin and fortunes of separate works that can be gathered from the literature about Thackeray."

Mary Agnes Tincker.

THE TWO CORONETS. A Novel. By MARY AGNES TINCKER, author of "Signor Monaldini's Niece," etc. 12mo, $1.50.

This story begins in Italy with such incidents of social conspiracy as seem to flourish in Italian life. It afterwards alternates between Italy and New England, and the sharp contrasts of scenery, character, and custom in the two countries form the background of a story full of movement, social engineering, circumventing of counts and countesses, with quiet areas of genuine New England family affection and content. A certain alertness in the New England love-making, and an apprehension while in Italy that something tragic is immediately imminent, with many other engaging qualities of incident and style, will enlist the hearty interest of the many thousand readers this noteworthy novel is sure to have.

Bradford Torrey.

CONTENTS: My Real Estate; A Woodland Intimate; An Old Road; Confessions of a Birds'-Nest Hunter; A Green Mountain Cornfield; Behind the Eye; A November Chronicle; New England Winter; A Mountain-Side Ramble; A Pitch-Pine Meditation; Esoteric Peripateticism; Butterfly Psychology; Bashful Drummers.

The character of Mr. Torrey's book may be inferred from the motto which he has taken from Wordsworth for his title-page, — "Sunbeams, shadows, butterflies, and birds." In a prefatory note he says: "The writer of this little book has found so much pleasure in other men's woods and fields that he has come to look upon himself as in some sort the owner of them. Their lawful possessors will not begrudge him this feeling, he believes, nor take it amiss if he assumes, even in this public way, to hold a rambler's lease of their property." His readers will be delighted with the admirable use he has made of his lease.

Mrs. M. G. Van Rensselaer.

SIX PORTRAITS. By Mrs. M. G. VAN RENSSELAER, author of "Henry Hobson Richardson and his works," "American Etchers," etc. 1 vol. 16mo, $1.25.

Mrs. Van Rensselaer is generally recognized as one of the wisest and most judicious, as well as most interesting, of American writers on subjects relating to art and architecture. Her monograph on the great architect Richardson is peculiarly discriminating and adequate. Under the title "Six Portraits," she has collected into a tasteful volume papers of positive value on Luca Della Robbia, Correggio, William Blake, Corot, George Fuller, and Winslow Homer. Mrs. Van Rensselaer throws herself so completely into the spirit of the work she criticises, that each sketch is not only sympathetic, but written with a full grasp of her subject.

Julius H. Ward.

THE CHURCH IN MODERN SOCIETY. By Rev. Julius H. WARD.

This volume is a suggestive study of the part which the Christian Church has had in the institutional development of society, and of the position which it occupies and the work that lies before it, if it is to guide comprehensively and practically the social factors of modern life and keep them within its control. It is neither a denominational nor a speculative statement, but a candid discussion of questions which are in the air as they are regarded by those most conversant with them and most in sympathy with the trend of things. Mr. Ward has been a constant student of religious and social questions, and the aim of his book is to show how the Christian Church can be brought into closer contact with the whole of present life.

Harrison Weir.

OUR CATS AND ALL ABOUT THEM; their Varieties, Habits, and Management; and, for Show, their Points of Excellence and Beauty. By HARRISON WEIR. With Portrait, and many Illustrations by the Author. I vol. 8vo.

Mr. Harrison Weir is well known as standing at the head of animal draughtsmen in England. He is also an enthusiast in regard to cats, and his book is written with admirable fullness of knowledge, is very readable, and is beautifully illustrated. It tells all about the English wild cat, cat proverbs, cat folk-lore, all words including the word cat, the diseases of cats; signs, games, and superstitions associated with cats; and, by its fund of information and its attractive illustrations, it will appeal to all cat-lovers.

Kate Douglas Wiggin.

A SUMMER IN A CAÑON. A California Story for Girls and Boys. By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN, author of "The Birds' Christmas Carol" and "The Story of Patsy." With Illustrations by Frank T. Merrill.

Those who have read Mrs. Wiggin's two books need no other assurance that this new story is one that must be read. Her vivacity, freshness, exuberance of spirits, and frequent flashes of humor make her stories irresistible; and her sympathy, tenderness, and profound humaneness add an indescribable charm. Her new book has its scene in California and its season in summer, but it will be read with delight in all seasons and wherever the English language is known.

New Books and Recent Publications.

A CENTURY OF AMERICAN LITERATURE.

Benjamin Franklin to James Russell Lowell. Selections from a hundred authors. (Chronologically arranged, with dates of births and deaths, index, and table of contents.) Chosen and arranged by HUNTINGTON SMITH. 12mo, 400 pp., cloth, $1.75; half calf, $2.50.

This comprehensive book has been prepared with special reference to use in the class-room. As a reader it is unique. The selections are unhackneyed. Taken from American authors, and arranged chronologically, they illustrate in a most attractive manner the development of American literature during the first century of its existence. In mechanical make-up as well as literary ment this is an ideal text-book.

A HISTORY OF FRANCE.

By Victor Duruy, Member of the French Academy. Abridged and translated from the seventeenth French edition, by Mrs. M. CAREY, with an introductory notice, and a continuation to the year 1889, by J. Franklin Jameson, Ph.D., Professor of History in Brown University. With twelve maps. 12mo, 700 pp., cloth, $2.00; half calf, $4.00.

This famous work is now made accessible to the American public by an abridged translation. It presents in one compact volume a readable account of the events of French history with all the author's luminous generalizations and a sufficient abundance of details.

By arrangements with the publishers of the French edition the translation is accompanied with the same excellent series of historical maps as in the original work.

As a text-book for the class-room or for the private library it is a most valuable and important addition to the literature of the subject.

WAR AND PEACE.

By Count Lyor N. Tolstol. Authorized translation from the Russian by NATHAN HASKELL DOLE. 2 vols., 12mo, cloth, $3.00; 4 vols., 12mo, gilt top, paper labels,

As Count Tolstoi's other masterpiece, "Anna Karénina," is unique in social, philosophical fiction, so "War and Peace" stands by itself in historical fiction. It is a panorama which, passing before the eyes, brings up vivid scenes from public and private life in Russia at the beginning of this century. Emperors and peasants, princes and soldiers, battlefields and ball-rooms, battues and debauches, tender home scenes and deadly duels, fill the vast painting. And while the attention is compelled by these unprecedented pictures, a triple love-story is gradually unfolded and the whole is dominated by Count Tolstoi's wonderful elaboration of its theory of fatalism in history. This is the first complete translation into English from the original Russian and contains many interesting details never before published.

The translator has added a chapter by chapter résumé of the work and a list of the principal characters of the story. With the addition of "War and Peace" we are able to furnish a substantially complete edition of Count story. With the

JED.

A Boy's Adventures in the Army of "'61-'65." By WARREN LEE Goss, author of "A Soldier's Story of Life in Andersonville Prison," "Recollections of a Private," in Century Magasine. Fully illustrated. 12mo, $1.50.

This book is aptly characterized as "A Story of Battle and Prison, of Peril and Escape." Mr. Goss took an active part in the great War of the Rebellion. He participated in the fierce battles which he so graphically describes, and he is one of the few survivors of those terrible prisons, the account of which surpasses fiction. "Jed" is one of the freshest, healthiest books for boys that have been brought out in America. Aside from its keenly interesting descriptions, which are filled with a racy humor, it has a historical value almost unsurpassed. No American boy should fail to find in this excellent story inspiration for greater manliness and for truer pride in his native land.

A DICTIONARY OF PROSE QUOTATIONS.

By Anna L. Ward. Crown 8vo, cloth, bevelled boards, $2.00; half calf, $4.00.

This is a companion volume to Miss Ward's "Dictionary of Quotations from the Poets." It is arranged on the same general principle, and contains upwards of six thousand short and pithy apothegms placed under the head of general subjects in alphabetical order. A complete index makes the volume still more convenient for handy reference, and a mass of biographical material adds to its value.

CONVENIENT HOUSES AND HOW TO BUILD THEM.

By Louis H. Gibson, Architect, comprising a large variety of plans, photographic designs, and artistic interiors and exteriors of Ideal Homes, varying in cost from $10,000 to $10,000. Bound in cloth. $2.50.

Mr. Gibson is a practical architect, who believes that, over and above the beauty and symmetry of exterior conditions, the interior arrangement of houses, and especially housekeeping conveniences, should command attention. His manual, admirably Illustrated and a model of clearness, is quite unique in its plan. He forms a sort of partnership between architect and housewife. Having come to a complete understanding of what is wanted in kitchen and cellar, parlor, dining-room and chamber, he makes what he calls a journey through the house. Then he offers fifty convenient plans, and finally in a number of interesting chapters shows what practical house-building is and how best to start and pay for a house. The work is admirably printed and handsomely illustrated.

FAMOUS MEN OF SCIENCE.

By SARAH K. BOLTON, author of "Poor Boys Who Became Famous," etc. With portraits of Galileo, Newton, Cuvier, Audubon, Humboldt, Agassiz, Buckland, and others. 12mo. $1.50.

Mrs. Bolton's simple, unaffected style and her skill in illustrating the salient traits of character of those of whom she writes make her volumes always interesting, stimulating, and attractive to the young. This new volume from her per falls no whit behind the others of the same series, either in subject-matter or in style.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Pictures of the Reign of Terror. By Lydia Hoyt Farmer, author of "Boys, Book of Famous Rulers," etc. Fully illustrated. 12mo. $1.50.

Mrs. Farmer has discovered a sympathetic subject in the History of the French Revolution. She has proceeded on a somewhat new and original plan. She has selected from many distinguished and eloquent narratives of the Reign of Terror passages which give the most vivid pictures of those wonderful events, and woven them into a continuous story with great skill and ability. Her own florid, impassioned, and graphic style gives the book a character of its own, and assures it immediate popularity.

WALKS ABROAD OF TWO YOUNG NATURALISTS.

From the French of Charles Beaugrand, by DAVID SHARP, M.B., F.L.S., F.Z.S., President of Entomological Society. London. Fully illustrated. 8vo. $2.00.

'The expression in the title "Walks Abroad" may be taken in two significations, since the walks are done in France. The story is simple and wholesome, and used mainly to convey the information and instruction which are the chief objects of the book; but they are conveyed with true French humor and delicacy, and it is therefore thoroughly readable, especially in Professor Sharp's admirable translation. It ought to be on every boy's bookshelf.

ROLF AND HIS FRIENDS.

By J A K, author of "Birchwood," "Fitch Club," etc. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.25.

The accomplished and warm-hearted woman who writes under the cabalistic letters JAK has a good lesson to teach in her latest volume. It is this: that a healthly boy needs sympathy and encouragement as well as good firm discipline, and that ability to learn is not found alone under a white skin. The story is enlivened with many bright incidents, and will be sure to interest all readers.

VICTOR HUGO'S NOVELS.

Library Edition. Over 600 full-page illustrations. Calendered paper. 8 vols., 12mo, cloth, gilt top (sold only in sets), $15.00.

In this edition fifteen volumes of Victor Hugo's masterpieces of fiction are condensed into eight with a correspondng condensation of price. The printing is just as good, the illustrations are the same and as numerous as in the more expensive edition; the blinding is neat and attractive; the paper is a little lighter. This edition will satisfy those who desire a medium-priced set of Hugo's works for holiday gifts or library use.

AD LUCEM.

Arranged by MARY LLOYD. Selections of Prose and Poetry for suffering ones. Parti-colored cloth, gilt top, 18mo, $1.00; seal leather, flexible, $1.75.

A delicate and unobtrusive sympathy governed the compiler of the exquisite selections in this dainty little volume. They truly point towards the light.

ASTOR LIBRARY OF STANDARD FICTION.

141 volumes. Bound in half Russia leather, with marbled edges and marbled paper sides, and full gilt back. 12mo, per volume, $1.00.

This edition of standard ramos, in new and attractive style, meets the existing demand for popular books in suitable bindings for family and school libraries or holiday gifts, at reasonable prices.

This extraordinary collection of good novels contains many of the best works of Sir Walter Scott, Thomas Carlyle, De Quincey, Dickens, Bulwer-Lytton, George Eliot, Thackens, Kingsley William Black, Dumas, Valdés, Cooper, Jules Verne, Mrs. Alexandes, and others. The volumes represent a high order of literature, and are cheap. attractive, and durable.

TALKS ABOUT A FINE ART.

By Elizabeth Glover. Booklet, souvenir style, 30 cents.

THE CHILDREN'S WING.

By ELIZABETH GLOVER. Booklet, souvenir style, 30 cents.

The piquant little dressmaker who is the central character in these two booklets is an original character in fiction. And her quaint, wise sayings appeal irresistibly to the heart and reason. Every parent in this land should read, learn, and inwardly digest the lessons so charmingly offered.

METZEROTT-SHOEMAKER.

A Novel. 12mo, $1.50.

It is not often that a novel of such depth, power, originality, genius, as Metzerott—Shoemaker is given to the world. It may be that it would never have been conceived had it not been for "Robert Elsmere" and "Looking Backward," and yet these two famous stories are written as it were in water, while "Metzerott—Shoemaker" bears every evidence of being written in heart's-blood. It is a vivid picture of life among men and women who labor, suffer, and think. It presents an ideal which is no fancy sketch like "Looking Backward," but realizable, actual, inspiring.

"Metzerott—Shoemaker" promises to be the novel of the year.

CAMBRIDGE BOOK OF POETRY AND SONG.

Selected from English and American authors. Collected and edited by Char-LOTTE F. BATES, of Cambridge, compiler of "The Longfellow Birthday-Book," "Seven Voices of Sympathy," etc. New and revised edition, with 40 fac-simile poems in autograph, and 32 full-page illustrations, from original designs. Over 900 pp., royal 8vo, gilt edges. $5.00; full levant, gilt, $10.00; tree calf, gilt, $10.00.

No care or expense has been spared in perfecting this opulent anthology, which easily takes the lead of all similar ctions of poetry. The fac-simile poems and autographs form a most interesting and valuable feature. As a giftcollections of poetry.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

MEMOIRS OF NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

By Louis Antoine Fauvelet de Bourrienne, his private secretary. Edited by Col. R. W. Phipps. Latest American edition, with 34 full-page portraits and other illustrations, and a complete index, found only in this edition. 1 vols., 12mo, cloth, plain, $5.00; cloth, gilt top, $6.00; half calf, $10.00; half levant morocco, $15.00.

The perennial interest in Napoleon the Great has entirely justified the publication of this excellent edition of Bourrienne's memoirs. No one can pretend to an intelligent estimate of the man without becoming acquainted with him through the medium of his favorite secretary. The occasional misinterpretations of his motives or unjust criticisms upon his acts are rectified by his English editor, who has added much valuable material. The edition is beautifully printed and attractively bound, and the price brings it within the reach of all.

CECIL'S KNIGHT.

By E. B. Hollis. 12mo, $1.25.

Shows the teneficent influence upon a lad's life of the companionship and friendship of an un; elfish Christian young woman.

HER MAJESTY'S TOWER.

By W. HEPWORTH DIXON. A History of the Tower of London. From the seventh London edition. Complete in one volume. 12mo, with 47 illustrations, $2.00; half calf, $4.00.

How much of English history centres about the massive pile of the Tower of London! Mr. Dixon is a sympathetic narrator, and has found a marvellous mass of fascinating material. This new edition, in one volume, of his standard work will meet with a warm welcome among many readers.

IMPRESSIONS OF RUSSIA.

By GEORG BRANDES, author of "Eminent Authors of the Nineteenth Century."

Translated from the Danish by S. C. EASTMAN. 12mo. cloth. $1.25.

Russia has never had a shrewder observer in her borders than Dr. Brandes of Copenhagen or (Kjobenhavn, as they persist in spelling it in Denmark). He was not many months there, but his little book is the outcome of many miles of travel, many hours of conversation with her distinguished men, and of much power of concentration. It is a revelation. Mr. Eastman's translation was made under the author's supervision and sanction, and is a distinct addition to our literature of the subject.

SCOTCH CAPS.

By J A K, author of "Birchwood," "Fitch Club," etc. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.25.

A clever, bright story of school life.

HER ONLY BROTHER.

By W. HEIMBURG. Translated from the German by JEAN W. WYLIE. 12mo, cloth, $1.25; paper covers, 50 cents.

An admirable example of the best sort of German domestic fiction true, dramatic, fresh, bright, and whole-some.

RED CARL.

From the German of J. J. MESSMER. 12mo, $1.25.

Pictures in exquisite style the eventful lives of a colony of German emigrants, and the effects of labor movements upon earnest men and women.

A HAPPY FIND.

By Mme. Gagnebin. Translated from the French by Miss E. V. Lee. 12mo, cloth, $1.25; paper covers, 50 cents.

This book is a happy example of what French fiction can do when it turns its attention to simple, unambitious plots and has a lofty spiritual aim. It is full of exquisite pictures of character and nature, and its natural pathos is tempered with a delicate sense of humor.

POLISHED STONES AND SHARPENED ARROWS.

By C. W. Bibb. A manual for Christian Workers. Being a collection of some four or five hundred Scripture texts, giving under each one or more apposite and appropriate illustrative anecdotes, enforcing the moral truth conveyed in each heading. Cloth, 12mo, $1.25.

An invaluable repository of illustration and anecdote for preachers and Sunday-school teachers as well as for use at home.

PAYING THE PENALTY, AND OTHER STORIES.

By Charles Gibbon, George Manville Fenn, Clive Phillips-Wolley, Helen Shipton, Katharine S. Macquoid. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper covers, 50 cents.

THREE TIMES TRIED, AND OTHER STORIES.

By B. L. FARJEON, GRANT ALLEN, J. MACLAREN COBBAN, Mrs. J. H. RIDDELL, AUSTIN PEMBER, GEORGE MANVILLE FENN. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper covers, 50 cents.

Two volumes of semi-sensational short stories by leading English novelists. The sensational element is so re strained within artistic limits, and the general effect of each story is so wholesome that under the auspices of the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge, which first published them seriatim, they attained an aggregate sale of almost a million and a half copies.

a very comprehensive one, ranging in price from 25 cents to $2.00, and sufficiently diversified to suit all tastes. Wide as was the approval with which our last year's books met ("all sold out" being the verdict of nearly all the dealers), we anticipate an even more general success for these new books. them are by the same artists, and both they and ourselves have had the advantage of another year of experience in this branch of art. We believe that the trade are quite unanimous in the verdict that our color-books for children are "the best," "sell the best," and are the most value for the price. Is there any reason why a dealer, no matter where located, should not place these books before his customers?

FINE ART CHILDREN'S BOOKS.

By the Best Artists and Authors.

Printed in Color and Monotint by ERNEST NISTER, Nuremberg

WHILE CHRISTMAS COMES and goes, and while the present custom of interchanging gifts on this anniversary continues, people will ransack the booksellers' counters for novelties—and in these days stock must be new and novel to sell quickly.

The demand for something new and fresh has led to the production of some beautiful little shaped goods.

They are in many cases cheaper than cards, and as souvenirs they possess obvious advantages.

The greater the element of novelty in books of this kind, the greater will, of course, be their popularity. In this line we have "A Round Robin," "Owld Friends," "Pansy Pictures," "Jingles" (shaped tambourine), "The Log-Book," all shaped goods and at only 25 cents each. There is also a line of shaped goods at a retail price of ten cents only; others at fifteen cents.

As we have many over one hundred titles new this season, we cannot go on explaining and describing them within the limit of this single advertisement, but we desire to impress upon the trade—stationers as well as booksellers—the fact that ours is a line that any dealer can afford to spread all over his holiday counters, and that no dealer can afford to be without, if he wishes, as presumably all do, to do a profitable Christmas trade. It will be noticed that we have printed some electros with this advertisement. To dealers who design making an attractive catalogue, we shall be pleased to loan some of our advertising cuts with which to embellish such a catalogue.

We have this fine line of books to sell and all of the live jobbers have them. Do not load yourselves up, booksellers, with things in which there is no go, but examine our samples, place your orders, get your goods—SELL THEM.

NEW EDITIONS OF

W. H. H. MURRAY'S FAMOUS BOOKS.

DAYLIGHT LAND.

The Experiences, Incidents, and Adventures, Humorous and Otherwise, which befell Judge John Doe, Tourist, of San Francisco; Mr. CEPHAS PEPPERELL, Capitalist, of Boston; Colonel Goffe, the Man from New Hampshire, and divers others, in their Parlor-car excursions over Prairie and Mountain; as recorded and set forth by W. H. H. MURRAY.

Superbly illustrated with 150 engravings from paintings by J. D. Woodward, J. Carter Beard, C. Copeland, C. Broughton, C. H. Johnson, J. C. Durand, and other artists, 8vo, 350 pages. Unique paper covers, $2.50. Cloth, $3.50; cloth, extra gilt, $4.00.

The Boston Herald says: "Mr. Murray is on his old stamping-ground in this sumptuous volume, and delights the thousands who read his book on the Adirondacks with new pictures of outdoor life and the scenery of the woods and mountains. In a single volume such a revelation of the unexplored part of North America has never before been made, and you feel as if you were travelling through a new world.

"The pictures are presented in color, and are a novelty in bookmaking. They have delicacy of tint, and give a far better idea of landscapes or mountains than the usual bare woodcut.

"Its fun is irresistible, and all through it there are patches of living descriptions that cannot be surpassed.

"Taken altogether the book will add to Mr. Murray's reputation and will win a fame for the artist. It gives great credit to all who have had a hand in it. It speaks for itself."

HOW DEACON TUBMAN AND PARSON WHITNEY KEPT NEW YEAR'S, AND OTHER STORIES.

Illustrated. 12mo, $1.25.

Deacon Tubman, a jolly, fat, good-natured man, is presented with a woollen night-cap on New Year's morning by his housekeeper, "a typical spinster not overburdened with fat." This so rejoices the Deacon that he is possessed to make others happy, goes to call upon his pastor and makes him leave his books and spend the day skating, aleighing, and driving with his parishioners.

STORY THE KEG TOLD ME. AND THE STORY OF THE MAN WHO DIDN'T KNOW MUCH.

"Two admirable stories by W. H. H. Murray, in both which appears John Norton, the trapper, a character that promises to become as much of a favorite as is the hero of the Leather Stocking novels. These stories have a bracing outdoor freshuess and a delightfully crisp realism; are vigorous in tone, and strong and picturesque in the relation. Taken altogether they may be pronounced the most artistic of Mr. Murray's excursions into the realm of fiction, and fascinating reading generally."—Saturday Evening Gazette.

"Mr. Murray is an expert in the art of character drawing; he can manipulate humor and pathos with equal facility. . . . No one will gainsay their freshness and individuality."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

ADIRONDACK ADVENTURES.

"In the Wilderness; or, Camp Life in the Adirondacks." Illustrated. 12mo, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1.25.

"In the 'Adventures in the Wilderness,' W. H. H. Murray strikes the happy hunting-ground, which long ago earned for him the popular title, 'Adirondack Murray,' and here, as in his other books, he fairly revels in the stirring incident, lively and faithful conception of character, and the powerful but delightful description of natural scenery, which have already given his work an enviable and lasting place in American literature." — Naskville American.

ADIRONDACK TALES.

Containing "John Norton's Christmas," "Henry Herbert's Thanksgiving," "A Strange Visitor," "Lost in the Woods," "A Jolly Camp," "Was it Suicide?" "The Gambler's Death," "The Old Beggar's Dog," "The Ball," "Who Was He?" Illustrated. 12mo, 300 pages, $1.25.

Short stories in Mr. Murray's best vein-humorous, pathetic, full of the spirit of the woods.

New Publications for 1889.

A Kempis. The Imitation of Christ. By Thomas & Kempis. A new translation. Elegant edition, with artistic borders and 20 photogravure steel-plate illustrations, by the Gebbie & Husson Co., Limited, selected chiefly from the old masters in the Gallery of the Louvre. 8vo, cloth, gilt extra, $4.00; mor. extra, gilt edges, $6.50; full polished calf, $7.50.

The illustrations by the old masters are in the true spirit of holiness, and this beautiful volume has been finished in an artistic manner throughout.

Babylon Electrified. The history of an expedition undertaken to restore Ancient Babylon by the power of Electricity, and how it resulted. By A. BLEUNARD, Doctor of Science. Translated by Frank Linstow White. Profusely illustrated with original engravings by Monta-In one handsome volume, 8vo, cloth, gilt extra, $2.50.

This translation of a new author whose "Babylon Electrified" has had a largewale in Europe, may be best described as a Scientific Romance. There is a very interesting love-story running through the narrative, but the most important feature of the work is the marvel of applied electricity. At times the style reminds us of Jules Verne, but M. Bleunand is not one who deals with impossibilities, but measures all his statements and results with scientific care; his situations, nevertheless, are frequently marvellous, and will, without doubt, open the eyes of many readers, in a pleasant way, to the results that mankind may soon expect from Electricity harnessed by Science.

Columbus. Christopher Columbus and the Discovery of the New World. By the Marquis de Belloy. Finely illustrated with 8 etchings and photogravures and fifty-one engravings on wood, designed and engraved by Leopold Flameng and others. In one handsome volume, 8vo, cloth, gilt extra, $3.00.

This work, published in Parls a few years ago, was written for the instruction and pleasure of his nephew, by the Marquis DB Bellow. The book is in an easy and simple style, and when published became so popular, that it immediately took rank as one of the modern French classics, and has since been translated into nearly every modern Buropean language. Both historically and artistically it has been pronounced the best history of the voyages of Columbus that has ever been produced. Published in its present popular form it is expected to have a largely increased demand.

- Compendium and Concordance to Shakespeare. Containing a historical summary, a compendium of each play, and an account of the plot and characters of each play. The Concordance embodies all the familiar phrases most currently quoted, arranged in alphabetical order. Also a separate concordance or index of all the characters represented in the plays, with 37 outline illustrations by HOWARD, being uniform with the "Dr. Johnson" edition. I vol., 12mo, cloth, gilt, $1.50.
- Crowquill (Alfred Henry Forrester). The Laughing Philosopher. Middle of the Nineteenth Century. Edited by ALFRED CROWQUILL. With 140 illustrations, by Crowquill, Cruikshank, and John Leech. 12mo, cloth extra, $1.25.

Rare fun and pleasant philosophy, treating of Medicine, Law, Smoking, Drinking, Sleeping, Marriage, Idleness, Racing, Oratory, Fighting, The Feelings, Punning, etc.

- Character Sketches from Dickens. (First Series.) By F. BARNARD. Dickens. Containing 12 photogravures. India proofs, $5.00.
- Character Sketches from Dickens. (Second Series.) By various artists. 12 photogravures. India proof, $5.00.
- Dog (The)—Its Management and Diseases. By Prof. J. Woodroffe Hill. Illustrated with 10 photogravures of the champion and prize dogs of to-day, and numerous woodengravings. New Edition revised to date. 8vo, cloth extra, $3.00.

This volume treats very fully and clearly of all the diseases of dogs, and is now the acknowledged text-book used in the Veterinary College of London, England, and other places.

- Dumas (Alexander). The Lady with the Camellias. A new translation. With a new preface by the author, embellished with thirty-nine photogravure illustrations by ALBERT LYNCH. In one handsome volume. 8vo, cloth, gilt extra, $3.75.
- Francillon (R. E.). Romances of the Law. With a frontispiece by H. D. Friston. 12mo, cloth extra, $1.00.

The twelve tales comprised in the book bring out in broad relief the many peculiarities of the English law, and are written in a highly entertaining manner, keeping the interest up from beginning to end. Such tales as "Touchand-go with a Great Estate," "A Most Remarkable Will," "A Circumstantial Puzzle," "Only Ten Minutes." "Hall a Minute Late," "A Cool Hand," "How I Became a Murderer," are written with great power, and will be read with pleasure more than once.

Houssaye (Arsene). Seven Years at the Comedie Francais. In one handsome volume. 8vo, cloth, gilt, $6.00. Illustrated with twelve fine photogravures of eminent French actors and actresses (by the GEBBIE & Husson Co., Limited), $7.50.

Homer. A Burlesque Translation of Homer in Verse. By Thomas Bridges. An entirely new and modified edition. Illustrated with all the original humorous engravings. 8vo, cloth extra, $3.00.

This is a reprint of one of the most humorous productions of the last century; being somewhat modified in language so as to adapt it to readers of the present time. Bridges in his book has kept close to the text of Homer, but burlesqued it in such a way that humor abounds in every line. The illustrations are an exact fac-simile of the original Rowlandson edition, and give an antique appearance to the book, the original of which is now very scarce and commands a high orice.

Hueffer (F.). Half a Century of Music in England. By Francis Hueffer, author of "The Troubadours," "Biographies of Great Musicians," "Italian and Other Studies," etc. 8vo, cloth extra, $2.50.

The Times (London) of April 27, 1889, in an exhaustive review of nearly two columns and a half, remarks incidentally: "As far as the work now under consideration is concerned, one consoling reflection will mingle with the regret universally felt at this sudden and unexpected close of a brilliant career; that had the proposed history been completed, the chapters musical readers would have been almost sure to turn to with the liveliest interest are precisely those contained in the volume now before us—Wagner, Liszt, and Berlioz."

Indian Life (Hindu Muhammadan), Religious and Social. By John Campbell Oman, Professor in the Government College of Lahore. 8vo, cloth, gilt extra, $1.75.

The Saturday Review of April 8, 1889, in a highly interesting review of two columns and a half, concludes as follows: "Altogether Mr. Oman has produced a neat volume in which intelligent observation is illustrated and not overweighted by apt quotation and scholarly research."

Macaulay (Dr.). Wonderful Stories of Daring, Peril, and Adventure. By Dr. James Macaulay, editor of the Leisure Hour, etc., etc. Beautifully illustrated with full-page engravings by best artists. 8vo, cloth, gilt extra, gilt edges, $1.75.

Besides being very entertaining, this volume is full of instruction for both young and old.

"We are always ready to welcome instructive works by Mr. Macaulay."-Times.

Marshall (Emma). Our Own Picture-Book of Many Places and Many People. Illustrated with upwards of 150 engravings by several popular artists. 4to, cloth, gilt and in colors, $1.75.

This new book by the popular author of "Houses on Wheels," etc., etc., is what most of the friends of the little folks will be pleased to find; the descriptions of the pictures being written in that chatty and personal style that when read will appear as if spoken, and save many a hunt for a "Story." Whatever Miss Marshall writes is always entertaining.

THE DR. JOHNSON EDITION.

Shakespeare's Complete Works. With biographical introduction, and an additional volume containing a complete compendium of each play, historical summary, and account of the plot and characters of each play. With portrait. 7 vols., 12mo, cloth, gilt, $7.00; half calf, gilt extra, $14.00.

A NEW CHILD'S FAVORITE.

Story-Telling (The) Album for Our Boys and Girls. Beautifully illustrated on every page with 205 large, fine engravings by some of the best modern illustrators for the young. 4to, cloth, gilt extra and in colors, gilt edges, $2.50.

This new juvenile will be found of increasing interest by the little folks. The pictures are large and beautiful and the stories are written in that easy and natural manner that always delight the young. The binding is a rich harmony of gold and color.

- Taine's History of English Literature. Translated by HENRY VAN LAUN. Best English library edition. 4 vols., 8vo, cloth, $7.50; half calf or half morocco extra, $15.00.
- Turner (F. C.). A Short History of Art. By Francis C. Turner, B.A. Illustrated by copies of some of the most famous Paintings and Sculptures. New edition. Fully illustrated, with numerous full-page plates and woodcuts. Large 8vo, half bound, gilt top (rox-burghe), $3.25.

"A clear and succinct account of the art of various nations. Sure of a wide welcome. He carries us successfully through the Indian, Egyptian, Persian, Assyrian, Greek, Roman, Italian, Spanish, Flemish, Dutch, French, and English schools. He is especially full upon the art of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, and the illustrations which accompany the work will be helpful to students."—Times.

White (Rev. Gilbert). The Natural History and Antiquities of Selborne. Thoroughly revised, with notes by J. E. HARTING, F.L.S., F.Z.S. New edition, with ten letters not included in any other edition. Profusely illustrated with the famous engravings by Brwick, Harvey, and others. In one handsome vol., 8vo, cloth, gilt extra, gilt edges, $3.50.

"If any apology be deemed necessary for the appearance of a new edition of one of the most delightful books in the English language, the reader need only be reminded of the physical changes which have taken place since Gilbert White's day in the district of which he wrote, and of the vast additions which are daily being made to our knowledge in almost every branch of Natural History."—Extract from Editor's Preface.

PARTIAL LIST OF

Fleming H. Revell's New Publications.

The Missionary Year-Book. Containing Historical and Statistical Accounts of the Principal Protestant Missionary Societies in America, Great Britain, and the Continent of Europe. 16mo, cloth, $1.25.

The American edition, edited by Rev. J. T. Gracey, D.D., of Buffalo, embraces about 400 pages, and contains maps of India, China, Japan, Burmah, and Siam; also a language map of India, and comparative diagrams illustrating areas, population, and progress of Mission work.

Garenganze; or, Seven Years' Pioneer Missionary Work in Central Africa. FRED S. ARNOT. Introduction by Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D.D. Numerous illustrations, 8vo. cloth, $1.25.

A work of thrilling interest. The author's two trips across Africa, entirely unarmed and unattended except by the local and constantly changing carriers, and in such marked contrast with many modern adventurers, strongly impress one to ask if another Livingstone has not appeared among us.

In the Far East—China Illustrated. Letters from GERALDINE GUINNESS in China, edited by her sister, with introduction by Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D. Very fully illustrated. 4to, cloth, $1.00.

The World's Benefactors. (Series.) In this series it is proposed to issue a number of biographies of eminent men, whose work is universally acknowledged as uplifting, and the record of whose lives cannot but be of inspiration to the young. Each volume will be very fully illustrated and attractively bound. The following are ready:

Henry M. Stanley. The African Explorer. By ARTHUR MONTEFIORE, F.R.G.S. 75 cents. John Bright. The Man of the People. By Jesse Page. 75 cents. David Livingstone. Pioneer of the Dark Continent. 75 cents.

Fully illustrated. 12mo, 16o pages, Cloth Popular Missionary Biographies. extra, 75 cents each.

NEW VOLUMES.

James Calvert; or, From Dark to Dawn in Fiji. (In press.) John Williams, the Martyr of Erromanga. By Rev. JAMES J. ELLIS. (In press.)

Thomas J. Comber, Pioneer to the Congo. By JOHN B. MYERS. Samuel Crowther, Bishop of the Niger. By JESSE PAGE.

Missionary Ladies in Foreign Lands. By Mrs. E. R. PILMER.

inspire, we can conceive of no better plan to spread the missionary spirit than the multiplying of such biographies; and we would specially commend this series to those who have the management of libraries and selection of prizes in our Sunday-schools." Rev. C. H. Spurgeon writes: "Crowded with facts that both interest and

From The Missionary Herald: "We commended this series in our last issue, and a further examination leads us to renew our commendation, and to wrette placing of this series of missionary books in all our Sabbath-school libraries. These books are handsomely printed and bound, and are beautifully illustrated."

Attractive Truths in Lesson and Story. By Mrs. A. M. SCUDDER, with introduction by Rev. F. E. Clarke, President Y. P. S. C. E. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

A series of outline lessons with illustrative stories for Junior Christian Endeavor Societies, for children's meetings, and for home teaching.

For Sabbath-Schools, Mission Bands, Concerts, Easter, Chil-Recitation Poems. dren's Day, Harvest Homes, Christmas, and other Festivals, etc., etc. By Mrs. HANNAH MORE KOHAUS. 16mo, 144 pages, boards, 50 cents.

The Story of Jesus for Little Children. By Mrs. G. E. Morton, 12mo, elegant cloth, gold and colored ink dies, $1.00.

In this volume the aim of the author has been to let the Story of Jesus tell its own exquisite tale in simple words suitable to the youngest. The style of the author is fascinating, while the numerous illustrations make the volume exceedingly attractive.

CHILDREN'S TOY-BOOKS.

The Gingerbread Man. By J. H. P. Illustrated in colors, by J. Sinclair. long 4to, 35 cents.

The Enchanted Shirt. By Col. John HAY. Illustrated in colors by J. Sinclair.

Oblong 4to, 35 cents.

These two amusing books for the little folks have been gotten up in most unique style of design and colors, quite in keeping with their sprightly and well-told stories.

WHAT TO DO IN ACCIDENTS AND SUDDEN ILLNESS

TILL THE DOCTOR COMES.

By GLENTWORTH R. BUTLER, A. M., M. D., Physician to St. Mary's, St. John's, and the Methodist Episcopal Hoppitals, Brooklyn, N. Y., etc. It is adapted as a text-book for societies which make the diffusion of this branch of knowledge their sole aim, for schools, etc., but is admirably suited for everybedy's use. It gives elementary descriptions of the body and its functions, followed by rules and methods to be applied in such cases as bleeding, fest-wounds, poisonous bites, fractures and sprains; burns, scalds, and frost-bites; drowning and suffocation; foreign bodies in throat, nose, or eye; convulsions and croup; unconsciousness and swoon; poisoning from acids, alkalies, areaic, lodine, lead, mercury, opium, phosphorus, etc. It also tells how to prepare bandages and transport the sick and isjured. The low price of the book places it within the reach of all.

12mo, 102 pp. Price, Fifty Cents.

NEW EDITION READY.

A GREAT SOCIAL PROBLEM DISCUSSED.

By H. T. Pomerov, M.D., of Boston. A prefatory note by Thomas A. Emmett, M.D., LL.D., and an introduction by Rev. J. T. Durvea, D.D., of Boston. With an appendix showing the laws of most of the States, concerning certain forms of crime.

12mo, Cloth, 190 pp. Price, One Dollar.

The author says: "I feel it my duty to send out this warning in regard to what I consider the first and greatest danger of our family and national life. I believe the prevention or destruction of unborn human life to be, parex-cellence, THE American sin, and that, if not checked, it will sooner or later be our calamity."

Chicago Journal says: "To the earnest man and woman everywhere, who has watched the reckless manner in which marrages are contracted, the wicked way in which the responsibilities are shifted and ignored, and the slow and sure defilement of society because the criminal classes are allowed to propagate their vile species, while Christian households and moral parents ignore their duty to this and to the next world, this book is almost like a voice from Heaven."

BEAUTIPULLY ILLUSTRATED GIFT-RAAKE

Hearthorne's Logends of the Province House. The four tales by Hawthorns, the scenes of which are laid in the famous old Province House, entitled Howe's Masquerade. Edward Randolph's Portrait, Lady Rleanore's Mantle, Old Esther Dudley, have been selected by Mr. Frank T. Merrill for his most ambitious illustrations. That he has produced a work greatly superior to his "Mahogany Tree" or "Rip Van Winkle" is conceded by all who have seen his studies. The work is thoroughly illustrated with full-page plates and illustrations in the text. It is by far the finest illustrated book yet produced. Bound in a very attractive manner, size 9 x 12, $7.00; bound in the tree calf or morocco, $74.00. An edition of fifty copies has been made with larger plates, printed on Japanese paper and wider margins, which is sold only by subscription. $5.00.

The Burial of Moses. By Mrs. ALEXANDER. Illustrated by A. S. Cox. This grand poem has received very elaborate treatment at the hands of Mr. Cox, and makes a very pretentious and charming volume. Elegantly bound in cloth, $7.50.

GEMS OF THE POETS.

Price per vol.: In torchon, decorated by hand, and etalline lettering, $3.00; bound in cloth, $3.00; bound in full seal, $5.00.

Longfellow Gome. This is probably the most attractive souvenir of Mr. Longfellow that has been published. It is issued in the same style, and uniform with the Whittier Gems and Tennyson Gems. It contains extracts from his earlier and popular poems, and is illustrated by WM. Goodsich Bral, and has fourteen illustrations, six of which are etchings. Also contains a portrait of the poet.

Tenseyson Gems. A new souvenir of Tennyson, uniform with Whittier and Longfellow Gems. It is finely illustrated, and forms a very attractive gift-book. The illustrations are by Mr. Beal, one of the leading etchers of the country. It contains a fine portrait of Lord Tennyson, and is put up in the same unique and attractive style as its companions.

Whittier Gome. This beautiful souvenir of WHITTIER contains twelve designs illustrating his most popular poems, with extracts from the same. The book is designed by the very popular artist, Mr. L. K. HARLOW, and exhibits his best work. In addition to the twelve illustrations by Mr. HARLOW, a very fine etched portrait of the poet is given. The cover is entirely unique, and is decorated by hand, and lettered in metalline.

BEACON-LIGHT TEXT-BOOKS.

Price per vol.: Bound in cloth, $2.00; bound in ivorine covers, $2.00; beautifully lithographed covers, $1.50; in seal, $3.00.

The Everlasting Hills. This new volume in the Beacon-Light Series is by Louis K. Harlow. This and its companion, "Living Waters," also issued this year, form the most attractive volumes in the series It contains thirty-one beautifully illustrated texts, with decorated cover. Size 5½ x 6½. In box.

Living Waters. A new volume in this very attractive series of text-books. It is illustrated by Louis K. HARLOW, and the texts have been compiled by Alice L. Williams. It contains a page and illustrated text for each day of the month. Size 5½ x 6¾. In box.

IMPORTANT ART ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE GREAT EXHIBITION YEAR.

The growing appreciation and culture of art in this country having resulted in a steadily increased sale of the Magnificent Annual Volumes of "Salon" paintings produced by Messrs. Goupil & Co. of Paris for some years past, the publishers have been induced to issue this year a special edition in order to remove the only obstacle to a more general circulation for what is conceded to be the finest Art Annual of the Age.

By a special arrangement with Messrs. Goupil & Co.'s successors, we have secured the entire control of this English Text edition, as well as the exclusive sale of all copies of the French Text edition coming to this country.

The editions of the forthcoming Volume — which will contain one hundred PRIZE PAINTINGS from this the greatest exhibition ever known at the Paris Salon, reproduced in PHOTOGRAVURE from the originals by the unrivalled GOUPIL process — will be divided as follows:

WITH ENGLISH TEXT.

VELLUM EDITION with Text and Engravings on Vellum paper. $18.00

HOLLAND EDITION. Limited. Text and Engravings on Holland paper, each copy numbered. $20.00

WITH FRENCH TEXT.

VELLUM EDITION with Text and Engravings on Vellum paper. $18.00

HOLLAND EDITION. Limited. Text and Engravings on Holland paper, each copy numbered. $20.00

Each copy — in either of the above editions — will be bound in a handsome red cloth cover, with Palette design on side in gold and color.

It is expected that the work will be ready for delivery in October, and EARLY ORDERS are respectfully solicited.

For Sale by all booksellers, or sent postpaid on receipt of price, by the publishers,

NEW FRENCH BOOKS.

LES ANTONYMES DE LA LANGUE FRANCAISE.

By A. MUZZARRILI, M.A. The idea of the book is to exercise the student's mind and memory by giving him short sentences to which he must furnish similar sentences containing the opposite meaning. Instead of synonyms he has the antonymes to learn or think out for himself, and there is no doubt about the excellent drill such exercises afford. Thus, the work begins with short sentences like the following: "Le jour est clair." To this he has the body of the sentence to fill in with the opposite idea to the example, thus: "La nuit est obscure."

The exercises are progressive. They are short and simple at first, but as the student becomes familiar with the work he is led into more difficult sentences where not only the words but the opposite idea has to be expressed. The work has been carefully prepared and arranged by the author, and noted French authors are frequently quoted, so that the student at the same time he is exercising his talents on the antonymes, is becoming more or less familiar with the elever sayings of the French writers. Specimen pages on application.

PUBLISHED TO-DAY.

CHATA AND CHINITA.

A Novel By Mrs. Louise Palmer Heaven. Uniform in style with "Ramona," One vol... 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

An intensely interesting story, the scene of which is located in Mexico. While this story is not in any sense a rival of "Ramona" it is in many ways similar to that wonderful book. Its author lived for many years in Mexico, and while there improved the opportunity to acquire an insight into the life of that mysterious people, so hard to understand. From this opportunity has come "Chata and Chinita," of great interest but with true local color-

By Mrs. MALDEN. (Famous Women Series.) 16mo, cloth, $1.00.

" Mrs. Charles Malden has written a pleasant little book (all sensible books about Miss Austin are pleasant, and can hardly help being so), and this book is certainly not only sensible, but in parts acute,"-Sectator.

Ready October 1st.

LOUISA M. ALCOTT.

Her Life, Letters, and Journals. Edited by Mrs. Ednah D. Cheney. With portraits. view of the Alcott Home in Concord and facsimiles of her writing. In one volume of 400 pages, uniform with "Little Women." $1.50.

This volume might with truth be called a biography of the "Little Women," for through her letters and journals Mrs. Cheney has allowed Miss Alcott to tell her own story, which is largely a picture of the Alcott family, and it lays open the inner life of this favorite writer in a way sure to increase the interest and admiration in which she is universally held. Two new portraits of Miss Alcott are introduced, one taken at the time she went into the service of her country as a hospital nurse, the other when she was in the full maturity of her popular career.

"When he was within twenty yards I stooped down, and srasping Gumbo by the ankles from behind, lifted his legs from under him, making him fall forward on his hands. I ran him right at the lion, wheel-barrow fashion, the bewildered nigger instinctively putting one hand before the other before he knew what he was about. This brought us within a spring of the lion. I hurled his legs forward over his head with such force that when they struck the ground his body rose and he described a convulsive somersault. This carried him two lengths ahead of meinto the very jaws of the lion, if the latter had stayed"

LEE AND SHEPARD'S ANNOUNCEMENTS

BOSTON - 1889 - 1890

NEW FINE-ART PUBLICATIONS

IRENE E. JEROME'S NEW VOLUME

IN A FAIR COUNTRY

With 55 full-page original illustrations, engraved on wood, and printed under the direction of George T. Andrew With nearly one hundred pages of text, by Thomas Wentworth Higginson.

Elegantly bound in gold cloth, full gilt, gilt edges, $6.00; Turkey morocco, $15.00; tree calf, $15.00; English seal style, $10.00

A PERFECT UNION OF ART AND LITERATURE

VER the clear-cut thoughts of a modern master of classic essay, one of the foremost of American artists draws the magic pencil which has achieved so many triumphs, and, "in verdure clad," starts into life the rural beauties of "April Days," "My Outdoor Studies," "Water Lilies," "The Life of Birds," "The Procession of the Flowers," and "Snow." It was a happy thought that selected these models of literary genius for illustration, a loving homage to nature which guided the artist in her wanderings "In a Fair Country." The fifty-five illustrations which ornament this volume are not surpassed even by the former triumphs of "One Year's Sketch Book," "Nature's Hallelujah," "A Bunch of Violets," and "The Message of the Bluebird," household treasures throughout the land. Whether floating in her boat on Concord River, with its wealth of floral adornments, its scenic surprises in the windings of its stream in and about places made famous by Thoreau and Emerson, or in her loftier flights amid the hills of "beautiful Camden" down by the sea, where the grand eur of mountain views possesses charms to wake enthusiasm, she has exhibited the same fidelity to nature in her beautiful pictures, the same exquisite taste in the selection of her subjects, which have characterized her previous achievements. Without the illustrations the essays would be admirable; without the essays the union of pen and pencil has produced a book in every way superb.

NEW EDITIONS OF THE JEROME ART-BOOKS

The addition of a new volume to the "Peerless" Series creates a fresh demand for the earlier volumes. The birthday and wedding calls for these books, acknowledged to be admirably fitting, are constant and large, while every succeeding holiday season creates new demands for these beautiful volumes.

Nature's Hallelujah

By Irene E. Jerome. Elegantly bound in gold cloth, full gilt, gilt edges, $6.00; Turkey morocco, $15.00; tree calf, $15.00; English seal style, $10.00.

One Year's Sketch-Book

By Irene E. Jerome, containing 46 original full-page illustrations, engraved on wood by Andrew. In same bindings and at same prices as "Nature's Hallelujah."

A Bunch of Violets

Gathered by Irene E. Jerome. Original illustrations, engraved on wood and printed under the direction of Andrew. 4to, cloth, $3.75; Turkey morocco. $0.00; tree calf, $9.00; English seal style, $7.00; Palatine style, tied with chenille, $2.00.

The Message of the Bluebird

Told to Me to Tell to Others, by Irene E. Jerome, engraved on wood by Andrew. Cloth and gold, $2.00; Palatine style, ribbon ornaments, $1.00.

AN EXQUISITE BEAUTY

DAYS SERENE

Original illustrations of verses from the poets, by Margaret MacDonald Pullman. Engraved on wood by Geo. T. Andrew, and printed under his direction.

Royal oblong quarto. Emblematic cover designs in colors. Twenty-six full-page original illustrations. Full gilt. Size, 10½ x 14½. Cloth, $5; Turkey morocco, $12.50; tree-calf, $12.50: English seal style, $9.

Twere vain in print to attempt to tell of the exquisite beauty of Margaret MacDonald Pullman's illustrations of a score or so of verses from the poets on sylvan topics which have been issued in sumptuous form by Lee & Shepard, with the title, 'Days Serene.' One of the daintiest of these is a simple bunch of field Marguerites, illustrative of Frank Dempster Sherman's lines:

Wee, little rimless wheel of fate
With silver spokes and hub of yellow,
What little girl, in accents mellow,
Has sought your aid to find a mate?

"The artist must have enjoyed many days screne amid scenes of the tenderest beauty to have produced a book of such soft and delicate feeling. The execution of the work is in every way worthy of its design." — Chicago

"The poets could scarcely wish their lines better illustrated, for Mrs. Pullman's work expresses more intensely and vividly than anything we have ever seen, the innate, pulsating life of Nature.

"An ineffable spirit of calm and peace broods over it all, and we feel we are a part of it ourselves, so plaintively do the trees reach out to shake hands with us; while the flowers nod familiarly, the birds fly away from us or look down saucily from some neighboring twig, and the bees busily seek their tributes from the flowers and heed us not. There is an individuality, a master hand, and an understanding of Nature suggested in every stroke of the brush, and the volume is really an artistic delight."

— Boston Times.

AN IDYL OF THE OLDEN TIME

THE WOOING OF GRANDMOTHER GREY

Poem by Kate Tannatt Woods

Illustrations by popular artists. Engraved and printed under the direction of Mr. Andrew.

Oblong quarto. Forty illustrations. Cloth, $2.00.

" 'I was thinkin', Jabez,' said Grandmother Grey,
'How it all was so long ago,

How it all was so long ago, When you lived with your father miles away, And the ground was covered with heaps of snow.' Py the genial glow of the blazing logs in the open fire-place, with the kettle swinging and singing on the ancient crane, the "eight-day" ticking in the corner, and the cat purring on the hearth, "Grandmother" tells in the dialect of those days the story. Author and artist have succeeded in producing a tender picture of old New England life and character.

NOVELTIES IN COLOR WITH EXQUISITE DESIGNS

THE BOUDOIR CALENDAR FOR 1890

"HURRAH FOR THE NEW YEAR"

Printed in delicate tints on ivory cardboard, with ribbon bows and silver chain and rings. Neatly boxed. Price, 75 cents.

I N designing this new calendar for 1800, the artist has availed herself of her original idea of little people that give so much character to the different seasons. Thus a bevy of little folks in voluminous hats and feathers, with puckered mouths, welcome 1800 with "Hurrah for the New Year," an exquisite design. Fo the months there are odd figures in delicate tin'. January, showing in a "brief" costume, asks: "F w Soon do You Think it will Thaw?" of a wover-eyed bird. February in Cupid array is gathering hearts, and entreating the birds to "Come be My Love." March, with a tattered and torn umbrella and breezy drapery, is holding on for dear life, "My, What a Blow!" April has a Japanese costume and a comical phiz as he sits underneath his parasol, entreating you to "Come in out of the Rain." May is "squeezing" a Spring song from the birds. June is plucking roses. July is chasing with Chinese lanterns a butterfly. August is "sweltering" in a flaxen wig and a general plumpness of figure, and gives you an invitation under her parasol. September is entreating the birds, who say: "We think of going South soon." Little October interviews an owl to ask: "Have you seen the moon?" and the figure is as comical as the owl. November is enjoying "Thanksgiving Day in the Morning" in a delightful manner, and the charming little Miss December is anxiously inquiring: "Which the way to Santa-Claus Land?"

AN IMMENSE SUCCESS

THE SEPIATINT CALENDAR FOR 1890. "ALL AROUND THE YEAR"

THE initial issue of this dainty almanac for 1889, though produced in large editions, failed to supply the market, and great was the disappointment of thousands. Those same features which made it so popular will be found in the issue for 1890. It is truly called "a perfect little beauty, and a charming souvenir."

"The calendar is a little gem. Its leaves are held together by two rings, attached to which a silvered chain affords means for hanging, while a white silk cord is tastfully tied, with a knot, through the hole made by the ring in the upper cover. The calendar itself is filled with some of the dearest, quaintest little figures, so deftly and naturally pictured that it quite warms one's heart to look at them. It is a charming piece of work, and is a thorough pleasure to the eye, and will win a welcome wherever it goes." — Somerville Journal.

Printed in sepiatint on ivory cardboard, with rings, chain, and tassel, silver or gold edges. Boxed. Price, 50 cents SOUVENIRS FOR THE SEASON.

"ONE MERRIE CHRISTMAS TIME"

Is a charming combination of delicate designs and appropriate verse:

"Over the hills of Palestine
The silver stars began to shine;
Night drew her shadows softly round
The shrinking earth without a sound."

THE designs express in many ways both the sacred and festive characteristics of this day of all the year. The artist seems to have a fancy, in her decorations of this souvenir, for pugs and poodles, which are capitally introduced, and wonderful little children are planted in hills and wander in quaint costumes through lovely scenes. Nothing more appropriate for Christmas has been made, considering the price.

Printed in delicate colors on heavy ivory board, with rings and ribbons and chain, with gilt edges. In box. Price, 75 cents.

THE LUCKY HORSE SHOE

decorates the cover of the charming souvenir.

"A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO YOU!"

In which the New Year, swinging in a basket around the clouds, says:

"I'm sent from above
In a basket of love;
I'm sailing to you,
Through the heavens blue."

Then a quaint little body is asking anxiously, " Which Way Did the Old Year Go?" Another little tot, with a basket filled with crumbs, and a heart full of joy, feeds the birds in a lovely field; and all through the leaflets, with their delicate colors and quaint designs, these charming little people cheer the heart on the threshold of the New Year with a beautiful present in a charming collection of miniature men and women.

Printed in delicate colors on heavy ivory board, with rings, ribbons, and chain; gilt edges. In neat boxes.

Price, 75 cents.

NEW EDITIONS OF THE TWO SEPIATINT SOUVENIRS

"A CHRISTMAS CAROL."

"A FRIEND STANDS AT THE DOOR."

Each by Dinah Maria Mulock, author of "John Halifax," etc.

Printed on heavy board in sepiatint and gold, gilt edges, ribboned and boxed. Price each, $1.00.

These charmingly appropriate presents for the holidays are put up in beautiful style on thick cards, 9% by 5% inches, and bound with blue ribbons. Miss Mulock's exquisite little Christmas Carol "God rest ye, Merry Gentlemen!" is the theme of the Christmas cards, into the very spirit of which Mrs. Sunter has entered in furnishing Sepiatint illustrations.

The no less popular psalm "A Friend Stands at the Door!" furnishes especially interesting and fitting sentiments for consideration as we bid farewell to the Old and extend our welcome to the New Year. Mrs. Sunter is equally happy in her illustrations of this poem, giving some appropriate paintings expressive of the sentiments of the text. For inexpensive and timely holiday gifts, these have received hearty commendation.

THE "WELL-SPRING OF PLEASURE"

OUR BABY'S BOOK

The mother's record of the events in Baby's life, — birth, weight from day to day, the coming of the first tooth, the first walk, etc., designed to furnish a complete record of the baby's life.

Elegantly printed on heavy Bristol board in colors and gold, with original designs, fastened with ribbons, and boxed. Price, $1.50.

A VERY unique presentation book, with many pleasant features, and of value as a family memento.

While the fond parents record with interest each succeeding triumph of the baby in the path of life, the baby, when grown to man or woman's estate, will have a souvenir of priceless value.

THE JULIA WARD HOWE BIRTHDAY BOOK

Edited by Laura E. Richards (daughter of the Poetess).

Padded covers, bevelled edges, round corners, full gilt.

In rich and attractive bindings. Persian leather, $2.00; English seal, $2.00; Turkey morocco, $3.00; crushed Levant, $3.00. Also in cloth, illustrated, $1.00.

"A very beautiful little book. Its plan is a quotation, in prose or verse, brief, sententious, and likely to be appropriate, for each day in the year; so that the owner of it is sure to find his own birthday with its motto, and those of his friends, however numerous they may be. On each alternate page, the same dates are repeated, with blanks left for such other quotations as one may wish to enter. Julia Ward Howe's name is a familiar, and to many thousands of good people a beloved one. Her writings offer special opportunities for such use as is here made of them. The several quotations embody each its lesson, often both beautiful and wise in itself, and charmingly expressed."—Standard, Chicago.

A ROMANCE OF WONDERLAND, FOR OLD AND YOUNG.

LITTLE BARON TRUMP

And His Wonderful Dog Bulger

By Ingersol Lockwood. Illustrated by Geo. Wharton Edwards.

Quarto. Cloth, emblematic dies. $2.00.

In the wide range of modern literature, it would be difficult to find a volume of adventure which would surpass Mr. Lockwood's presentations of the wonders of travel, and of the deeds of the valiant heroes—the pictures of the brightest fancy—who trumpet their bravery and daring after the laughable and amusing—even superlatively imaginative—style of the famous Baron Munchausen. As an inimitable and unlimited story-teller, holding fast to some phases of truth, and blending with them the highest flights of hyperbolic expression, the author may rest content that "Munchausenism," as may be always said of the fools, is not "all deal," and that the well-embalmed Baron has at last found his richest and raciest match in the production of the talented editor of the "Bookmaker."—the able Group together the hitherto unrivalled and astounding discoveries and adventures of Jules Verne; then gather all of Rider Haggard's bewitching and bewildering stories, with Baron Munchausen thrown in, and the "Little Baron Trump"—the trump of the lot—if you will follow him with his Wonderful Dog Bulger, will take you along a path of narrative which will actually force you into a condition of mental hilarity and extravagant wonderment, while Mr. Edwards, the accomp ished New York artist, has kept sharp pace with the "adventures," by a graphic embodiment of some of this book's sentiments in life-like drawings, true to scenes of the and tasteful magazine devoted to arts kindred to books.

OTHER NEW BOOKS IN PRESS.

EVERY-DAY BUSINESS

Notes on its practical Details, arranged for Young People, by M. S. EMERY. Price (about) 50 cents.

THIS is a work of great value to young people, as it enables them to understand the practical details of business, explaining, as it does, all subjects which are common to the different branches of business, in a very clear and concise manner.

Among the matters treated upon in this work are the following: — Letter Writing: Bills, Receipts, and Accounts; Post Office Business; Telegrams; Express Business; United States Money; Savings Banks; National Banks: Bank Checks, Notes, and Drafts; Mortgages; Investment and Speculation; Taxes, and Fire and Life Insurance.

SPEAKING PIECES

For Little Scholars and Older Pupils

By ELLEN ORTENSIA PECK Price, boards, 50 cents.

THIS, in very truth, is a "rare gem of a book" of its character. In common phrase, it "fills the bill" for the exceedingly useful purpose for which it was designed. The book includes within its pages original recitations and dislogues, charactes and entertainments for school exhibitions and home pleasure, with pieces for birthday and wedding anniversaries, Decoration Day, and other occasional celebrations. The foundation purpose of the book is grand, — the many varieties of composition, which include almost numberless methods of expressing beautiful and valuable thoughts and sentiments; the remarkable adaptability of the pieces to elevate the mind, attract the quick and abiding interest of the reader; the noble spirit; the persuasive and gentle rhythm; rich, yet plain language, render this little volume one of substantial merit and permanent worth; and as the simple expression of great thoughts appeals to young and old alike, so "Speaking Pieces" will find admirers other than "little scholars and older pupils."

PENS AND TYPES

Hints and Helps for those who Write, Print, Teach, Read, or Learn. By BENJAMIN DREW. Price (about) $1.00.

A new and improved edition.

THIS is a very valuable book for both professionals and amateurs in literature. It is written by a veteran professional proof-reader, who has a thorough practical knowledge of all that he treats upon. In a plain and cometc.

prehensive manner he gives invaluable instruction concerning writing for the press, proof-reading, style, punctuation (as especially valuable chapter), orthography, reading Greek, etc.

THE PICTURESQUE GEOGRAPHICAL READERS

In Four Fully Illustrated Volumes. By Chas. F. King, Master Dearborn Grammar School, Boston; President National Summer School, Saratoga Springs; Author of "Methods and Aids in Geography."

Vol. 1. AT HOME AND AT SCHOOL. 200 pages. Nearly ready.

THE four volumes of the Picturesque Readers now in course of preparation are not only intensely interesting, but they contain all the "Essentials of Geography" in so compact and vivid a form that they can be read by a bright child of ten in a year as supplementary reading in school, or at home in a few weeks, thus meeting the great demand for "less time in geography."

THE TARTUFFIAN AGE

By Paul Mantegazza. Translated, under direction of Professor L. D. Ventura, by his New Haven class in Italian.

Price (about) $1.25.

THE FUTURE OF MORALS AND RELIGION

The Victory of Socialism over Pessimism and Despair.

By LAWRENCE GRONLUND, author of "Co-operative Commonwealths," "Ca Ira, or Danton in the French Revolution."

Price (about) $1.24.

WARMAN ON THE VOICE

HOW TO TRAIN IT.

HOW TO CARE FOR IT.

By B. B. WARMAN, A.M., author of "Principles of Punctuation" in Worcester Dictionary, "Principles of Reading, Reciting, and Impersonating," "Physical Training, or the Care of the Body," etc. For Ministers, Lecturers, Readers, Actors, Singers, Teachers, etc. Illustrated by Marion Morgan Reynolds.

With full-page illustrations. 4to. Cloth. $2.00.

FOR PRIMARY SCHOOLS AND KINDERGARTENS

Observation Lessons in the Primary Schools

A manual for teachers, presenting practical methods of teaching Elementary Science to the young. By Louisa P. Hopkins, Supervisor of Elementary Science in Boston Public Schools. Paner, 25 cents each.

Three parts now ready. Part I.—Sense Lessons. Part II.—Plant and Animal Life. Part III.—Physical Phenomena of Nature: the Human Body.

A system of instruction for the training of the senses of the young, to secure habits of observation, thought, and expression, enabling teachers to teach successfully Elementary Science, as required in the present system of education.

BOOKS RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

AN HOUR WITH DELSARTE

A Study of Expression, by Anna Morgan, of the Chicago Conservatory. Illustrated by Rosa Mueller Spragus and

"THE modest title does not do it justice; it should really be called 'The Grammar of Expression,' for it is a lucid treatise on a subject of more than mere dramatic importance. Delsarte, as Miss Morgan explains, dut not invent new ways of walking, standing, or speaking, but defined the laws of expression, and showed how grace might be cultivated by properly educating the body. The illustrations in the present work are from poses by Miss Morgan's pupils. The Eastern publishers have shown their appreciation of the work by issuing it in rich and tasteful typographical form."—Chicago Tribuss.

Incidents of a Collector's Rambles in Australia, New Zealand, New Guinea

By SHERMAN F. DENTON, Artist to the United States Fish Commission, with over 50 illustrations. Cloth. $2.50.

"UNITES with the scientist's zeal and research the keen observation of the traveller and the lingering affection of the lover of Nature. Probably no one book of its size combines so much that is useful and instructive with so much that is merely interesting. The author seems to have been all over the world, and to have found something to remember and admire wherever he set his foot. His descriptions of Australia, New Zealand, and New Guinea are especially fresh and entertaining. He has lived with the people he talks of, not seen them from a distance, and he knows whereof he writes." — American Bookseller.

ESSAYS: RELIGIOUS, SOCIAL, POLITICAL,

By DAVID ATWOOD WASSON; with a Biographical Sketch by O. B. FROTHINGHAM. Price, $2.50.

R. WASSON'S style is characterized by great directness and simplicity. While a most thorough and painstaking worker, he entered upon his tasks with keen sest and vigor, and infused into his writing a spirit that enabled him to treat even heavy subjects with buoyancy and grace. An air of sincerity and deep conviction permeates these essays, and makes them on this account the more interesting." — Commonwealth.

BURGOYNE'S INVASION OF 1777,

With an outline sketch of the American Invasion of Canada, 1775-76. By SAMUEL ADAMS DRAKE, Price, 50 cents.

"NO other event of the Revolution has been so much written about. The author has gone over the whole field to make this excellent and comparatively brief account. To a well-regulated mind, this story of how a General, in the heyday of reputation, went forth with his showy army and many cannon to sweep everything before him for a time, and then to be caged by farmers in homespun and their stripling boys, is more interesting than a romance, especially when told so graphically as in this instance."— Commercial. Cincinnati. ADDITIONS TO and over 80 other of the most famous men and women of America and Europe.

This famous "Memorial" was privately printed in 1887 at the death of Mr. Beecher, for the family and friends of the great preacher. No copies have ever been for sale, although the public demand for it would have exhausted an edition of several thousand copies.

The 25 remaining copies of the original edition of one thousand are now for the first time publicly offered for sale.

Singly, at $2.50 Each, Net to the Trade, Postpaid.

The "Memorial" has been classed by the entire press of the country as the most remarkable ever printed, and to book-collectors it has already a far greater value than the price at which these copies are now offered.

NO COPIES CAN EVER BE OBTAINED AFTER THESE 25 ARE SOLD.

Her Life, Letters, and Journal.

Edited by Ednah D. Cheney. With portraits and view of the Alcott Home in Concord. 1 vol., 16mo, uniform with "Little Women," $1.50.

This volume might with truth almost be called an autobiography of Miss Alcott, as it is made up mostly of extracts from her letters and journals, with only the necessary connecting links supplied by one who was an intimate and valued friend for many years. It appeals to each and every admirer of this popular author, and is sure to find place beside each well-worn copy of "Little Women," It is the only authorized life of Miss Alcott.

LULU'S LIBRARY. By Louisa M. Alcott. Volume III. Contains "Recollections of my Childhood," written by Miss Alcott shortly before her death. 16mo, cloth, $1.00.

The "Recollections" were written a year or two before Miss Alcott died, and give a little sketch of her life as a child that will appeal to every other child. They will all feel much nearer to their favorite author as they read them.

A FEW MORE VERSES. By SUSAN COOLIDGE. I vol., 16mo, cloth, $1.00.

An entirely new collection and companion to the first volume, "Verses by S. C.," of which the New Haven Pulladism says: "'Verses,' a modest name for a casket of gems, a collection of rare and beautiful literary pearls."

JUST SIXTEEN. A new volume of stories. By Susan Coolings. Square 16mo, cloth, uniform with "What Katy Did," "A Little Country Girl," etc., $1.25.

The set of Miss Coolidge's stories now numbers twelve volumes, including the well-known "What Katy Did" books, a favorite series with the young folks,

THE KINGDOM OF COINS. A Tale for Children of All Ages. By John Bradley Gilman. "I pray thee tell me . . . didst never travel in thy sleep?" Illustrated by F. T. Merrill. Small 4to, illuminated board covers, 60 cents.

To describe this book in a paradox one might say that it is like "Alice in Wonderland" and at the same time that it is not like that book. A new and original story about "Bad Penny" and other pennies, the "mare" that money makes go," and other queer things to be seen in that strange place.

GRANDMA'S RHYMES AND CHIMES for Children. A Selection of New Nursery Poems by the most popular American Authors. An illustrated quarto volume, illuminated board covers, $1.50; cloth, gilt, $2.00.

This collection of charming pictures and exquisite rhymes by popular writers like Clara Doty Bates, Marian Douglas, Emily Huntington Miller, George Cooper, Lavinia S. Goodwin, and many others, selected with great care and judgment, together with its pleasing cover designs, forms a unique book with which to gladden the heart childhood.

ORDERS SHOULD BE SENT IN AT ONCE.

All of the texts, all of the illustrations and portraits, and the more interesting of the fac-simile reproductions, are retained.

- "An interesting collection of anecdotes, told in charming fashion-delightful reading throughout."-N. V. Szz.
- "A volume of reminiscences singularly rich in entertainment."-Boston Advertiser.
- "The profusion of illustrations—many of them unique, all of them interesting—enhances the value of the volume."—N. Y. Tribune.

A Collection of Letters of Dickens.

1833-1870. Uniform with "A Collection of Letters of Thackeray." 16mo, $1.25.

This collection of letters is compiled from already published materials, and is issued in a uniform style, both in binding and in presswork, with the popular edition of "Collection of Letters of Thackeray." The New York Tribune characterized the project of supplementing the Thackeray with these Dickens letters as "an admirable idea."

Recollections of a Minister to France.

By the Hon. E. B. WASHBURNE. Fully illustrated. New and cheaper edition. 2 vols., 8vo, $5.00.

The new and cheaper edition of this famous work contains everything that was in the earlier edition, including the sixteen full-page and numerous text illustrations.

"It is throughout most charming and valuable; a contribution to the history of France, and an incomparable series of picturesque views of Paris during the Siege and Commune."—Philadelphia Press.

"Mr. Washburne's book is simple and straightforward in style, crowded with strongly interesting sketches of men and women, and full of strong, homely good sense."—Chicago Times.

The Dawn of History.

An Introduction to Prehistoric Study. Edited by C. F. KEARY, M.A., F.S.A. New and enlarged edition. 12mo, $1.25.

The present edition of this standard popular work contains so much fresh matter—more than a hundred pages—that the result is practically a new book. All the chapters have, moreover, been revised in the light of recent discoveries.

"The new contributions on myths, religious ideas, folk-lore, and the growth of language, are treated with admirable force and clearness as processes of human development converging on the historic period. Now that history can no longer be taught in the old piecemeal or sectional fashion, some preparative work on prehistoric man is absolutely necessary. This book supplies the need exactly."—Saturday Review.

^{4} A limited edition on Holland paper of two hundred numbered copies of Donald G. Mitchell's most popular books, REVERIES OF A BACHELOB and DERAM LIFE, is announced as ready. In paper, presswork, and binding, these two volumes represent the highest style of artistic manufacture. Each volume has an etched frontispiece by Perry Moran. 2 volumes, $7.00.

BANGS & Co., announce that their parcel sale of new books and stationery will take place on October 29 and the following days. Invoices should be forwarded so as to reach Messrs. Bangs by the 10th of October, on which day the catalogue must go to press.

ARNOLD & Co., Philadelphia, publish this week Mrs. S. T. Rorer's book on "Home Candy-Making." This work is the result of careful practice in teaching beginners how to make attractive, wholesome, and palatable varieties of home-made candies. As a rule, these are made from uncooked sugar and white of egg, and while they may be palatable to some persons, to the connois-seur are coarse and heavy. The excellency of the recipes consists in their simplicity and faithfulness to minutiæ.

D. LOTHROP COMPANY will issue at once "The Loss of the Swamsea," by W. L. Alden, a capital story for boys; "Swanhilde," a collection of fresh German fairy tales, daintily illustrated by Bridg-man, and "Lotus Boy," by Laura D. Nichols, author of "Overhead" and other popular stories that combine natural science with fiction. A new edition of "Pansies for Thoughts," a collection of Pansy's choice bits by her niece, Grace Livingston, has become necessary, owing to the great popularity of Mrs. Alden, and this is also announced. "Three Little Maids" is just out, and is as winsome a girls' story as has been published for years. H. H. Clark's "Naval Cadet Bentley," also just ready, will prove equally attractive for the boys.

FUNK & WAGNALLS will publish next month a work entitled "The Life-Work of the Author of Uncle Tom's Cabin." The writer, Florine Thayer McCray, who is a personal friend of Mrs. Stowe, received permission two years ago to write this work from both Mrs. Stowe and her son, Rev. C. E. Stowe, and received valuable assistance from them and other members of the family. It is to be finely illustrated, and contains about 450 pages. We are informed that, while this work dwells at some length on the history of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" - that masterpiece which thrilled the world and contributed so largely toward the overthrow of American slavery—it also gives an interesting account of Mrs. Stowe's habits, travels, methods of work, and reviews and commentaries upon the numerous other books that fell from her facile pen. The forthcoming work is likely to have a wide circulation.

The first volume of a new series of biographies of men who have exerted great influence on the religious thought and life of America. Various creeds and denominations will find representation. The writers will not be champions or apologists of those whose careers they depict, but will aim to set forth clearly and impartially what they were and what they did. Prof. Allen says of his subject: "I have endeavored to reproduce Edwards from his books, making his treatises, in their chronological order, contribute to his portraiture as a man and as a theologian, a task which has not been heretofore attempted. The story opens in New York City, where the hero saves a young man from committing suicide, confesses to him that he was just about to do the same, hears the young man's story of hunger and wretchedness, gives him an excellent dinner, and in the course of a few days accompanies him to his home in Richmond, Virginia. The author is a Southerner and a musician, as readers of "Don Miff" will remember. The hero gives music lessons, falls in love with his pupil, and marries, and then confesses to a pile of English gold that has not once glittered during his American adventures.

Fourteen sermons addressed to young men. For five years the author's ministry in London brought him into close contact with young men, and his previous sympathies were quickened by the knowledge he gained of the temptations, struggles, and needs of city youth. He met with frank and affectionate response to his efforts to deal with their intellectual difficulties and to his sympathies with their social needs. He dwells specially upon the duties of society towards young men on the threshold of manhood. threshold of manhood.

The editor is the great-grandson of Elizabeth Sandwith, born in Philadelphia in 1735, who married Henry Drinker in 1761 by Friend's ceremony. She had six children and led a thoroughly domestic life, but always had a fondness for writing down at night the reflections made at her work during the day. She took interest in everything, and even during her latter years, when she was a confirmed invalid, her friends were always sure of a warm welcome and ready sympathy. She died in her 730 year in 1807.

Designed primarily for the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle, for which it was prepared, but suitable also for use in schools and colleges, and for general reading. Prof. Ely believes "many a person has read through a text-book of political economy without knowing what political economy really means." His aim has been to make at least the true significance of political economy apparent. He has written a work descriptive rather than logical, and abandoned the ordinary distribution of space in text-books. More than one-third of the book is occupied with a description of the growth and characteristics of industrial society and in exposition of the nature of political economy. The author hopes the work will interest readers, excite their curiosity and open their minds, and lead them to continue their economic studies, for which suggestions are given in one of the parts into which the work is divided.

Farmer, Lydia Hoyt. A short history of the French revolution for young people: pictures of the reign of terror. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1889.] c. 9+605 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. The experienced compiler has made use of the works of Miguet, Michelet, Thiers, Lamartine, Taine, Louis Blanc, Henri Martin, Van Laun, and Carlyle, and has endeavored to present a rapid and clear resume of the most important events of the French revolution, with gems from these authors scattered through her text. A ten-page chronological table of the events of the French revolution and a ten-page index make this a valuable work of reference for young people.

Jed is taken home by his friend Dick, who tells the story, and Dick's maiden aunt becomes so indignant ane gives both boys and their dog a good beating. The boys run away and go to Boston, where they earn a scant living as bootblacks. They are finally coaxed to enlist as drummer-boys in 1855 in the standing army. When the war broke out in 1867 they went into the ranks, and the story gives a true picture of their adventures on the battlefield, in prison, and in the merry life of the camp. Boys can learn the history of the war in this brightly told story.

In the years 1886 and 1887 the author contributed a series of seven articles to the Atlantic Monthly, which bore the title of the present volume, and are in great part absorbed in it. The book, however, is essentially new, as it contains much more matter than the articles and the chapters are either hitherto unpublished or rewritten in a less desultory order. This work is not intended to be historical. It only professes to compare the French and English of the second half of the nineteenth century.

Mr. Morse acknowledges that an adequate treatment of his subject would require a larger canvas. Franklin's first visits to France and the scope and quality of his scientific work are only lightly touched upon, as in this series Franklin is the statesman. The magnitude of America's debt to Franklin's diplomacy is clearly brought out. Mr. Morse makes the reader see that the services rendered by Franklin in the French capital were as essential to the triumph of the colonies as were those rendered by Washington in the field. The last pages are models of biographical synopsis, showing Franklin as scientist, diplomatist, profound thinker, and preacher of morals and conduct of life, shrewd business man, conversationalist, and wit and humorist.

For the sake of helping her impoverished father and arge family of small sisters and brothers, Sybil Dorrimore consents to marry Julian Karslake, an Episcopal clergyman of abundant private means. An old family friend, influenced by jealousy, discovers a secret in the life of Julian which he refuses to explain. His wife, with her learned to luve him. Trusts him, but for his own who has learned to love him, truss him, but for his own good leaves him to thwart his enemy's plans. The plot is interesting, although much of Karslake's suffering would seem to be unnecessary except to insure a long novel.

John G. Paton was born in 1824 and began to write this autobiography in his sixty-fourth year. He began his work in a Glasgow city mission, but responding to the call for missionaries went to Tanna, one of the islands of the New Hebrides. His account of scenes of rapine and bloodshed, and of his hairbreadth escapes from imminent dangers, read almost like fiction. The English press commends the book highly. A continuation will probably follow in response to earnest solicitations.

In the plays and games for little folks, sports of all sorts, fireside fun and singing games, the desire has been to make a collection of games easy to understand, and adapted to children of all ages. Here will be found many ancient games which were the delight of young folks in the last century, and with which they make merry both indoors and out. Newer and more familiar ones are also introduced, and singing games are made a special feature. The book is illustrated in color, with graceful designs of children at play on every page. signs of children at play on every page.

The first volume of this work was published last year under the title "History of the American theatre before the revolution." The present volume comprises the period between 1774 and 1792, another one being promised to bring the narrative down to the present day. The work is a most comprehensive and minute account of the various American companies, actors, etc., and the plays in which they appeared in the principal cities of the United States. Interesting play-bills, casts of plays, epilogues, etc., are included in the narrative. The work is printed on fine paper, uncut, with very wide margins.

No important name among American authors is omitted. The compiler recognizes that the majority of writers thus far produced, when tried by the world's standard, will fall below the level of immortal renown. Would make an excellent school-reader.

Aims to show by what agency Kansas was made a free state. Mr. Thayer is eminently fitted to tell the story, as he was largely instrumental in bringing about the exclusion of slavery from Kansas. As early as 1854, when a representative in the Massachusetts Legislature from the town of Worcester, he conceived the plan of frustrating the purpose of the repeal of the Missouri Compromise by encouraging and assisting emigration to Kansas from the free states of the North. His scheme was to fill up the territory with settlers who would vote "to save Kansas to freedom." The result was the establishment of the New Rangland Emigrant Aid Cometally in the state of the New Rangland Emigrand Rangla in the State of the New Rangla in the New Rangla in the State of the New Rangla in the New Rangla establishment of the New England Emigrant Aid Company, which helped many thousand resolute men and women to emigrate. The full story and its results are told here. Mr. E. E. Hale, who was one of the youngest directors of the company, indorses Mr. Thayer's narra-tive. Mr. Thayer is not friendly to the Abolitionists of his day, whom he calls "disunionists," nor does be look upon John Brown as anything approaching a here.

Three lives at and between the Alinori and the Glorgini estates when Count Paulo Glorgina marries a poor girl. He disappears, and his wife dies, leaving a baby girl, who is nearly forty years of age before ahe establishes her claim to her family coronet. The reverse of this realistic picture of Italian conditions is a New England home, founded by a rich doctor, who endeavors through his children to make the world a better place to live in. The daughter of the American home becomes the wife of an Italian count. The theme of the novel is slightly sensational, but Miss Tincker's method of handling it is refined and interesting. interesting.

A young English curate becomes assistant priest in a fashionable Protestant Episcopal Church in the western states. His easy-going rector grows jealous and gives him duty in an extremely poor mission district. He falls in love and the girl raises doubts of his faith. After long talks with a fellow-clergyman he decides to remain in the church, as he will do more harm by leaving it. His romance is troubled. After many trials he decides that it is "will, not conviction, which makes a man a Christian," and settles down to hard work among the poorer classes. classes

Miss Zimmern claims the credit of telling for the first time, in English, the history of the Hanseatic League, a trading alliance or association made first by merchants, then by towns of North Germany, during the 14th century, for their mutual protection on sea and land against pirates and robbers. This union, first made simply for commercial purposes, grew into a formidable political power, increasing in strength and influence until the 16th century, when, owing to changed circumstances and the decline of feudalism, its decline also began, the Thirty Years' War completing its downfall. Miss Zimmern has the advantage of a new and interesting subject, which she treats in a spirited and exceedingly clear manner. The volume is a notable addition to this series.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

The demands of the announcement-lists in our usual Announcement Number prevented our giving space until now to several matters of considerable importance in the trade. The school-book fight in Indiana continues to be of first importance to the educational publishing trade and in a secondary way to retail booksellers. The decision of the Court against Messrs. Ivison, Blakeman & Co., in the suit which they brought to prevent a change from their books to the State system, is only of incidental importance, yet it may have ap important bearing on school-book arrangements in the future. We therefore give the text in full. The State of Indiana is evidently bound to try the State publication system, and its people will probably not come to their common-sense until their own State has repeated the unfortunate experience of Delaware. The State system, it is evident, simply makes a market for minor lines of books on which, very likely, some political ring may fatten. If a State system should succeed, it would of course work an enormous change in the entire machinery of school-book publishing, but every time the experiment is tried, this little development of State socialism fails to work.

On the other hand, the educational publishers have comparatively little sympathy from the retail part of the trade, because the retailers have lost most of their interest in the business. In the interview with Mr. Cathcart, which we print elsewhere, the retail trade may, we think, justly except to his imputation that they get, or attempt to get, an "extortionate" advance on publishers' prices. We have vet to learn of any case in which a retailer has been able to get, or expects to get, more than a fair return for the service he does in handling school-books or others. The retailers see quite the other side of the shield, as is witnessed by Mr. Jenkins' letter to school-book publishers, which we reprint also in this issue. If the school-book publishers, having already in association cured many of the evils of the trade, will now individually settle down on fair fixed prices, low enough to give the people their money's worth and high enough to give those who handle the books a reasonable margin for their service, a very useful change will have been wrought. Of course, publishers must face the difficulty indicated in one of the replies to Mr. Jenkins, which we also print, but in the long run they would gain by being "stiff" in this matter. It is, perhaps too much to expect that educational publishers will refrain from direct relations with school-boards where the business is so very large as to make it an object for a wholesale house to arrange for it directly. But there ought to be a considerable margin of trade in which the retailer does a real service to publishers and public both, and should have his slight reward for doing that work.

WE are glad to print the straightforward letter from Thomas Hughes in reply to Messrs. Ginn & Co.'s request for a statement of the full truth as to their reprint of "Tom Brown." English authors are very apt to overlook the difficulties in which American publishing houses are placed by the lack of international copyright. The best houses desire to deal with the English author asthey would with the American, but they have not the same legal foundation for business relations. If, lacking this foundation, they refrain altogether from reprinting English books, they are put at a disadvantage in comparison with unscrupulous competitors who, for instance, may have a rival series in which the use of such books makes the most vital difference in success. In such cases, it is easy to see the dilemma in which the most honest publisher is put. The difficulty is not quite solved from the extreme position which Mr. W. C. Prime, for instance, takes in a recent letter on copyright in the New York Journal of Commerce. The embarrassment to the better part of the American publishing trade is a real one. The attitude of English authors is often very difficult, as in the case of Messrs. Wiley's attempted relations with Mr. Ruskin, years ago, when they were the only reprinters of his works and there was no danger of competition. One of their firm called on Mr. Ruskin and offered to put him on the same footing as American authors. His indignation was so decided that it moved him to a treatment of the American publisher which might be characterized by much severer words than even Mr. Ruskin himself would use about American reprinters.

THE Converight Leagues are preparing to go forward when the proper time comes in asking the next Congress to pass the Chace Bill. It is proposed to adopt certain verbal modifications, which, it seems, were needed to make the bill fit in with our present copyright system, but the Committees of the Authors' and Publishers' Leagues find that the Chace Bill is on the whole the best compromise to which they can see their way, and it is therefore improbable that there will be any essential changes.

THE difficulties of Messrs. Belford. Clarke & Co. confirm what we said in our last issue as to the over-doing of the reprint business. This house from the first has relied upon bazaar trade and the like to build up its business, yet in its later years it has shown creditable enterprise, which had begun to win for it a reputation beyond that. Its catalogue has been one of the neatest and most effective in the "Trade List Annual." and its list of standards had become very strong. while a number of its editions were good as well as cheap. The business had in all probability been an inflated one from the start, and an end had to come sooner or later. The house had been through several tribulations in its early days under its various titles, and very possibly will have another opportunity to fight for permanent success, as the stock on hand is so large and the interests at stake so considerable that the creditors are likely to decide to back up the house in going on as the best means of realizing its assets. All the same, this result will be a discouragement to the houses in the trade who do not fail and who have to stand the severe competition of underselling and compromising houses, while they are paying 100 cents on the dollar.

THE successors of a well-known bookselling firm in the South write us, cancelling a subscription to the Publishers' Weekly with the added word, " It is a valuable thing, but we have no time to read it." This is as though a carpenter should say, "This is a valuable chisel, but I have no time to use it." The workman who lets his tool-box run down is very apt to let his business run down also.

THE INDIANA SCHOOL-BOOK DECIS-ION

JUDGE WOODS, of the U. S. Circuit Court held at Indianapolis, handed down an opinion in the school-book case on the 7th inst. fused the injunction asked by Ivison, Blakeman & Co., and the Indianapolis School Board has therefore begun the use of the books prescribed by the new Indiana laws. It will be seen from the opinion, given in full below, that the Court refused the injunction on the ground that there was no contract for a period of years as alleged. "The bill of the complainants is to the effect that in May, 1888, the Board of School Commissioners of the city of Indianapolis entered into a contract with the complainants. whereby, on terms stated, Swinton's geographies were adopted for use in the schools of the city. for the term of six years; that the complainants have fully complied with the contract on their part, but that the Commissioners, supposing themselves bound in law to such action, are about to adopt and introduce, to the exclusion of complainants' books, books to be supplied by contractors under a certain act of the Legislature of Indiana, of date March 2, 1880, Acts 1880, page 74; that said act, besides being in violation of the Constitution of the State, for reasons stated, is invalid in respect to the contract of the complainants and Board of School Commissioners aforesaid, and in violation of the Constitution of the United States, because, if upheld, it would impair the obligation of contract. The bill shows that at the regular session of the board, on May 4, 1888, a resolution was passed that Swinton's geographies be adopted, provided satisfactory terms could be obtained with the publishers, and that after conferring with the board complainants signed and submitted to the board at its session held on the 18th day of May, 1888, the following proposition:

"This paper is to certify that if Swinton's geographics be adopted by the School Board of Indianapolis, Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co., as publishers of said books, will furnish them to the pupils of the public schools of Indianapolis in accordance with the following conditions:

tions:

"I. Swinton's Introductory Geography to be given in even exchange for all Guyot's Elementary Geography presented by such exchange upon an agreed date acceptable to both parties to this agreement.

"2. The same of Swinton's Grammar-School Geography for Guyot's Intermediate Geography.

"3. And Swinton's Grammar-School Geography to be given for a copy of Guyot's Elementary and 35 cents, if presented at date mentioned above.

"4. A donation of 250 copies of each book, Swinton's Introductory and Swinton's Grammar-School, to be made to the School Board.
"5. The publishers to furnish teacher's desk in every

"3. The publishers to furnish teacher's desk in every case with a copy of the books used in her grades.

"6. Introduction rates of 40 cents for Introductory and 90 cents for Grammar-School, to continue for one year.

"7. Regular prices after one year to be regular wholesale prices, subject to any deduction that may, for any reason, be made in said books by the publishers.

"The prices are in no case to be increased during the term of use of such books in Indianapolis. IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & CO."

"At said meeting it was moved by a member of the board that said proposition be adopted by said board, and the agreement concurred in, which was then and there done, as fully appeared from the files and records of the board.

"At the threshold, manifestly, is the inquiry whether the complainants have the contract right which they assert. If not, they have no cause of complaint against the co-respondent, and no right in this court, certainly, to bring in question the validity in scope of this act of the Legislature of the State under which, it is alleged, the respondent is about to take action in hostility to complainants' interest. By the seventh clause of Section 4460, the Board of School Commissioners are empowered to establish and enforce regulations for the grading of and course of instruction in the schools of the city. In this clause, helped out possibly by complications from Section 4436, must be found whatever authority there is for making such a contract as the one in question, and considering the principle that grants of power to municipal corporations are to be construed strictly, it is not clear that the board had power to bind itself by a stipulation that the books adopted would continue in use for a stated period of years.

"This power to select or adopt books was given mainly, at least, for the benefit of the public and to be used as occasion should require, and it is not consistent with the design that in a single exercise of it the board abrogate or annul it by stipulating that it should not for a time stated be exercised again. If this could be done for six years, it could for sixty. But whatever the power of the board in this respect may have been, the proposition submitted by the complainant and accepted by the board, constituting whatever contract there is between them, do not show an agreement that complainants' books shall be used for the term of six years, or for any fefinite time.

"Indeed, I am not clear that, by this transaction, the board can be deemed to have come under any obligation to the complainants whatever. It seems rather to have simply exercised its authority to adopt, and, as a condition of its action, to have exacted of the complainants a promise to furnish the books at the prices stated during the term of use of such books in Indianapolis'—that is to say, so long as such books should be used in Indianapolis. That the understanding at the time was that the board was closing and binding itself to do nothing beyond the adoption of the books is indicated in the first sentence of complainants' proposition: 'This paper is to certify that if Swinton's geographies be adopted by the School Board of Indianapolis, Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co., as publishers of said book, will furnish them,' etc., and in the entire document, and in the resolutions adopted by the board, there is no suggestion of a condition, covenant, or promise that there should be, after the adoption, any further action or liability on the part of the board. Practically, the action taken was simply a grant by the board to the complainants of the exclusive privilege or right to furnish to the pupils and patrons of the city schools the books specified upon the terms stated until other books, instead of these, should be adopted—that is to say, during the pleasure of the board-and in this view the doctrine is applicable that a grant of franchise and special privileges are always to be construed most strongly against the donee and in favor of the public. (Trimph Co.'s Illinois, 96; U. S., 63; Slidell & Grandyear, III. U. S., 412; 130 U. S., 1.)

"But aside from this doctrine, and conceding that the complainants have the contract which should be interpreted by the ordinary rules, there is in it no such ambiguity or incompleteness as to admit of extraneous evidence to explain its meaning or to enlarge its scope. The affidavits, therefore, introduced on the propositions of complainants that the parties intended a contract for six years must be rejected, and the intention must be deduced from written proposition of complainants and resolution of acceptance by the board, and from these, as already stated, it does not appear that any term of use was stipulated. The requirement in Section 4436, that no textbook adopted by the county board shall be changed within six years from the date of adoption, in no manner helps out the claim of the complainant for a contract or privilege for six years, because that provision has no application to cities, and even if applicable, it could lend no force to the contract, because by the unanimous consent of the county board, change could be made at any time.

"It is suggested, however, that by its by-laws the board can make no change of text-books except at its April session, and consequently there can be no action upon the subject now, except it be under the act of the Legislature, and, therefore, the validity of that act is in issue, even if plaintiffs' contract is for no definite term of use. The sufficient answer to this is that by the terms of the law changes may be made at any time by a two-thirds vote of the members of the board. It follows, then, that the application must be denied, and it is so ordered."

In discussing the foregoing opinion of Judge Woods, Mr. Cathcart, of Ivison, Blakeman & Co., said in an interview with a reporter of the N. Y. Tribune:

"The public school system of Indiana," Mr. Cathcart said, "has for several years been ranked with that of the leading States of the Union. Large appropriations have been made for its maintenance, and liberal laws have enabled cities. towns, and local boards of education to build fine school-houses and employ efficient teachers. Among the various powers thus delegated to these boards was that of selecting the text-books and making contracts with publishers for supplies. The patrons of the public schools, those who pay the taxes for their support and exercise a personal supervision over them, naturally had the deepest concern in their welfare; and one would suppose they would seek to buy whatever was required for the use of the schools in the open market, where the best article could be had at the lowest price, through the natural laws of competition. But the blight of the Socialistic wave, which has bred such distress and havoc to railroad and other corporate and moneyed interests in some of the Granger States, fell almost untowardly upon the school-book publishers, and they were quickly denounced as a ring of extortioners and robbers, and more lately as a great Trust combination of evil portent. In some of these States the school-book publisher has been made a party issue in politics, and every conceivable misrepresentation has been put forth to blind the people as to our position, and to make them feel that we are really an octopus which will gradually strangle them unless destroyed. Legislative action has in some cases been sought, and bills innumerable seeking alleged relief have been presented. The only serious outcome of it all has been the present law of Indiana, which was passed by the last Legislature of that State. This law provides that the State Board of Education shall ask for proposals for supplying books to the public schools of Indiana, conforming to a certain standard, and at prices which are named, and the books thus selected shall be used throughout the State to the exclusion of all others.

"Can they secure just as good books?"

"That is just the issue. The standard of merit and make-up required is that of books published twenty years ago, long before the present advanced methods of teaching which are incorporated in the text-books of to-day, and in no way comparable in style of manufacture to these books, and the prices and conditions were such that it was obviously not expected that any reputable publishing house would respond to the call for proposals, and as a matter of fact, none did, Some politicians of Indiana and other speculative persons then organized a stock company and went gunning for what they could find. They succeeded in getting an obscure set of readingbooks and arithmetics from a St. Louis publisher, and an equally obscure series of geographical text-books from a Minnesota publisher; and these they propose, by virtue of a contract with the State Board of Education, under the law, to foist upon the people of Indiana, whether they want them or not, thus placing the enormous supply of these leading text-books for that great State in the hands of a political ring at Indianapolis."

"But what is the ground," asked the reporter, "for the charge that there is a combination of publishers which is to all intents a trust? Is that not the real cause for the agitation you speak of?"

"There is no combination, nor any combination which can be twisted or distorted into anything like a trust. We have been amazed to see reputable journals seriously publish statements with so little foundation. There are perhaps a dozen publishing houses in the United States which may be considered representative houses in this line of business. They have grown up almost with the public school system of the country, and are justly entitled to credit for having so largely contributed to the progress and high standing of that system. With the increase of population there came also an increase in the number of schools and attendance, and hence an increase in the number and kind of text-books required; so that the competition among these publishers became exceedingly sharp, and travel-ling agents were to be found everywhere soliciting the introduction of new books and the consequent displacement of those in use. This in the course of time grew to be a bad thing both for the, publisher and the public. Unnecessary changes in books were often made, and the publishers were kept in a never-ending state of excitement over the warfare between the agents. This went on until about ten years ago, when three of the largest houses in the business came to an understanding by which they sought to put a stop to these evils and to restrain and control their travelling men. The publishers themselves were largely to blame for the unhappy condition of the business. They had allowed their travellers in many cases too much latitude, and encouraged too often measures of aggression which tended toward demoralization. There was friction, as may well be supposed, in the effort to carry out this agreement. But these houses persevered until in time all the school-book houses, with a few inconspicuous exceptions, joined in an agreement of a similar nature, and that is substantially the only combination that now exists, or ever existed, among the school-book publishers-an agreement seeking to control travelling agents, and for the purpose of rectifying such abuses as had grown out of that system in connection with the introduction of books. There is nothing in the agreement which in any way controls or fixes prices or that prevents any house from offering its books anywhere and on its own terms; nor is there any provision for 'pooling' or dividing profits; nor any single feature which conforms to anything corresponding with what are known as trusts. I may as well read to you from the agreement what it says in this respect. From Article 1: 'In order to reform many obvious evils that exist in the method of introducing school-books by travelling agents and to prevent the unhealthy excitement and turmoil connected therewith, the following houses have agreed each with the other,' etc. From Article 2: 'Nothing in the agreement shall be construed to prevent the usual advertising, circularizing and correspondence by firms, or the filling of orders arising therefrom for supplies for introduction, samples, etc.' From Article 10: 'Each house is at liberty to change its wholesale price-list at will."

"Why have no steps been taken to counteract these false statements?"

"The publishers rely upon the intelligence of the public for vindication; besides, it is useless to chase a falsehood where it has its source in the selfish motives of designing persons. It must run its course. We can trace many of the more recent newspaper articles charging us with having formed a trust to disgruntled agents whose occupations have gone or are in danger. In such cases, of course, the motive is simply malicious. Among the agents, as a class, however, there are many men of first-rate intelligence and of high character. They are well educated, are familiar with educational methods, and have large personal acquaintance and influence with educational people. They are, or have been, valuable adjuncts to the school-book business, and it is not likely, under any changed conditions which may come from the reform the publishers are seeking. that the services of these men will be entirely dispensed with; their respective houses will probably find places in some other direction for those whose ability and experience can be utilized."

"How as to the alleged high prices of schoolbooks?" asked the reporter.

"The complaint that is often heard about the unreasonably high prices of school-books is absurd. They are, generally speaking, 50 per cent. cheaper than other kinds of books, although they are more expensive to make. The binding is more substantial and more costly, and the paper and presswork and general 'get-up' are quite equal to the average high-class issues of the other' Then there is a heavy expense involved houses. in constant revisions that are made necessary in geographical and scientific books. There may be sometimes ground for complaint arising from extortionate prices charged by retail booksellers which the publishers have no means of controlling. It is a source of much annoyance to all of us; and some of us are of the opinion that we may be forced to either publish a retail price-list at which we will send our books anywhere free of transportation, or to let it be known everywhere that we will make contracts at our lowest wholesale prices with boards of education or other educational authorities who desire to deal with us direct. The basis upon which school-books are now sold is a wholesale price-list, from which a grade of discounts are made. It will be perceived that the publishers make no retail price, and that the local booksellers usually fix one of their own.

Mr. Cathcart added in conclusion that the idea of enormous profits and great fortunes made in the school-book trade is a wrong one. The publisher is obliged to pay large royalties on all valuable text-books, and the trade itself has been one of gradual development during half a century. The profits are no greater than have accrued to the large dry-goods or other mercantile houses in the same period, and the business requires a great outlay of capital, endless detail, and constant watching. The latest conference of the trade for the purpose of dealing directly with school boards will of itself, he said, contribute to a great reduction in the prices of school-books to communities, because it will do away with the excessive expense of intermediate agents.

MESSRS. GINN & CO.'S EDITION OF "TOM BROWN'S SCHOOL-DAYS."

THOS. HUGHES has written the following letter to the London Times under date of September 6, modifying severe charges against Ginn & Co., of Boston, in a former communication:

"I have received letters from the partners in the firm of Messrs. Ginn & Co., publishers, of New York, and from their English representatives, from which I gather that my letter, which you were good enough to publish, as to their use of a book of mine, is doing them harm in their business and inflicting serious injustice on their good name. They ask, therefore, that I will let the whole of the facts be known as detailed in these letters, which, if you will allow me, I am quite willing to do. My object in writing to you was not to interfere with their business or injure their good name, but only to disclaim university honors wrongly credited to me in their prefixed memoir.

"It appears, then, that Messrs. Ginn first applied, more than two years ago, for my consent to their publishing an American edition of the book 'for use of schools,' with certain passages omitted and explanatory notes and a biographical notice added. If this consent were given, they offered the same terms as to payment which they give to American authors. This offer, which came through Messrs. Macmillan, I declined through them, as I disliked the proposal to alter the book, and still more that of writing a memoir of myself.

"Messrs. Ginn, however, were not satisfied, and repeated the offer in a letter addressed to me, instead of to my publishers, at my private address. This letter, it appears, was returned unopened, with 'Refused' written on the envelope. Of this I can give no explanation, unless it be that I have desired the Post-Office not to deliver unstamped letters, of which I used to get a good many "Being still unwilling to abandon their intention, Messrs. Ginn then desired one of their staff, He saw who was in England, to call on me. me, and made a report to them, which led them to the conclusion ' that my earlier objections had been cancelled.' I have only a very dim recollection of this interview, so will give the impression this gentleman carried away in Mr. Ginn's own words: 'He reported that it was a matter of indifference to you what use we made of the work; that it had served the purpose for which it was written, and you did not care to have anything to do with it further.' My memory does not enable me to verify or qualify this statement, but I can quite believe that I may have used expressions as to the book having served its purpose, etc., which, though not so intended by me, may have fairly led him to the conclusion at which he wished to arrive, and which he reported to his principals. I may say that I was all the time under the belief that this question had been finally settled through Messrs. Macmillan, and so was not on my guard, and glad to talk freely on literary subjects with a well-informed American gentleman. It would have saved all this misunderstanding if he had just asked me point-blank either to consent to or again to refuse the old offer. In that case there could have been no mistake

"However, all may turn out for the best in the long run if Messrs. Ginn (who are prepared, as they tell me, to treat English authors on the same terms as Americans) will throw their influence on the other side into the scale of those who have been for so long endeavoring to bring the United States Legislature to see that their copyright law is not, to put it politely, worthy of a just and enlightened nation.

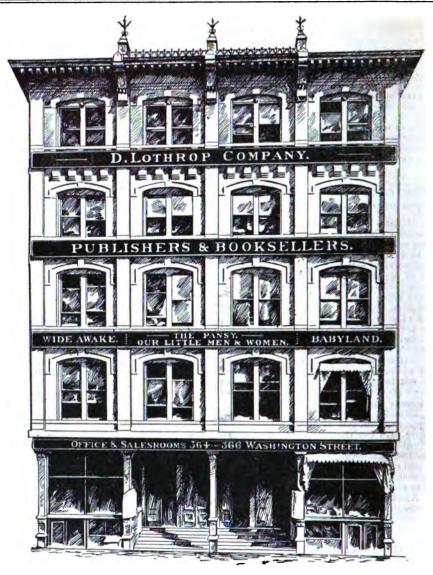

"I am, etc., Thos. Hughes."

D. LOTHROP CO.'S NEW QUARTERS.

The removal made by the D. Lothrop Company early last spring and duly chronicled in these columns has already proved itself a wise departure. The old quarters on Franklin Street were cramped and crowded; they were off the direct line of travel, and just a trifle out of that charmed circle of the book trade that in Boston radiates from the Old Corner Bookstore.

The two buildings which are now occupied by the D. Lothrop Co.—representations of which are presented to our readers in this number of the WEEKLY—are well fitted to meet the require-The manufacturments of a busy book house. ing department consists of a five-story and basement building at 114 to 120 Purchase St. It is roomy and commodious, with a frontage of 50 feet and a depth of 100. To this is added a fireproof 20-feet extension in which the cuts and plates are stored. The basement of this Purchase Street building is used as a stock and press room several large presses having recently been placed therein. On the first floor to the left of the entrance is the office of Mr. E. H. Pennell, who has charge of the wholesale stock and the filling of trade orders. To the right of the entrance is the editorial office of Wide Awake and the other Lothrop magazines, and here Mr. and Mrs. Pratt meet their artists and contributors and make up the monthly issues of their delightful serials for the young. The rear half of this floor is devoted the young. to packing and stock.

On the second floor may be found the advertising department, in charge of Mr. C. S. Le Baron, the office for the control and distribution of the vast number of cuts and electrotypes owned by the company and in charge of Mr. Wayne Whipple, and additional stock-room. The third and fourth floors are devoted entirely to the sheet stock and the binding, in charge of Mr. Stevens. On the top floor are the art department, in charge of Mr. L. J. Bridgman; the mailing and premium rooms, superintended by Mr. Frank E. Saville; and the busy composing-room, of which Mr. A. J. Philpot is foreman. The entire build-Mr. A. J. Philpot is foreman. ing is in charge of Mr. Pennell, and the amount of work already carried to completion beneath its roof is proof at once of careful superintendence and thorough workmanship. During the "rush" season for the issue of new books—not yet entirely passed—much outside composition and presswork has been found necessary, and some of the special art books of the year have been sent to the press-rooms of Berwick & Smith, Rockwell & Churchill, and the Boston Photogravure Co.

The sales building at 364 Washington Street is that simply. No large amount of stock is stored there, only enough being kept on hand for display and the demands of current orders. The show-window is one of the most noticeable and attractive on Washington St. It fronts Bromfield St., and looks directly toward the great gilt dome of the State House. It is on just enough of a turn in the roadway to be visible for blocks down the street, and its display of new books is large and constantly changing. The retail department, in charge of Mr. L. W. Adams, is light and pleasant, and contains a sufficient supply of the current "books of the day" to supplement the large home stock of the company. Here also is the business office of the Interstate Publishing Co., in charge of Mr. Karl H. Goodwin.

At the rear of the store are the business offices and the desks of the manufacturing clerks. These are under the superintendence of Mr. M. H. Lothrop, as are also the numerous travellers that the company keep constantly on the road. In the book-keeper's office sits Mr. L. K. Bowers, the cashier of the house for fully twenty years.

Adjoining the book-keeper's quarters are the private offices of Mr. Daniel Lothrop, the President of the company, and of Mr. Elbridge S. Brooks, the editor to the corporation. Mr. Lothrop is always busy, but always "get-at-able," and the amount of work turned out in a day sometimes appears to the watcher phenomenal.

A portion of the chambers in the upper part of the building are occupied by two well-known publishing firms, Messrs. William Ware & Co. and Messrs. Allyn & Bacon. These concerns were both tenants in the former Lothrop building on Franklin St. Old associations were not severed by removal, as both firms transferred their quarters to the Washington St. building along with the Lothrop Company. The upper floors of this building will doubtless be in time put to some special use demanded by the increasing departments of the house.

The walls of the salesrooms on Washington St. are lined from floor to ceiling with books. Along the left-hand wall, however, a light but serviceable balcony has been thrown out; here are kept the samples of new or forthcoming books for the convenience of travellers and trade visitors; by this balcony, too, much additional and convenient floor space is secured. Both buildings belonging to the company are roomy, attractive, accessible, and convenient. Telephone connection keeps up constant communication, and the tinkle of the electric call-bell is rarely silent. There is neither wasted room nor wasted time in the internal economy of D. Lothrop Company. The influence of the ruling spirit is everywhere apparent, but it is to this constant and unwearying energy on the part of its efficient President, who from small beginnings and by a life of unceasing industry has built up a successful business, that the present strong and secure position of the D. Lothrop Company in the American book trade is due.

MR. PRIME ON AUTHORS' RIGHTS.

MR. W. C. PRIME writes to the N. Y. Journal of Commerce for September 6, the following vigorous outpouring of his full mind on authors' rights:

"Lonesome Lake Cabin, Sept. 2, 1889.
"The accumulation of correspondence and literature relating to copyright, which I found here on my arrival, is the motive-power of this paper.

"So many publishers have been so long in the habit of running their factories and making parts of their fortunes or their livelihood out of raw material which they appropriate without permission of the owners, that their moral senses have become blunted. They honestly think they have a right to get raw material without cost, while other manufacturers have no such right. And occasionally, but, fortunately, very rarely, an outsider comes into the copyright controversy, whose moral senses are so oblique, or who knows so little about the subject, that he defends the practice of getting material without pay to manufacture and sell, as an honorable business practice.

"I propose now to direct attention to a prevalent idea among publishers, which is immoral, while it has about it the show of honor and 'liberality.' I put that word in quotation marks for reasons which will appear. The immoral idea is the common notion of publishers that, when they seize and sell for their own profit the work of an author who has no legal remedy against them, they are under no obligations to pay him, and that they are virtuous, honorable, and benevolent if they voluntarily make the author "a sharer in the profits of the venture." This is a favorite phrase with publishers in these days when foreign authors are unprotected.

Now at the start let us knock this phrase in the head. You and I know the publishing business by long experience. It is an arrant misrepresentation to call it a series of ventures on various books. It is no more so than cotton manufacture is a series of ventures on successive purchases of bales of cotton to be made into goods for sale. Sometimes, but rarely, publishers go into 'ventures' with authors, agreeing to divide profits. But in general the business is like every other manufacturing business, buying raw material, paying for it in gross or by royalties, and making it into goods for the market; some goods selling well, at profit, some selling at less than cost. is like railway business, which runs trains that do not pay as well as those which do. The business is and must be continuous. Some publishers deal in particular lines of goods, certain classes of publications. All publishers must keep up their business, supply customers, keep their names and business before the public, keep their relations with favorite authors even when they write unsalable works, make and sell goods at cost or less than cost to keep the market supplied or to introduce to customers other goods on which there is profit. It is therefore their constant custom to publish books which they do not expect will sell well, which will not pay cost of manufacture. But such books do pay in the business, and their results, at the end of the year's accounts, bring up the publishers' profits, where otherwise there would have been a loss. The case is identically like that of the railroad whose business would go to ruin if it did not run trains when passengers are few as well as when they are many.

"A large portion of the literature which is manufactured and sold by publishers is appropriated and used by them to keep their business going, to keep their presses and compositors and clerks at work, to keep up their relations with customers, to keep their houses before the public, to sustain their prestige as publishers of this or that line of books. When in such case an author is told by a publisher, 'I would have paid you something for your book, but I made no money on it and cannot pay you,' the author is deceived. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the publisher did make money, if not out of that particular book, out of his whole business of which that book was an integral part. Many publishers have failed to look as thoroughly as this into hood.' Now observe:

"(1.) When a publisher proposes to himself or to an author to give the author a share of the profits of his book, he admits that the author has a property in the book.

their relations with authors. I have seen many letters from publishers to authors in which this phrase, or its substance, occurred, as an excuse for not making the author 'a sharer in the profits

the author, 'That publisher is either ignorant of his own business, or guilty of deliberate false-

And in every case I have advised

"(2.) If a publisher, or any man, takes and sells for his own profit in his business that which he admits is the property of another man, without first obtaining the owner's consent, he violates the moral law and is not doing an upright business.

"The moral principle which underlies this whole subject is so plain that any child educated in an honest family can understand it.

"That there may be no mistake about the principle which I affirm, and which I challenge any honest man to dispute, I repeat it distinctly. The common custom of publishers appropriating works of foreign authors and using them in their business as publishers, is not one particle less dishonest because the publisher proposes to pay the author something if he makes a profit on the publication. Look at a case which is precisely parallel. Publishers are manufacturers, precisely as are manufacturers of cotton goods. Neither can obtain raw material except by producing it themselves or by their agents, or by buying, or by stealing it.

"Imagine a cotton manufacturer into whose hands has come a bale of cotton, not his own by purchase or in any other way. It bears on its label the name of the owner, and he can at once communicate with that owner, and say, 'I wish to purchase your bale of cotton.' But no. He turns the bale into his mill to be made into cotton He quiets his conscience by saying to himself that he will keep track of that 'venture' as well as he can, and if the market should be up and he should make a profit on that particular cotton he will write to the owner, 'I appropriated a bale of cotton belonging to you and made it into goods, and I propose to pay you something out of "our venture," the amount to be fixed by myself.' But if he sees no profit on that lot of cotton he will not pay the owner a cent. that cotton manufacturer steal that cotton?

"Your only pretence for denying the parallel-ism must be to deny that an author has any moral ownership of his brain product. You are not a fool, and will not say that. The publisher who takes for his own factory an author's work without first having the author's permission stands side by side with that cotton-stealer. There is no moral difference between them, and the only real difference is in statute laws which protect owners of cotton, and do not give like interna-tional protection to authors. Nor will any honest-minded publisher dream of saying, 'I have a moral right to take for my own business and profit, and publish in any form I please, any work of any author who is not protected against me by law, and pay him much or little or nothing as I please.' He could not retain self-respect if he avowed such sentiments. The publishing trade is not founded on any such degrading and dis-It recognizes the graceful principle as this. moral right of the owner of literary property to contract by bargain and sale with the manufacturer in all respects like the owner of cotton or wool or any raw material. But when publishers so constantly assume the right to appropriate literary commodities for their own money-making business, when they go before the public and before Congress claiming to have a vested interest in all the works authors may hereafter write, and demanding laws giving them a perpetual mortgage on all future authorship, the publishing business cannot complain if its reputation sinks to the same level with the cotton manufacturers who steal the raw material with which to run their factories and supply customers with goods.

"There can be no doubt that many publishers who intend to be honorable men have gotten unconsciously into the confirmed habit of considering authors who are not protected by copyright as subjects of free plunder. The absence of law to protect a foreign author in his property has led to that very common and very false idea that what is not against a statute law is not against the moral law. At would be easy to name scores of wrongs, sins, crimes against moral law and against society, which are not forbidden by statute law. Is it any less stealing to rob your neigh-bor's bird-cages of his pet birds than it is to rob his hen-roost? Will it save your reputation to plead before the public that birds are fera natura, and the law does not recognize property in them? Our law regards wild animals and foreign literature in the same aspect. It recognizes no property in either. But it is stealing to take either without the owner's consent. And here let me say that in treating this subject at various times I have sought diligently to avoid arousing feeling by the use of such words as stealing, robbery, piracy. But it is a remarkable fact that the English language contains no word to define the act of a publisher in taking another man's property for his own use, except these words. Publishers who practise this style of business would do well to invent some new word, if they are offended at old English phraseology.

A'Among the papers on my table are several cases which aptly illustrate this whole subject. One is a case in which American publishers have, without the British author's assent, not only republished his book, but have made alterations in the text to suit it to the market for which they publish it. It would be idle to waste time in commenting on this. I refer to it only as illustrating the point that publishers regard authors as persons whom they may treat as they please. American publishers hold that where a British author speaks of a person drinking ale, it is right to change the liquor for an American market. On the same reasoning the British publisher is at liberty to republish the work of an American author, and make the characters, or for that matter, the author himself, drink rum, if the publisher thinks the book will sell better for the change. Here publishers claim ownership of authors' reputations. They assert the right to make the clergyman profane and the infidel prayerful, if only his book will sell better.

"Another case before me is one of which the Journal of Commerce has already made mention. A British publisher printed 'Fishin' Jimmy,' a story by an American lady, copyrighted here, and widely popular. He wrote to her, sending some copies of his reprint, and informing her that if the book sold so as to require a new edition, he would make any alterations or corrections she might wish. He said nothing about paying for it. The coolness of such a letter was beyond comment. It fully illustrated the view which the publisher takes of the unprotected author. implied, not only that the publisher saw no wrong in appropriating another person's property for his own profit, but that he thought the author amply paid by the honor done in republishing the book and the privilege offered of making corrections in future editions. It recognized the author's property, and simply, said 'I have seized on it for my own profit.'
"This letter came into my hands, and it was such

"This letter came into my hands, and it was such a valuable document in the history of international robbery for want of copyright that it was circulated widely among people interested in that subject. I gave you a copy of it for publication, and you printed it. I also gave a copy to the Hartford Courant, than which no American journal has higher authority in literature. That paper published it with appropriate comment.

"Among my papers I find in a later issue of the Courant a defence of the British publisher over the signature 'Dean Sage.' In defending a wrongdoer it is unwise to insult, as does this writer, the person wronged. It is bad enough for American authors to be robbed by foreign publishers without the addition of offensive letters in newspapers from American apologists. In this case the only decent thing to do was for the British publisher to write a frank apology to the author for his letter, if any explanation were possible. Instead of this he remains silent while his American friend adds insult to the injury, by charging the American author with 'instigating vague and unjust charges' (to wit, the printing of the remarkable letter). Let me repeat just here that if any one has any fault to find with the making of that letter public I am his man. I did It and the American defence of it furnish a most valuable illustration of the subject I am now treating, namely, the low view of morality which is prevalent concerning the rights of authors and their subserviency to publishers. It is only because of that illustration that I refer to it.

"The American writer says the British publisher sent copies of his reprint (published at fourpence) broadcast to the press; that the result of this 'gratuitous advertising' was that the book had not sold enough copies yet to show a profit. What a refreshing word to an author is that phrase 'gratuitous advertising.' It is not only an honor to an American author to be republished in a cheap fourpenny edition, but the republisher adds a gratuity to the author by adver-tising his wares. Every one knows that publishers send books to newspapers for notice purely as a method of advertising, and publishers know it is the cheapest possible advertising. This publisher reprinted the American book for his own profit. He understands his own business. and advertised it to make money for himself, and these words 'gratuitous advertising' are nonsense.

"The defence goes on to say that this publisher is an honorable man, and that American authors whose works have been republished by him 'can testify to his liberality in sharing with them any profit which may result from the venture.' This is the old stock phrase. The notable word in that sentence is the word 'liberality.' It savors of the same pestilent immorality; the idea that a publisher's dealings with an unprotected author are not regulated by moral law, not governed as moral duties, but are purely questions of 'liber-ality.' Think of the cotton manufacturer who has stolen a bale of cotton. Shall we call it 'liberality' if on making money out of the goods he allows the owner of the cotton he stole to be a sharer in the profit? But if he makes no money? Oh, he was a fool for stealing the cotton, it was poor stuff, and surely the owner has no ground of complaint.

"This is the sum total of the American's defence of the British publisher. He adds that if the American author had written to the British publisher she would have ascertained 'the facts above stated.' Could you have a better illustration of the manner in which authors are regarded by publishers and their friends? Can you suggest a more insolent suggestion than this to an American author? A man finds your lost watch with your name engraved on it, and pockets it. What are you advised to do? Write to him politely and ask him what he is going to do about it! You may expect a reply at once that he has turned it into his general business, and if he makes money on it you may rely on his well-known 'liberality' toward those whose property he habitually takes without their leave for his own purposes. This single bit of advice to an author is ample illustration of the immorality and dishonesty prevalent in the publishing business, and of the contemptuous view which some publishers take of authors and authorship.

"I do not expect to convert any publishers or accomplish any good beyond that of keeping the readers of the Journal of Commerce informed of the progressive honesty or dishonesty of the world in which they are living. I conclude by stating a few plain principles, which no honest man will dispute.

"The author of a work is, by moral law, as completely the owner of that work as the grower of a bale of cotton or a bag of wool is owner of his produce.

"No manufacturer has right to take to his own use the cotton, the wool, or the literature, without first consulting the owner and making a contract of purchase with him.

"It is no excuse in any of the cases to say, 'If I don't steal it some other man will.'

"It is no excuse to say the owner is a foreigner. "It is no excuse to say, 'I will pay him something if I make money in my business out of his goods.'"

THE BELFORD, CLARKE & CO. FAILURE.

Not quite unexpectedly comes the news of the suspension of Belford, Clarke & Co., of Chicago and New York. For some time it has been supposed that this firm was bearing a heavier load than its strength could bear, but as great faith was put in the pluck and business capacity of the several members of the firm, it was hoped, at least by those most interested in its affairs, that they would pull through. But owing to a temporary embarrassment in meeting the demands made upon them by creditors who were unwilling to extend their credit, the break came. On September 23 the Sheriff took possession of their New York branch on an attachment for $25,000 granted by Judge Barrett, of the Supreme Court, in favor of Gerald F. Shepard, to whom the claim was assigned by the First National Bank of Chicago. The attachment was granted on the ground that Belford, Clarke & Co. are a foreign corporation, the headquarters being in Chicago. The branch in Brooklyn was also seized by the Sheriff. On the same day, judgments were entered against them in the Circuit Court of Chicago for $20,885 in favor of the First National Bank, and for $13,000 in favor of S. A. Maxwell & Co. Attachments were issued; but shortly after the Chicago store was seized by the Sheriff. Thomas C. Hammond, of the firm of Walker, Oakley & Co., leather merchants, of Chicago, was appointed receiver by Judge Shepard. Mr. Hammond, who will run the business, is at work on an inventory; until that is ready there will be no change in the present status of affairs.

The present firm of Belford, Clarke & Co., organized afer the downfall of Rose, Belford & Co., was established in Chicago March, 1879, with Mr. A. Belford as President and Mr. J. Clarke as Secretary and Treasurer. In January, 1880, they became involved, and settled at 40 cents on the dollar. The following May they incorporated the business as a stock company, under the laws of Illinois, with a nominal capital of $10,-000. In 1881 the company became involved by the failure of John W. Lovell, of New York, but succeeded in pulling through without much loss. In February, 1882, the company reported an increase in its capital stock to $50,000. Great efforts were now made to extend the business by the establishment of retail stores, or agencies, in the largest cities of the United States, and in connection with the dry-goods houses, all of which The New involved a large amount of capital. York house was established in 1883. In March, 1884, the capital stock was increased to $250,000, of which it is claimed $200,000 has since been paid up. By a fire in May, 1886, the firm claimed to have lost about $150,000, and a subsequent failure of a business connection in San Francisco cost the company $70,000 more.

Mr. Newman, attorney for the creditors, says that in his opinion the assets of the insolvent firm, consisting of stock accounts, plates, cuts, dies, copyrights, etc., would amount to about $200,000 and the liabilities to about $350,000 or $400,000. The principal creditors are the Trow Printing Company, over $150,000; Donohue & Henneberry, $75,000; the first National Bank of Chicago, $30,000; S. A. Maxwell, $13,000; and Buckley, Dunton & Co., paper dealers, for about $25,-000. Prior to the appointment of the receiver, Donohue & Henneberry, who are among the largest creditors, filed a bill in which it is stated that the insolvent corporation's capital was $500,-000, of which only $200,000 had been paid in.

It was impossible at the time of our going to press to get any information regarding the financial condition of affairs further than that the nominal assets amount to about $200,000, and the liabilities to nearly double that of the assets. Mr. Robert L. Belford, who has charge of the New York establishment, is reported to have said to a N. Y. Tribune reporter: "I ascribe our misfortunes mainly to the non-existence of an international copyright law, which is practically beggaring the publishers of the two countries. When the system of piracy came into vogue, we, like other houses, had to adopt it in sheer self-defence, but the publication of English works has increased a hundred-fold and the result has been that if we reprinted a work from the other side, fifty other houses were doing the same thing with the same work, and no one but the printer and binder reaped a cent of profit.

Mr. Newman, when asked what would be the result of this failure with regard to owners of manuscripts that had been accepted, but not paid for, and which were now in the possession of the firm, said: "An effort will be made to obtain leave from the courts to utilize these things as much as possible, until the firm is in a condition to resume business. Wherever these manuscripts are being made into books, or otherwise being published, the work will be carried forward the same as if there had been no failure. It is the intention to convert them into the assets of the firm, but the rights of the owners of the manuscript will not in any wise be affected."

As a result of the failure of Belford, Clarke & Co., Julius Hart, of 733 Broadway, has been visited by the Sheriff with an attachment for $2400 in favor of the Worthington Co. Hart, however, claims the business under a bill of sale from her husband, made a week ago. Mr. Hart was formerly manager for Belford, Clarke & Co., and succeeded to a branch of their business in May, 1887. He also conducted book departments in dry-goods stores in Newark, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, and other Despatches from San Francisco state that Clarke & Spengler, booksellers, of San Francisco, had been attached for $12,900. They succeeded to the business of Belford, Clarke & Co., in San Francisco, on January 1 last, giving the latter firm notes for $50,000.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A PROTEST AGAINST NET TEACHERS' PRICE-LISTS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23, 1889.

Those booksellers who deal at all in schoolbooks are unjustly suffering from the action of many of the school-book publishers giving trade prices to teachers. These publishers state that they regret this condition of affairs; but offer as an excuse, that some other publisher does it, and, because it is done, they are compelled to do it,

In other words, they submit to the exactions of Sunday-school teachers; allow other publishers to dictate their rule of business; stultify themselves thereby in making their net teachers' pricelists false statements; deprive either themselves or the legitimate bookseller of the difference between the net teachers' and trade prices, and so injure the retail bookseller that he is crowded out of the school-book trade to the detriment of his general business.

The only good reason why this state of affairs should exist seems to be that the publisher is brought into direct contact with the teacher. But, as he is compelled to open more accounts, as they claim that they do not want to give teachers trade prices, and do so only to protect themselves, it seems to me a remedy might be found by the publishers taking the matter into consideration collectively and coming to an agreement among themselves (as they have in the matter of agents) to discontinue the practice which either cuts down their own profits or deprives the retail bookseller of his.

I bring this matter to your house individually, and shall send copies of it to the other schoolbook publishers and the trade publications. trust that if you are in favor of discontinuing the practice that you will take some action in the matter at once, and I would suggest a meeting of the different publishers to discuss the question.

Yours truly, W. R. JENKINS.

"Yours of the 18th is at hand. We wish that teachers would take books entirely on their merits and not haggle for terms, but unfortunately your experience does not show that your views are correct in all cases.

"By declining to yield to the demand for extra discount from list prices we lost the sales of our books in some large schools that use many books, after the Principal had stated to us that other publishers were making discounts to them. We wish it were not so, but we are confident that these special schools to which we refer buy of the houses you name at a larger discount than we give them. We wish that the bookstores should supply all the schools in their neighborhood, but all school-book publishers are daily receiving demands from schools for the same discount that they give to dealers, claiming that the Principals of schools can decide what books can be used, and if you do not give them the best discount they will use some other Almost every mail brings us some such We regret it, but we cannot help it."

Below is printed the enclosure referred to in the foregoing communication:

"DEAR SIRS: Write to ask you to make a change your terms of discount. You only give us ten in your terms of discount. per cent. off, whereas we think you should give sixteen and two-thirds per cent. off. We are in the same place of dealers. In fact, we are dealers in both books and stationery (besides goods of different kinds), and we sell directly. Other houses in your city give us terms asked of you, namely, sixteen and two-thirds per cent. We suppose you will do the same by us. Please let us hear from you."

PERSONAL NOTES.

Mr. Sidney E. Bridgman, the senior of the old and well-known bookselling firm of Northampton, Mass., married on the 4th inst. Mrs. H. C. Paddock, of Aurora, Ill. We wish the couple many years of happiness together.

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM WILKIE COLLINS.

WILLIAM WILKIE COLLINS, the master novelist. died, after long suffering, at his residence in London, September 23. Wilkie Collins was born in London in January, 1824, his father being William Collins, R.A., a well-known painter, and his mother a sister of Mrs. Carpenter, who is said to have been one of the best of the female portrait painters of her time. He was educated at a private school, and after spending two years with his parents in Italy was placed with a firm in the tea trade, to remain four years and learn the business. He abandoned commerce after a time, however, and turned to law. He was a student at Lincoln's Inn when his father died, and his first contribution to literature was then made, being a biography of his father in two volumes, with selections from his journals and correspondence. This was published in 1848, and from that time Mr. Collins made literature his profession.

His first novel was printed in 1850, and was called "Antonina, or, the fall of Rome: a romance of the fifth century." "Rambles Beyond Railways, or, notes in Cornwall taken afoot," published in 1851, wandered from the track of romance, in which his successes were destined to be so phenomenal, but in 1852 he was back in fic-"Mr. Wray's Cash Box, or, the mask and the mystery: a Christmas sketch." "Hide and Seek" was presented in 1854, and at about the same time he became a contributor to the magazine, Household Words, in which "After Dark" and one of his most successful works," The Dead Secret." were originally published. Several of his novels, including "The Woman in White" and "No Name," were published originally in All the Year Round. "Armadale" and many of his subsequent stories were printed in American magazines before appearing in book-form, and he is said to have received enormous prices for some of these. "The Moonstone," "Man and Wife," "The New Magdalen," and "The Law and the Lady," are other works of his that have had wide circula-tion. His principal books have passed through many editions, both in England and in the United States, and have also been translated into French, Italian, German, Dutch, Danish, and Russian. The works of very few modern writers have had a greater circulation or acquired more general popularity than those of Mr. Collins. Mr. Collins also made occasional incursions into the field of dramatic writing, but never with marked success. His plays, "The Lighthouse" and "The Frozen Deep," were produced by amateurs, Charles Dickens being in the cast of the latter, and appearing in a private performance before the Queen as well as in the public performances for charity. A dramatic version of "The Moonwritten by Mr. Collins himself, was produced at the Olympic Theatre in 1877, and in 1883 his play, "Rank and Riches," brought out at the Adelphi Theatre, was a complete failure.

JESSE WENTWORTH PAYSON, the chief author of the Payson, Dunton & Scribner series of copybooks, died on the 17th inst., at Hyde Park, Mass., at the age of seventy-four years. He was one of the originators of the lithograph copy for common-school writing-books, the use of which became general. He was a native of Hope, Me. From 1861 to 1871 he was Professor at the Polytechnic Institute in Brooklyn, N. Y., and after that, for a number of years, Secretary of the Park Bank, of the same city.

DR. GEORGE H. COOK, State Geologist and Vice-President of Rutgers College, died at New Brunswick September 22. He was born at Hanover, N. J., in 1817. The topographical maps of New Jersey which have been published under his supervision have been adjudged to be among the best of any published by the different States. The last of the series was recently issued, and Dr. Cook was at the time of his death engaged on his final report. Two volumes had been prepared, and are now in print. In 1864 the State Scientific College was attached to Rutgers, and Dr. Cook, while retaining his professorship, became Vice-President of the college.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THE French newspapers speak of a rumor that is said to be abroad to the effect that Amélie Rives and Catulle Mendes, a Parisian novelist, are to collaborate a novel together.

"SIX Months' Residence at the Court of the Crown Prince and the German Emperor" is the title of a book which Sir Morell Mackenzie intends to write for publication after the death of the Empress Frederick.

GEORGE TRUMAN KERCHEVAL.—Lucian B. Gilmore of the Detroit (Mich.) Public Library writes us that "the author of 'Lorin Mooruck' is Miss A. Winnifred Jennings, of this city," and adds: "Many like yourself make a mistake in the spelling of Winnifred, and none, so far as I have seen, give the 'A.' The above is correct, as I derive my information from a member of the family."

The literary partnership of nearly half a century between the two Alsatian novelists, MM. Erckmann and Chatrian, has been broken irrevocably. The quarrel has been going on for some time and is ascribed to differences growing out of the returns for the plays which were taken from the stories. M. Erckmann promises a book in which will be related the whole history of his collaboration with M. Chatrian, and including the separation.

L. B. WALFORD.—A correspondent who signs himself "Broad-Brim" writes the following humorously-worded correction to the London Bookseller: "Esteemed Friend—It can be hardly possible that thou can'st know everything; let me, therefore, I pray thee, try to set thee to rights about the sex of the writer of 'Mr. Smith,' 'The Baby's Grandmother,' etc. Mrs. L. B. Walford is the wife of Mr. Walford, partner in one of the great paper-making houses, Millington & Hutton, and, though men of my faith heed not these vanities, is the daughter of Scotland's premier baronet."

HERBERT SPENCER, according to a London correspondent of the N. Y. Sun, has returned to London with his autobiography completed up to the present time. It is not to be published until after his death, but he is making preparations for it to be produced then on both sides of the Atlantic simultaneously. The manuscript has been put into type, and three proofs only are taken, all of which are sent to him. Before the type is distributed two moulds are taken for stereotyping, one of which is to be sent to America, where Spencer is more widely read than here, to be used immediately upon his death.

IOURNALISTIC NOTES.

DONALD G. MITCHELL, the author of "The Reveries of a Bachelor," who has written so seldom of late, will contribute the end paper to the October Scribner's, entitled "A Scattering Shot at Some Ruralities," in which he will make a number of pertinent reflections on the decay of New England farm and village life.

School is the title of a new educational journal which will be published weekly from No. 10 E. 14th St., N. Y. City. It will be edited by H. S. Fuller, an experienced journalist and one who is entirely familiar with everything that pertains to the public schools. School intends to cover in some degree every department of its chosen field and to offer something that will be acceptable to every worker in that field.

Ex-Postmaster-General Thomas L. James has prepared an explanation of needed postal reforms, which will appear in the October Forum. Mr. James declares that the railway mail service is twenty years behind the times and ought to be very greatly improved; that small offices near to one another ought to be consolidated under one management, so as to save expense; and that ocean postage ought greatly to be cheapened.

With the opening number of Volume X. of Good Housekeeping, beginning November 9, Mrs. Helen Campbell will have the editorial charge of a department to be entitled "Woman's Work and Wages." Good Housekeeping has been identified from the beginning with every interest of home life, but proposes now to include the no less vital ones associated with every form of woman's work outside the home. It desires also to open up avenues for those who must work at home, and to this end invites cooperation of Women's Exchanges and Women's Clubs in general throughout the country. To this end Mrs. Campbell invites the sending of reports of any special organs published by clubs or exchanges, and any detail which can be of value or interest to woman workers as a whole.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ASPEN, COL.—Carberry & Beard, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

Boston, Mass.-Mr. Charles H. Ames withdraws from the Prang Educational Co. to become a member of the firm of D. C. Heath & Co. Mr. Ames was graduated at Amherst College in 1870. and since that time has been connected with the educational work of James R. Osgood & Co. and The Prang Educational Company, and for the past eight years has been a member of the latter In connection with the change the Prang Educational Company have issued the following handsome acknowledgment of Mr. Ames' services: "Mr. Ames' withdrawal from our company is a matter of sincere regret. He has been identified with our educational business from its beginning, and has contributed in no small measure to its success. That the study of drawing in education is now so generally recognized as one of the fundamental studies in public schools, is due in no slight degree to the intelligence and earnestness with which for so many years he has presented the subject to teachers and school officers throughout the country. Mr. Ames only leaves us to engage in a broader line of educational publishing than is offered in the special business of our company, and he carries with him to his new field of labor not only our respect, but also our sincere personal regards and best wishes for his success."

BOSTON, MASS.—A. A. Waterman & Co., booksellers, have taken part of H. H. Carter & Co.'s paper and stationery store on Beacon Street.

CHICAGO, ILL.—M. S. Rider, who has half of Barker's second-hand bookstore on Madison Street, as a stationery store, has opened another store at 116 La Salle Street, which is very prettily and daintily fitted up.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Louis Schick, publisher, bookseller, and stationer on Clark Street, near the bridge, has sold out his stationery stock and good-will to McDonald, one of Chicago's old stationers, but who has been out of the business for several years.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE ELDER PUBLISHING Co., Chicago, have nearly ready "Birds and Butterflies," a book for boys and girls, by M. G. Musgrave.

T. B. Peterson & Bros. again call attention to their twenty-five-cent series of novels, to which they have just added Zola's "A Girl's Love."

"THE DESERTER," Capt. Charles King's popular military novel, is being arranged for the stage by Charles Townsend, author of "The Woven Web" and other plays.

ADMIRAL DAVID D. PORTER'S forthcoming book is to be entitled "Arthur Merton." The title was given incorrectly in D. Appleton & Co.'s advertisement in the last issue of the Publishers' Weekly.

LEA BROTHERS & Co. will shortly publish a "Text-Book of Chemical Diagnosis," by Dr. Rudolph Von Jacksch, translated by James Cagney, M.D., and William Sterling, M.D., in one handsome 8vo volume with numerous illustrations.

DR. J. C. STOCKBRIDGE, Providence, R. I., announces that the price of his annotated catalogue of the "Harris Collection of American Poetry" has been reduced forty per cent. Of the large edition but 50 copies are left; of the octavo edition about 400 copies remain for sale.

A. J. HOLMAN & Co., Philadelphia, have recently issued a Family Bible in the Swedish language with notes by H. M. Melin. The first edition was taken up almost at once, many of them having been purchased by Swedes here to be sent to their friends and families at home.

THE Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegram will publish shortly in book-form an extended history of the Johnstown disaster, by the editor of that paper. The volume will be handsomely illustrated with portraits and views and sold by subscription, the net proceeds being used for the benefit of sufferers by the flood.

Funk & Wagnalls in The Voice for August 29 issue a card in which they announce that they have ordered the suppression, and the destruction of all bound volumes and of all sheets in stock, of Alfred Ayres' "The Mentor." The reason given is that the author in that book gives advice favorable to drinking wines, etc. The book will be revised before republication.

A NATIONAL pageant in honor of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe was presented at the Hartford (Conn.) Opera House on the afternoon of September 24. The series of tableaux was intended to give a historical representation of the progress of the country in all those things which pertain to liberty, thought, and action. The historian was Mary A. Livermore, whose narrative had frequent references to the cause of woman's rights.

The Bancroft-Whitney Co., San Francisco, Cal., have issued a "Brief Digest to the first six volumes of American State Reports, together with a table of cases reported." The volume is an index to "American Decisions" and "Digests" (103 volumes); "American Reports" and "Digests" (63 volumes); and to the "American State Reports" (7 volumes). It is more than a simple index—it is rather a dictionary of law—a proposition of law being stated in each paragraph, though put in as few words as possible.

A. LOVELL & Co., New York, have published the two concluding parts (Nos. 1 and 6) of the "Graphic System of Object Drawing," by Hobart B. Jacobs and Augusta L. Brower. This system, which is based on the methods of the best Paris art teachers, is designed to give the pupil a clear idea of form, to help him to express that idea on paper, and to give him command of his pencil, so that he can draw the objects about him. The plan is quite simple, and a manual for teachers makes the system plain even to teachers unskilled in the art. The price per dozen is $1.20. A sample set with manual will be sent for examination for sixty cents.

A NOTABLE instance of successful translation is that of the series of Great French Writes, published by A. C. McClurg & Co., of which Octave Thanet thus writes: "Each succeeding volume in the series emphasizes the good fortune of the publishers in their translator. A really extraordinary lucidity of mind, which allows each writer to show, through the medium of translation, all his own individual peculiarities of treatment and style, is in this case joined to a felicity of rendering the spirit of style, which is unequalled by any other of our translators to-day." The gentleman thus complimented is Prof. Melville Anderson, of the Iowa State University, one of the brightest and most scholarly of our younger literary men.

BELFORD, CLARKE & Co. since the issue of our Fall Announcement Number have sent us the following announcements. Whether, in view of the suspension of this house, these books will be issued we have not been able to learn. Mr. Newman, the attorney of the firm, thinks that they will be able to obtain leave from the courts to utilize as much as possible the manuscripts which are now in the various stages of manufacture. In fiction they announce "Astarté," telling the story of the struggle of a young poet against the wiles of the false woman, Astarté, translated by Reuben B. Davenport from the French of Alfred Delvan; "A Vagabond's Honor," by Ernest De Lancy Pierson; "I Will Ne'er Consent," by Dolores Marbourg; "A College Widow," by Frank Howard Howe; "Couldn't Say No," by John Habberton, the author of "Helen's Babies," a novel upon the influence of heredity; "The Evil that Men Do," a novel of tenementhouse life by Edgar Fawcett; a new novel by Edmund Kirk; and "Fatal Fiddle," a series of dramatic tales, by E. Heron-Allen. "Five Years of Panama," by Walford Nelson, will describe the isthmus from geographical, sanitary, and philosophical points of view; and "Oo: adventures in Orbello Land," by Chares Lotin Hildreth, will tell in an exciting manner of the discovery of a wonderful subterranean city of tornados, quicksands, journeys through deserts, etc., etc.

HENRY C. McCook, of the Academy of Natural Sciences, Nineteenth and Race Streets, Philadelphia, announces that he is now prepared to issue his natural history of the habits and industry of our orbweaving spider fauna, under the general title of "American Spiders and Their Spinning Work." It embraces studies extending over more than fifteen years, and will be printed in three quarto volumes. The first two volumes will contain the author's personal observations, studies, and illustrations of the habits and industry of spiders. Volume III, will contain the systematic part of the work, and embrace descriptions of the orbweavers of the United States, illustrated by a number of fine lithographic plates, painted by hand in the colors of nature. The volumes will be profusely illustrated, wholly from nature, the number of engravings in the first volume alone exceeding two hundred. The language will be as free as possible from technical terms, and as the matter principally concerns the life history of the animals, the chief contents of the work can be readily followed by any intelligent and sympathetic reader. This is especially true of Volume II. The publication of such a considerable work has involved a large expense, and as the circulation is necessarily limited to important scientific societies, leading public libraries, and a small circle of private individuals, the author has been compelled to undertake the entire work and charges of publication. The number of prints will be absolutely limited to five hundred, but an edition of two hundred and fifty copies, which will be known as the Asthor's Edition, will now be issued; and the price of the volumes has been fixed, as nearly as could be estimated, at the simple cost of publication. price for the entire set of three volumes will be $30 for colored plates, or $25 for uncolored plates. No volume will be sold separately. The first volume will be delivered this fall; the plates. second volume, shortly thereafter; and the third volume, which is already in a good state of progress, in the early part of 1800.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & Co. will shortly publish, under the title of "Religion: a dialogue, and other essays," a selection from Schopenhauer's "Parerga und Paralipomena," translated by Mr. T. B. Saunders, CASSELL & Co. have in press an important work on New Zealand by Edward Wakefield, who has held many high official positions under the New Zealand government, now being one of the commissioners for that region at the Paris Exposition. It is to be entitled "New Zealand After Fifty Years."

THE BORSENVEREIN, of Leipzig, has decided to have during the winter months classes for the instruction of booksellers' assistants in addition to those already held for apprentices. The instruction will include the English and French languages, the laws and customs of the book trade, and book-keeping by double entry.

DAYS. FLORIDA

By MARGARET DELAND.

Author of " John Ward, Preacher," "The Old Garden, and Other Verses," etc.

Illustrated by Louis K. Harlow. 8vo, cloth extra, $4.00; half crushed levant morocco, git top. $7.00; tree calf, gilt edges, $8.00; full levant morocco, gilt edges, $10.00. By the popular author of " John Ward, Preacher."

This is a charming holiday book and will be sure to delight every one. It contains 16 fuilpage plates (4 in colors and 2 etched) and 40 illustrations in the text.

CONTENTS .- THE TOWN: St. Augustine. DAYBREAK, NOON, NIGHT. THE COUNTRY: Along the St. John's River. THE RIVER. THE WOODS AND SWAMPS. THE MEN.

A writer in the Critic says:

"This is a delightful book, full of sentiment and color of the sunny land which it describes with a picturesqueness in keeping with its enchanting scenery and romantic associations. There is nothing of the guide-book in the volume; in fact, no direct mention is made in it of the places which are familiar to tourists in this region, but the art with which they are depicted makes them more vivid to the reade than if they were labelled in the conventional manner. The book is a series of essays wherein what is most a racteristic in the country and its inhabitants is brought out in a sympathetic spirit, and the author's keen eye for the poetic aspects of the subject is seen in the way in which it is colored by her delicate fancy.

"The pencil has worthily supplemented the pen in 'Florida Days,' Louis K. Harlow, an artist of fine powers, having devoted especial care to bringing the scenes limned by the author before the eyes of her readers. As his sketches were made on the spot, they have a naturalness to which his sympathetic observation give a poetic charm. The four colored plates in the volume glow with the light of Fl. da. The beautifully decorated cover of the book appropriately displays the palmetto leaf."

Among the full-page plates are the following:

The Old Gates (colored plate). St. Augustine from the Island (etching). Old Spanish Houses, St. Augustine. Fort Marion (colored plate). A Street in St. Augustine.

Orackers Fishing. Live Oak (colored plate). A Back Yard in St. Augustine. An Old House (etching). Palmettos on the St. John's (colored plate).

NOTES IN SEASON.

BRENTANO'S will publish shortly a collection of papers on technical and historical subjects under the title of "Military Miscellanies," by Gen. J. B. Fry, U. S. A.

Cassell & Co. make the interesting announcement that they will publish shortly a volume of "Orations and After-Dinner Speeches," by Chauncey M. Depew. There is no more pleasantly familiar name in this country than that of the author, who has been the orator of almost every important public occasion for the last ten years, and whose speeches have won for him a world-wide reputation. Very few of these have ever been printed in their entirety, and many of them have only been dealt out in fragments by the daily papers. A steel portrait of Mr. Depew will preface the volume.

ROBERTS BROS. have just ready "Louisa M. Alcott—her life, letters, and journals," edited by Ednah D. Cheney, illustrated with portraits, and a view of the Alcott house in Concord; the third volume of Lulu's Library, by Louisa M. Alcott, containing her interesting "Recollections of My Childhood," written shortly before her death; "A Few More Verses," an entirely new collection, by Susan Coolidge: "Just Sixteen," a new volume of stories uniform with "What Katy Did," etc.; "Grandma's Rhymes and Chimes for Children," a selection of new nursery rhymes, by one of the most popular American authors, fully illustrated and handsomely bound; "The Kingdom of Coins," a tale for children of all ages, by John Bradley Gilman, illustrated by Frank T. Merrill.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. publish to-day "A Summer Journey to Alaska," by Muturin M. Ballou, who describes in a most interesting manner not only the resources and features of the country and people of Alaska, but also the wonders of the Yellowstone Park and the marvellous country along the Canadian Pacific Railway;" The Reconstruction of Europe," a sketch of the diplomatic and military history of Continental Europe. from the rise to the fall of the Second Empire, by Harold Murdock, with an introduction by John Fiske; also the first two volumes of the Scientific Papers of Asa Gray, selected by Charles Sprague Sargent, comprising reviews of works on botany and related subjects, 1834-1887, and essays and biographical sketches, 1841-1886. They will publish next week the pretty two-volume edition of the "Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table." It is promised in beautiful type, tasteful binding, and with steel-engraved title-pages. Miss Lucia T. Ames' novel, "Me-moirs of a Millionaire," comes very opportunely when the public is engaged as never before in thinking on social questions; and her story, which suggests some excellent uses for wealth, is likely to find eager readers. Rev. Julius H. Ward's little book, "The Church in Modern Society," is an attempt to show what influence the Church is entitled to exert, why it fails now to exert it, and how it may regain its The new edition of the Atlost prerogative. lantic Index, affording ready access to the varied riches of the sixty-two volumes of the Atlantic Monthly, will be welcome to many. Two new volumes in the Illustrated Library Edition of Thackeray's Works are just ready, "Christmas Thackeray's Works are just ready, 'Stories" and "Roundabout Papers."

PERSONAL NOTES.

MR. FRANK M. GREGORÝ—formerly the Secretary of the Salmagundi Club—one of our most popular illustrators and a water-color artist of more than average merit, has engaged with White & Allen to undertake the supervision of their Art Department. All illustrations used in their publications will be executed under his direction, and in future he will work exclusively for them. Mr. Gregory is known as the illustrator of the superb copy of Goethe's Faust, published by White & Allen last year, and of a very handsome edition of Sheridan's "Rivals" to be issued very shortly by the same firm.

"Within the enemy's lines." like the preceding and first book of this series, treats of incidents of the late war; this story opens at a more advanced stage of the Rebellion, and tells of a second and equally daring attempt of the Southerners to capture the yacht Bellevite. The same characters that figure in "Taken by the enemy" act in the present volume; one of them, a Confederate officer, conspires against a northern heiress. The book is written from a northern standpoint, although there is nothing offensive to the southern side of the question; it is bound in parti-colors with a laurel wreath surmounting the badges of both armies.

The author first defines the word "trust" as applied to business combinations; he then takes up the subject of trusts and monopolies in manufacturing industries; then monopolies of mineral wealth; monopolies of transportation and communication; municipal monopolies; monopolies in trade; those depending on the government for their origin and support, and monopolies in the labor market. He then discusses the theory of universal competition and the laws of modern competition, and the evils due to monopoly and intense competition, and finally suggests remedies for the evils of monopoly and practical plans for their control.

Baldwin, Ja. Mark. Handbook of psychology; senses and intellect. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1889. c. 12+343 p. O. cl., $2.25.

The science of psychology is in a state of such enthusiastic and productive specialism, that the author hopes no book will meet the requirements of higher education for more than a generation. "The present volume is the first part of a general view of the mind in its three aspects, the Emotions and Will being treated separately in a second volume which I hope to publish in the near future. . . By throwing the more difficult and abstract points of discussion into smaller print in the text, I have endeavored to draw a line of demarcation for a more general or a more detailed course of instruction.

The 'Further problems for study,' at the end of each chapter are intended to indicate partially unexplored fields in which students may engage themselves in an original way."—Prefect. The author is Professor of Philosophy in Lake Forest University, Ill. Index.

A series of discourses delivered in the Church of the Strangers, N. Y., in the spring of 1888. They are based upon the Epistle of James, its teachings being adapted to men's surroundings in this day. The book is not meant to be profound, but was written more for "business men, workingmen, busy women, young people and simple souls than for the learned." Its broad charity may be judged from its dedication to a Jewish Rabbi and a Christian Bishop.

On the death of Diana Wentworth's father, her uncle offers a home to her mother and herself. The young girl is too proud to accept it and is also giad to leave her mother, with whom her life has never been peaceful. She becomes a governess in Rastera Prussia. Here she meets John Garthwaite, a well-known engineer, who exercises a marked influence upon her unformed character. The key-note of the story is the old English question of race and birth versus personal character and success.

"The epic poem of Gudrun is one of the most important early literary works of the German race. It is attributed to the latter part of the twelfth or the beginning of the thirteenth century, and to a date a little subsequent to that of the Nibelungen Lied. . . . The scene of the poem is laid principally on the shores of the North Sea, and includes Ireland and Normandy, as well as #Alland Denmark and Ericaland. the North Sea, and includes Ireland and Normandy, as well as Holland, Denmark, and Friesland. The poem is founded upon the themes of love and war, and properly consists of three parts. The first portion, embracing four tales, relates the adventures of Hagen, the grandfather of Gudrun; the second part gives the story of the wooing and abduction of Hilda, his daughter, the mother of Gudrun. The proper story of Gudrun begins only with the ninth tale."—Proface. The decorations are taken from German books of the rich century. Has a colored facesimile of a page of the original Ms. of the poem.

Harte, Bret. The heritage of Dedlow Marsh, and other tales. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & and other tales. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1889. c. 259 p. D. Cl., $1.25.

"Dedlow Marsh," the home of the Culpeppers, was a most uncanny abode. At low tide it was a vast marsh, and when the tide was in the sea swept around and in and out the piles upon which the house rested. Boone Culpepper, "the kingfisher of Dedlow," as he was called, had been found dead in his boat; his two children were the heirs of the marsh. Though possessing immense wealth the boy and girl were little less than savages. It is the deteriorating process they go through when brought into contact with the artificiality of fashionable life as seen under the roof of Fort Redwood, a neighboring government station, that the author illustrates. "A knight-errant of the Foot-hille," "A secret of Tefegraph Hill," and "Captain Jim's friend," are the other stories, all dealing with early life in San Francisco.

L'Ile dernière or Last Island, in the Gulf of Mexico, was once a famous watering-place. A hurricane which swept it over thirty years ago left it a ghastly scene of desolation. The opening chapter of this story describes the hurricane with a remarkable power: "Chita" is a waif from the island. She is washed upon the gulf shore and falls to the care of the wife of a Spanish fisherman. The tragedy of her life is brief, but it is told with both pathos and poetry.

novel. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1889. c. 2+475 p. D. cl., $1.50.
Chata and Chinita are the pet names of two Mexican girls—Florentina and Dolores—whose story from their birth up to youngladyhood is told in this volume. The scene is laid in Mexico some forty years ago, in Tres Hermanos, the home of the Garcias. A young American, a civil engineer, working in the neighborhood of Tres Hermanos, falls in love with the daughter of the house and marries her secretly. He is shortly afterwards assassinated, and his young wife, after giving birth to a babygirl, is hurried into a convent. This girl and another left one night at Tres Hermanos are the heroines. Their identity is left in doubt till the end of the book—the truth being a complete surprise. Ward Ashley, the consin of John Ashley, the murdered man, comes to Mexico fifteen years afterwards to solve his cousin's fate and discover his wife. Ward Ashley has some remarkable adventures. The background to the story is the struggle of the many adventurers who after Santa Anna tried to control Mexico. The book altogether is a wonderful picture of domestic life in Mexico.

The rapid development of commercial and social relations between Mexico and the United States makes a volume for young readers describing the lands of the Aztecs particularly timely. Our old friends, Frank Bassett and Fred Bronson and the Doctor, are again the heroes. From their bright, intelligent conversation, the reader gains a very thorough knowledge of the chief points of interest in Mexico, also of its social and political history and resources, its manners and customs, etc., etc. The boys have also some stirring adventures, which are graphically related. A profusion of pictures illustrates the text, and a crushed-strawberry cloth binding, with gold stampings, adorns the outside.

There are four distinct stories, crossing and recrossing each other at intervals. Veronica, a little girl whose father has murdered her mother in a fit of delirium trement, is the heroine of one. Prancis Vermont, the heir of Vermont Hall, whose mother drinks in secret, is the hero of another. Alaric Leslie, a young minister, who is a decided teetotaller, and Ellen Stanley, a Bible worker among the poor, each are the centre of a group of interesting events.

Scene at first is the west of Scotland at the time of the landing of the Pretender. The old lord of a poor property has two sons, the elder a dare-devil who expects to marry his cousin Alison, an heiress, and the younger a taciturn, hard-working fellow, who also loves Alison. The brothers toss a coin to decide which is to go to war. The elder one loses and goes, and is soon reported dead. Alison marries the remaining brother, then the wild construction and here reddeted the state of the state o wild son returns and leaves and returns, making life miserable for all. The story is told by the steward, a man remarkable for physical cowardice and moral courage. War on sea and land and wanderings throughout the world furnish startling material for the author's imagination

Six essays that first appeared in the Century, the American Art Review, and the American Architect and Building News. One of them has been entirely rewritten from a different point of view, two have been considerably enlarged, and all have been carefully corrected. In associating six artists so far apart in time and character, Mrs. Van Rensselaer has tried to bind them together by a tangible connecting thread, or rather two connecting threads—the first being individuality in art; the second general truth illustrated being that the student should learn to appreciate all forms of art.

under Gustavus Vasa. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1880. c. 13+301 p. O. cl., $2.50.

"There is no other work in English bearing on the period covered by the writer of this volume, who has given us a history that shows careful research on every page, and an evident desire to do full justice to a difficult subject. The narrative begins some time before the revolution, but no space is wasted upon details until the beginning of the war in 1521. After the election of Gustavus as king, we are given ample accounts of the proceedings which led to the banishment of the Roman Catholic clergy, and to other events of equal importance. The author is not blind to the faults of Gustavus Vasa as a popular leader. He does not find in him the sterling qualities which made a Washington, even while he gives Gustavus his proper place as a great reformer and patriot. The work is distinguished throughout by great lucidity of style."—Boston Gasette.

The author is one of the best animal painters in England, and an enthusiastic lover of cats. He instituted the first Cat Show held in London at the Crystal Palace, 1871, and is President of "The National Cat Club." The notes and illustrations in this volume are the outcome of fifty years' careful, thoughtful, heedful observation of the habits and ways of the cat. He tells of long-haired cats, the Angora, the Persian, the Russian long-haired cats, Tortoiseshell cats, the brown tabby, the Abyssinian, the blue cat, the royal cat of Siam, the Manx, and many others. With a great deal of information, there is also much pleasant talk and anecdote, and many excellent pictures recommending the work strongly to all cat-lovers.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have issued a new edition of their handsome Portrait Catalogue. Owing to the number of new titles (chiefly of the books formerly published by Ticknor & Co.) to be entered, it has been found necessary to arrange the lists in a condensed form; but the types have been carefully chosen, and the result is that the catalogue is more agreeable in form than ever before. The index has been arranged for the first time by subjects as well as by titles—as art, architecture, biography, and the like. The new portraits are those of Mr. Edward Bellamy, Mr. Chandler Harris, Miss Blanche Willis Howard, Mrs. Kirk (author of "The Story of Margaret Kent"), Walter Scott, Thackeray, and Mr. Justin Winsor. The portrait catalogue was first published in 1882, with portraits of fourteen authors and notices. The portraits have since then been increased by thirty-five, and notwithstanding reductions in the size of portraits and the omission of all critical notices, the catalogue has increased from sixty-four pages to 132. The circulation of the various editions has been in all not far from 700,000 copies.

Che Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

OCTOBER 5, 1889.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications,

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

In case of business changes, notification or card abould be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

THE PROBLEM OF THE SCHOOL-BOOK TRADE.

The school-book publishers have at the present time a difficult course to steer between Scylla and Charybdis. The channel has been growing narrower and narrower for some years back, and the dilemma has reached a crisis. On the one hand is the disposition of States like Indiana to go into school-book manufacture or to make exclusive contracts on the specious plea that the people can get cheaper books by making them for themselves or by deputizing their manufacture in gross. On the other hand, teachers demand individual copies for themselves or quantities for their classes at "bottom discounts," while the retail booksellers who still handle schoolbooks, although in decreasing quantities, say fairly that they should have some margin of profit for their distributive work.

Under normal and proper conditions, there should be an easy solution for this dilemma. As a matter of fact, the interests of all these seemingly conflicting parties are one. The State cannot gain by exercising State socialism—in itself opposed to our political system—in the manufacture of school-books. Each time that this has been attempted a State has found either that it got inferior books for its money—usually some combination of local series used in a section of the country and manipulated by a ring of politicians—or that, while seeming to buy and distribute them cheaper, it has overlooked the great cost concealed in the machinery of distribution, the charges for clerk hire, storage, transportation. and the thousand and one elements which go to make up the cost of a book as the publisher delivers it in the school. As a matter of experience as well as of theory, the competition amongst the great school-book houses, with their vast machinery all concentrated on procuring the best talent in writing, illustrating, making, and distributing books, produces a far better result at much less cost than can be done under any State system. Thus the State is interested in dealing with orivate houses instead of manufacturing for itself, On the other hand, teachers are served by the retail system. A teacher cannot undertake business negotiations, handle stock, and otherwise conduct a bookseller's business without outlay of time which should be concentrated on teaching. and of cost which is in excess of that of the regular tradesman. The retailer does a real service to the teacher as well as to the publisher-if the teacher would but recognize it—a service which is worth a fair but not an extravagant margin of profit. To sum up, a publisher manufacturing for the school-book public and distributing his wares through the machinery of the regular trade serves all interests in serving his own,

But in the extreme competition which had sprung up between the leading houses, there was an endeavor on their side to meet the consumer directly with all kinds of inducements at a vast outlay for expenses of travellers and "considerations" of various kinds. The result was an utter demoralization of the school-book business which brought it below the money-making point and which caused the publishers in self-defence to combine to do away with the flagrant abuses which have grown up in the trade and at last by common agreement to reduce their staff of travelling agents. Happily this combination has never touched prices and we hope never will. It would then be against public policy. But having once come into direct relations with the consumer and put the regular book trade aside, the publishers seem to be in line with that tendency of the times which does away with middlemen as much as possible and brings maker and consumer face to face. We have always contended, and still contend, that in the book trade the middleman-that is, the retail bookseller-does an actual service to both sides by keeping stock and promoting sales. This, of course, is less true in the case of schoolbooks than of other books, because the demand is more pre-determined. That means, however, not that the retailer is useless, but that he cannot expect as large a profit on school-books as on miscellaneous books. But that the publishers cannot throw him overboard without loss to themselves is shown in such a case as Indiana, where the publishers had made direct contracts with the State. The booksellers had therefore no interest, except as private citizens, in holding back this State from this plunge into the contract method, and where the publishers should have had the support of an important class of the community, they had little reason to expect other than more or less bitter opposition. The consequences have been only natural.

We printed last week the letter which one of the most able and successful of the present retail trade, who is also a publisher, addressed to the leading school-book houses. We give this week, without names, a number of replies which he received. The most important of these is an argument to show that the retail bookseller has no longer a place in the school-book trade. With the arguments and conclusions of that letter we are forced to disagree. On the other hand, if it is true that any representative number of booksellers have added extortionate prices, as this letter and another suggest, it must be admitted that the retail trade has been cutting its own throat. We do not, however, believe that these are representative cases, or that there has been any considerable difficulty to publishers from this source.

Most of the letters express a willingness to cooperate in bettering the present relations, and those from the smaller houses point out that the only remedy must be in the action of a few of the leading houses, which can be counted on the fingers of one hand. This is undoubtedly true.
They will not succeed, however, by setting up any fixed schedule of prices which should in any way interfere with natural competition, but in agreeing among themselves that their schedule of discounts should give to the retail trade a sufficient margin for its work.

That the experiment of "abolishing retail prices" has not proved altogether successful in the school-book trade is now evident. The "wholesale" prices have been looked upon as equivalent to the old retail prices, and publishers have again crowded themselves below the point of profit by making a discount here and a discount there, to get below their competitors. It is only by selfrestraint in such competition, and a clearer understanding amongst the competitors, that these evils can be cured. But we feel that Mr. Jenkins has done a real service to the educational trade from one end to the other, in calling out these letters and bringing the matter so clearly to the attention of those particularly concerned. Sooner or later, we believe that some better system will be brought about, and that this step of his will help not a little towards it.

THE climax of the book business has at last been reached, and "he who runs may read" if he will stop half a second to "put a nickel in the slot" of the latest "Automatic Selling Boxes," which are now in place at some of the elevated railway stations and along the streets in several of the large cities. The five-cent piece, duly deposited, produces a copy of a little paper-bound novelette of 48 pages, worth about one cent, under the general title of "The Tourist's Delight," and published as a weekly publication by The Tourist's Delight Publishing Co., 83 Nassau Street, New York, at the "subscription price of $2.50 per annum." The plan is to furnish a fresh story in the boxes each week. "Every number will be complete in itself and contain a novelette of the highest character, by one of the leading living authors." "Our artists are the best that money can command, and no expense nor pains will be spared to attain the highest standard in literary merit and beauty of illustration." The novelette "of the highest character," which is on our table, is "By the Sea;" its highest character is not discernible to the ordinary critic. leading living author" is one Zara. The artists have evidently been "commanded" by other people's money, and the cheap reproductions which serve for illustrations are likely, in one case at least, to get the proprietors into trouble for violating the copyright law. Altogether this is the most "cheap John" of all "cheap Johns" publications yet issued. If the public continue to purchase penny publications at five cents through the magic charm of the slot system, the public is a greater fool than is commonly supposed.

An article in the St. James' Gasette some time ago asked, "Why are American magazines better than our own?" and answered the query by explaining our bulk-system of postage. This was curiously off the truth, as our English cousins are apt to be because of their imperfect knowledge of affairs in "the States." The enormous circulations of our leading magazines were, as a matter of fact, built up before the bulk-postage system was introduced, and although our postal methods, particularly in recent years, have tended to foster the development of periodicals, our magazines are what they are simply because they have been made and pushed with great enterprise and good judgment. In England, on the contrary, the patronage, here concentrated on our few leading magazines, is distributed among several times our number, most of them of rather weak literary quality. Nearly every English publishing house considers it necessary to have its own magazine for the pushing of its own books and as a means of swapping advertisements with other publishers. Few of them have obtained a circulation which warrants the outlay for illustrations required by our illustrated monthlies. The success of Messrs. Macmillan's English Illustrated Magazine is, therefore, all the more creditable.

THE SCHOOL-BOOK DIFFICULTIES: REPLIES FROM PUBLISHERS.

THE following letters from some of the most important school-book publishers were received by Mr. W. R. Jenkins, in reply to his letter, printed in the last issue of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

"In reply to yours of the 23d, we have to say that the subject is one of much more breadth than we wish to discuss or explain. The fact exists, and will remain, that school-books are sold to teachers and others directly, rather than through retail booksellers as formerly. Many things have combined to effect this result. Locomotion and transportation are so rapid and easy that merchandise and buyers can go now within a few hours where within our memory and experience it took days and weeks to go. Mails, telegraphs, and telephones bring producers and consumers still nearer together, and invite to communication with sources of supplies. Comparisons to products and prices are made, and the rates in the large markets are as well known to the distant dealers as to those near-by. The very easy communication and transportation renders almost needless the buying and carrying of large stocks for a considerable time before and in anticipation of sales. publishers now have to make and hold their goods until telephone, telegraph, or special mail-orders come for them. Gradually competition has given to consumers the knowledge of all favorable considerations, and, naturally, they have sought sources of supplies. This is more especially so in regard to books which bear the imprints of the publishers. The public, too—by their officers of towns, counties, and States—seek to get the most for their money, and go by their fellow-townsmen, neighbors, and dealers, to buy at first hands. Even if publishers would they could not protect the middlemen, but there does not exist the same reasons which once prevailed why they should protect distant or near-by dealers. Not one dealer in a hundred carries a supply of school-books. Dealers now do not send for books to the publisher until they first have orders for them, and mainly then only for the number they have demand for.

"In the matter of school-books prices have been frequently demanded by the retailers which were exorbitant and unreasonable. We have repeatedly had occasion to advertise prices in order to prevent injury to our interests by such demands made by booksellers. One of our books, which is listed at the price of $1.20, and which could be sold by retailers at that price with fair and reasonable profit, has often been sold by dealers for $1.50, or $1.75, only to bring upon us, where it does not belong, the cry of 'monopolist,' 'extortionist!' etc.

"The fact of the business is, the matter has gone beyond both retailer and publisher, and as much, perhaps, by the acts of the one as by the acts of the other, and for our part we recognize the fact that the people want cheap books brought near to them and easy of access, without an addition to their prices of the profits of second or third parties. We are not disposed to stand in the way. We must sell to boards of education without regard to retail dealers. Teachers are our friends and can influence the use of our books. They know what their prices are, and come or send to us for them. Frequently they complain that too much is asked for them by dealers nearby from whom they might buy. We can only say to you and others, who in like manner askus to stand between them and consumers—we cannot do it. You must adjust your business to the present condition of things, just as we do. We think retailers should not blame us for any part of these conditions. We try not to blame them even where we have to give prices below those they ask for single copies of our books. No amount of discussion among publishers could avail to stem the current, or turn it into former channels. We can only say that we will endeavor to do by you as we would like to be done by, as nearly as we can, and you must adapt your business ways to meet the present needs as nearly as you can to make your profits."

"Your letter of Sept. 23d, in regard to discounts to teachers, has just been received. We have given it our careful consideration. In reply. we would say that we do not sell our books to teachers at such a price that booksellers cannot sell to teachers on our terms, and yet make a profit of ten per cent. or more; we do not see, therefore, that your letter can be considered as applying to us, or that we are called upon to take any action in regard to meeting other publishers to discuss the question of discount. Of course it will benefit us if other publishers are willing to bind themselves not to sell to teachers at the trade rates, since we do not do so ourselves. If our rates of discount appear to you to be unjust to the dealer in any particular, we shall be very glad to hear from you, and to try to satisfy you.

"We beg leave to say a word in regard to some booksellers; what we have to say in regard to them does not, of course, apply to you. It very often happens that a bookseller will sell to the pupil or teacher, say a thirty-five-cent book, on which he gets a discount of 15 per cent., or 40, 45, and even 50 cents, thereby causing his customer to believe that the publisher is demanding high prices for his books. Such action on the part of many booksellers has made it absolutely necessary for publishers to try to deal directly with the teacher, although we agree with you that in doing so they should make such terms as will enable a bookseller, who conducts his business properly, to supply school-books at a fair profit."

"Your favor of the 23d inst. was duly received, and we thank you for writing us on the subject. Unfortunately, all that you say is true, but we are powerless to help it. Some school-book publishers even go so far as to offer teachers better rates than they do dealers. It is the desire on the part of publishers to make tempting offers for introduction, which has brought about the present condition.

"In regard to the enclosed bill we beg leavets say that if the teacher desires the bookseller to handle the supplies for his school he should at least be willing for the dealer to have the percentage allowed for handling. In cases of introduction it is usual for the dealer to receive the 10 per cent. allowance, and we should think that the teacher for whom you have bought these books would be willing to allow you this."

"We beg to acknowledge receipt of your favor of 23d of September and to say that we shall give it careful consideration, and would be glad if something can be done for the relief of the booksellers in the publication of which you make mention.

"It has often been thought of among the publishers, but there seems to be no way of obtaining concerted action on the subject. Perhaps a way will present itself in the future. Meantime we shall be glad to cooperate with you in any reasonable way."

"We are in due receipt of your favor of the 24th inst. and note what you say regarding state of the retail book trade in this city. We appreciate the force of your remarks and the position you occupy, and, as far as we are able, will do what we can to help you. Relief can only come from the concerted action of the publishers, and when the initiative steps are taken we shall remember your request.

"In reply to yours of the 23d would say the bulk of the school-book business of the country is done by Ivison, Blakeman & Co., A. S. Barnes & Co., D. Appleton & Co., and Harper & Bros., of this city, and Van Antwerp, Bragg & Co., of Cincinnati.

"We are forced by necessity to follow mainly their methods of dealing with teachers. If they will change their methods in regard to discounts we shall most cheerfully do so.

"We heartily wish you success in your efforts."

"We have received your letter of yesterday and heartily approve of the suggestions you make therein. However, we are publisher, but in a small way, and are therefore obliged to follow the lead of the larger houses in the matter of prices. If any agreement can be reached among them, we shall be happy to subscribe to it, but we think the initiatory movement, in order to succeed, should be made by some house much more prominent than ourselves."

"We fully appreciate all that you say in your esteemed favor of the 23d inst. in reference to what seem to be conflicting interests between publishers and retailers of school-books, due to competition among the former; and in answer to your inquiry would say that we shall heartily join in any movement which may harmonize these interests, and at the same time prove satisfactory to the great number of teachers and school officers who are our patrons, and on whom we-both publisher and retailer-must after all depend for our school-book market.

"Some uniformity of practice that will not be against the public interest, by destroying legitimate competition, may perhaps accomplish the

MR. E. W. BOK AND "THE BOK SYN-DICATE PRESS."

WE are glad to note the promotion of one of the most popular and promising members of the trade. Mr. Edward W. Bok will this week resign hisposition as manager of the advertising department of Charles Scribner's Sons, to assume the editorship of The Ladies' Home Journal, of Phila-delphia, under most favorable arrangements. Mr. Bok has been with the Scribners for five years, and in graduating to the editorial chair becomes, erhaps, the youngest chief editor in the country. He is 25 years of age. In this connection, the following extract from the New York Star poscases special interest at this time :

"Only those on the 'inside' of New York lit-

They control the literary work of some forty-five of the most famous men and women of the day, which they supply to newspapers simultaneously all over this country and in Canada and England. Edward Bok holds a responsible position in one of the big New York publishing houses, and his name is with-William devotes all held from the enterprise. his time to the work, and under his name the business is conducted. While Edward makes all business is conducted. the contracts with authors. William stands at the helm and carries out the ideas of his younger brother. A better matched couple of brothers it would be difficult to find. Edward has a wonderfully extensive acquaintance among famous people. He is well read, has good literary judgment, and knows precisely what the people want. William is of untiring energy, and a doubtful literary venture becomes a success in his hands. The brothers are very popular in society, and one is almost sure to meet them at any prominent literary or social event. Both are good talkers, have pleasant manners, and what the one lacks the other supplies. They have built up their business from nothing. Henry Ward Beecher started Edward by making him his literary manager, and in this way the bureau began. Now, almost every author of note writes for the two brothers. They have no difficulty in securing writers, for they pay promptly and manage ex-cellently. Their principal writers include Grace Greenwood, Wilkie Collins, Marion Harland, Lew Wallace, Ella Wheeler, Will Carleton, Max O'Rell, and a score of others. They work quietly, the general public hears but little of them, yet it is doubtful whether any two young men in New York have so bright a future before them."

BOOKBUYING IN ENGLAND.

LORD BRABOURNE contributes to Murray's Magazine a paper on "Books and Bookbuying," in which he makes the following analysis of the ten principal London sales of recent years:

Name of Work.	No. of Day's Sale.	No. of Lots.	Amount Realized.
Beckford sale Towneley sale Stourhead sale Gosford sale Osterley Park sale Hartley sale Sir T. Phillips' sale Aylesford sale	40 8 8 11 8	9,837 2,815 1,971 3,363 1,937 5,057 3,346 1,983	£ s. d. 73,551 18 0 4,616 0 0 10,028 6 6 11,318 5 6 13,007 9 0 14,895 13 6 2,200 15 0
Thornhill sale	3	410 1,012	2.030 6 0 3.702 16 0
		31,731	145,926 2 6

Of the Beckford sale the writer says: "It was a stupendous affair, the volumes sold having formed only a portion of the library — or rather libraries - at Hamilton Palace. The books were in splendid condition; the bindings were in many cases magnificent, and the prices given were Mr. Beckford not only collected but read his books - and not only read them, but wrote erary and journalistic circles know anything about notes in them, sometimes of a sarcastic and amusing character. I do not pretend to enter into a description of this collection of books, about which, indeed, a volume might be written. Out of the 9929 lots which were disposed of during the sale of the two first portions I noted down at the time that upward of 2000 lots were bought by Quaritch at an aggregate price of over £26,000."

SOME RECOLLECTIONS OF TWO PUB-

From the N. Y. Home Journal, September 25.

MR. I. W. HARPER, senior member of the firm of Harper & Brothers, who is staying at the United States Hotel in Saratoga, N. Y., with his family, paid Mr. George W. Carleton a visit the other day, and it was a rich treat to hear them tell stories of ye olden time, reminiscent of their "boyish days," so these gentlemen claimed to call them, although I may be divulging a secret to tell that both had left college some years previous to the time when the scenes were enacted which they described in such a jolly way. And if the truth must be told, the said incidents oc-curred years "before the war"—and the war, beg pardon, opened in 1861. Carleton contributed a story concerning T. B. Aldrich, the dainty poet, and Fitz James O'Brien, a brilliant essayist, and also a poet of no ordinary merit, but one who was often seen in his cups, and was always borrowing money of his cronies-an out-and-out Bohemian was this same O'Brien. Aldrich, who is now the dignified and learned editor of the Atlantic Monthly, commenced his literary career as a clerk in Carleton's bookstore, which was then located on the southwest corner of Broadway and Lispenard Street in New York City. It was while he was in Carleton's employ, and yet in his teens, that Aldrich penned "Babie Bell."

"Have you not heard the poet tell How came the dainty Babie Bell Into this world of ours?"

This was the poet's first stepping-stone to the enviable reputation which he has since won.

The publisher saw the two young and embryonic poets crossing Broadway, Aldrich leading his unsteady companion in the most careful manner. "Why are you so cautious of O'Brien?" asked the publisher. Aldrich, whose purse not very heavy at the time, answered, "Because O'Brien owes me a dollar, and I'm in need of it."

In connection with O'Brien and his publishers, Harper & Brothers, Carleton related an incident which was new to the present head of the house, and which he relished heartily. The erratic poet, after he had been indulging freely one day, went down to Franklin Square and begged hard for the loan of twenty-five dollars, which, very justly, the firm refused. O'Brien picked up a large placard with "Livingstone's Africa" printed on one side. He turned it over, and on the blank side he drew in large black letters these words:

"One of Harper's Authors. I am Starving."

He attached a string to the large piece of cardboard, hung it about his neck, and then walked down to the street and paraded up and down before the great iron building. A large crowd gathered, and Mr. Fletcher Harper was soon very glad to compromise. He gave O'Brien a five-dollar bill, and thus got rid of the unpleasant advertisement.

ORITUARY NOTES.

ELIZA COOK, the English authoress, died Sept. 25, at Wimbledon, where she has lived in seclusion for many years. She was born in Southwark, London, in 1818. In 1838 her first volume of poems was published under the title of "Melaia," followed by two similar volumes, "New Echoes" in 1864, and "Diamond Dust" in 1865. In 1849 Miss Cook founded a literary periodical called Eliza Cook's Journal, the first number of which appeared in September of that year, and the last in 1854. Although she was then only thirty-six, her health began to fail, and ten years later she was forced to give up work entirely. Her collected works have passed through many editions, both in England and America, and have continued to enjoy a steady sale. Her best known verses are: "The Old Arm Chair," "The Old Farm Gate," "Home in the Heart," "The Last Goodbye," and "I Miss Thee, My Mother," all of which have been set to music.

Franklin Fiske Heard, widely known as an author and compiler of law-books, died at his home in Boston, September 30, aged sixty-four years.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

MARION HARLAND has written a new story called "With the Best Intentions." It is to appear serially in her admirable magazine, The Home-Maker.

The Cosmopolitan, beginning with the October issue, adds twenty-four pages to its regular size. Under its present management it has increased so it claims, in circulation. It certainly has improved editorially.

THE most important artistic event that has taken place in the United States is the competition—still undecided—for the Protestant Cathedral of St. John the Divine, in New York, which has drawn forth designs from sixty or more of the best architects of this country, and from many skilled European designers. The American Architect, recognizing the great importance to the artistic and ecclesiastical world of these designs, has arranged to present a series of the best, selected with great care for their value and interest, beginning with those that were especially invited by the committee. These designs will appear at short intervals, beginning Saturday, Oct. 5, in extra double numbers.

A combination of newspaper men and capitalists, recently formed as The Transatlantic Publishing Company, will bring out, on October 15. the initial number of a new paper called The Transatlantic, a mirror of European life and letters. Thereafter it will appear on the 1st and 15th of the month, and will be a large 16-page paper, with an artistic and striking cover sumptuously printed. It will be made up of extracts and translations from the European literatures, culled not only from the periodical press, but also from the newest books and pamphlets. A translated European novel will be published serially in The Transatlantic, and there will be also in each number a translated novelette and a piece of European music. Another regular feature will be a large portrait of some European celebrity of the time, on the front page of the cover. The paper will have no policy of its own, but will aim to give a faithful picture of Transatlantic life and thought. It will be issued from the Transcript Building, 328 Washington Street, Boston.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

SAMPSON LOW & Co. will publish in November a new novel by R. D. Blackmore entitled "Kit and Kittie."

- L. Pranc & Co., we are pleased to learn, have been awarded a gold medal for their fine art publications at the Paris Exposition.
- J. S. OGILVIE will publish at once a novel by Lydia Hoyt Farmer entitled "A Night of Faith, or, Robert Elsmere refuted." The book will be issued in cloth and paper.

THE PRESS BUREAU, 1267 Broadway, N. Y., will publish on the 10th inst. a novel entitled "Earth-Born," by "Spirito Gentil"—described as "a novel of the misty past."

MR. E. S. BROOKS, author of "Historic Boys," the "Story of the American Indian," etc., has received a $500 prize from the Detroit Free Press for a Bible story entitled "A Son of Issachar." After running as a serial in the Free Press it will be published in book-form.

THE latest excitement in the literary world is that Miss A. T. Winthrop claims that her story, "Wilfred," has been plagiarized by Mrs. Burnett in "Little Lord Fauntleroy." The stories are similar in many respects—that is, the lives of the two heroes run in very nearly the same channel, the radical difference in the two stories being that Fauntleroy is still living at the end of Mrs. Burnett's book, while Wilfred dies. Miss Winthrop also claims that she had sent the manuscript of her story to Mrs. Burnett for her opinion and advice in 1880 or before. Miss Winthrop's charge is denied, and there the matter rests for the present.

W. C. TENNER, a young Frenchman, who for some time has supported himself by obtaining money under false pretences, chiefly among publishers, came to grief on the 2d inst., at the office of Henry Holt & Co. Mr. Charles Holt, who was asked to cash a check for $25 signed "D. Appleton & Co.," remembering that others had been "taken in" by the young man, sent for an officer and had Tenner taken to Police Headquarters. There he was identified by a number of his victims, and was sent to the Tombs to await trial. Tenner is an assumed name. The prisoner is a Frenchman of fine education and high family connections. His papers indicate that he is the Count de Vermont, a French nobleman—no relation, however, to M. E. de Vermont, of 744 Broadway, N. Y.

SAMUEL H. SCUDDER, Cambridge, Mass., announces that he will publish this month the last of the twelve parts completing his work on the "Butterflies of the Eastern United States and Canada, with special reference to New England. As now completed, it contains 17 plates of butterflies, 6 of eggs, 11 of caterpillars, 2 of the nests of caterpillars, 3 of chrysalids, 2 of parasites, 33 of structural details in all stages of life, 10 maps and groups of maps to illustrate the geographical distribution of butterflies, and 3 portraits of early naturalists of this country; in all about 2000 figures on 96 plates, of which 41 are colored. The text contains 2000 pages, including an Introduction of 104 pages, and an Appendix of 150 pages, which contains descriptions of such species concerned as have not been found within the limits of New England, and also descriptions of all known parasites of North American butterflies, by Messrs. Howard and Williston.

ESTES & LAURIAT make the following important announcements in addition to those given in our Fall Announcement Number: By an arrangement with the French publishers they will have the control, for this country, of the English text edition, as well as of the French edition, of the "Goupil's Paris Salon of 1889." The work contains reproductions in photogravure of one hundred prize paintings, from one of the most remarkable exhibitions known to the Paris Salon. There will be a vellum edition and a Holland edition, the latter being limited. Among their other art publications we note an edition of 280 copies of 20 etchings by "Famous Etchers," European and American; "Recent English Art," a set of sixteen photo-etchings from modern English painters, with descriptive text by Walter Rowlands; and "Endymion," by John Keats, illustrated by W. St. John Harper, with a number of photogravures in delicate tints. They also have in preparation a new edition in one volume of Hugo's "Nôtre-Dame de Paris," with colored illustra-

MACMILLAN & Co. announce in addition to the books already given in our Fall Announcement Number, the following in the department of general literature: a new volume of poems by Lord Tennyson: A new volume of essays by Prof. Huxley; "The Elements of Politics," by Prof. Henry Sidgwick; "Problems of Greater Britain," by Sir Charles Dilke; "Wild Beasts and Their Ways in Asia, Africa, America, from 1845-1888," by Sir Samuel W. Baker, with illustrations; "On Style: with other studies in literatrations; On Style: with other studies in litera-ture," by Walter Pater; "Royal Edinburgh: her saints, kings, and scholars," by Mrs. Oliphant, with illustrations by George Reid; "The Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood," by W. Holman Hunt, with illustrations; "Cults and Monuments of Ancient Athens," by Miss Jane Harrison and Mrs. A. W. Verrall, with numerous illustrations; "A History of the Later Roman Empire from "A History of the Later Roman Empire from Arcadius to Irene, A.D. 395-800," by John B. Bury; "The Development and Character of Gothic Architecture," by Prof. Chas. H. Moore, with illustrations; "Eminent Women of Our Times," by Mrs. Fawcett; "Letters of Keats," edited by Sidney Colvin; "The Cradle of the Aryans," by G. H. Rendall; "The Makers of Makers of Control C Modern Italy: Mazzini, Cavour, Garibaldi," by "A Reputed Changeling, or, three seventh years two centuries ago," by Charlotte M. Yonge; "The Rectory Children," by Mrs. Molesworth, with illustrations by Walter Crane. In science, "A Text-Book of Physiology," by Prof. Michael Foster, with illustrations, fifth edition, largely revised, in three parts; "Absolute Measurements in Electricity and Magnetism for Beginners," by Prof. Andrew Gray, abridged edition; "Thermodynamics of the Steam-Engine and Other Heat Engines," by Cecil H. Peabody, of the Massa-chusetts Institute of Technology. They will shortly issue a new part (Vol. 2, Part 2) of "A New Dictionary, founded mainly on the materials collected by the Philological Society," edited by Dr. J. A. H. Murray; also, Vol. 3, Part I (beginning with the letter E), edited by Henry Bradley, of the same work.

PUBLISH THIS WEEK:

HISTORIC PORTRAITS FROM THE GREAT HISTORIANS. Consisting of eighty selections from the writings of Plutarch, Grote, Gibbon, Curtius, Mommsen, Frouds, Hume, Macaulay, Lecky, Green, Thiers, Taine, Prescott, Motley, and other historians. With notes and brief biographical sketches by G. T. Ferris, and sixteen engraved portraits. 12mo. cloth. $1.75.

"Every one perusing the pages of the historians must have been impressed with the graphic and singularly penetrative character of many of the sketches of the distinguished persons whose doings form the staple of history. Few things in literature are marked by effects so brilliant and dramatic. . . A selection of these striking passages in the great historians will serve, it is believed, a double purpose—first as a suitable introduction to these distinguished writers for those not acquainted with them, and next as a means of stimulating a taste for the study of history itself. . For these reasons this compilation will be found well adapted for the reading class in high schools and seminaries."—From the Preface.

II.

Recollections of the Court of the Tuileries.

By MADAME CARETTE, Lady-of-Honor to the Empress Eugénie. Translated from the French by ELIZABETH PHIPPS TRAIN. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50 cents.

The inside view which these Recollections give of the Court of Louis Napoleon is fresh and of great interest.

"We advise every one who admires good work to buy and read it."—London Morning Post.

Ш.

The Political Life of Our Time.

By DAVID NICOL. 2 vols., 8vo, cloth, $6.50.

"The author has read, he has thought, and he can write. He has fairly laid his mind alongside of his subject, and his thoughts and modes of expression are his own. He writes with great good sense of the land laws of the country. He discusses intelligently the relations of labor and capital, of commerce and finance."—The Saturday Review.

Will Publish Saturday, October 12:

The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table.

By OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES. An entirely new edition from new plates, with engraved title-pages from designs by Mrs. Henry Whitman. 2 vols., 16mo, carefully printed and tastefully bound, gilt top, $2.50. A limited number of copies have been reserved from the first edition, and will be issued in cloth, paper label, uncut edges, at $3.00.

This edition of Dr. Holmes' most famous book has been prepared with the utmost care to meet the demand for so delightful a work in an attractive style suited to its classic merits.

Memoirs of a Millionaire.

A Novel. By Lucia True Ames, author of "Great Thoughts for Little Thinkers." 16mo, $1.25.

Miss Ames' novel will in some respects appeal to the same persons who have been deeply impressed by "Looking Backward." It emphasizes the responsibilities that attach to large wealth, and indicates how it may be most wisely and helpfully used. But the book is not a sermon, or a tract, or a fancy, but a genuine story of actual men and women, made interesting by lovers' experiences, and none the less readable because it abounds in noble suggestion and presents beautiful ideals.

The Church in Modern Society.

By Rev. Julius H. WARD. 16mo, $1.00.

This volume is a suggestive study of the part which the Christian Church has had in the development of the institutions of society, of the position it occupies, and the work that lies before it, if it is to control the social factors of modern life. Mr. Ward has devoted much study to religious and social questions, and the aim of his book is to show how the Christian Church can be brought into closer contact with life.

Atlantic Index.

An Index to The Atlantic Monthly, Volumes I.-LXII. (1857-1888). 1 vol., 8vo, $3.00.

This Index is arranged alphabetically by names of writers and titles of articles. Under the name of each writer is given a list of all the papers contributed to the magazine by that writer, and the order of the papers is chronological. Every alternate page is blank, so that additions can be easily made. It is unnecessary to point out the great convenience this Index will afford to those who wish to consult the rich contents of the classic library which the sixty-two volumes of The Atlantic Monthly form.

Thackeray's Works.

Illustrated library edition. In twenty-two volumes. Volumes XIX., XX. CHRISTMAS STORIES, and ROUNDABOUT PAPERS. 2 vols., crown 8vo, gilt top, $1.50 each.

The Introduction to the several volumes, the excellent typography, paper, and binding, make this a very acceptable edition of Thackeray's works.

Selected and arranged by CHARLES MORRES. Complete in four crown octave volumes of about twe numers pages each. Cloth, gilt top, $6.00; half morocco, $10.00; three-quarters calf, $13.00.

This work, uniform with "Half-Hours with the Best American Authors," "Half-Hours of American History," and "Half-Hours with the Best Foreign Authors," embraces some of the choicest writings of the best American, English, and foreign humorists, and completes the Half-Hour Series commenced a few years ago.

Involuntary Idleness.

An exposition of the cause of the discrepancy existing between the supply of, and the demand for, labor and its products. By Hugo Bilgram. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

The aim of the treatise is to search for the cause of the lack of employment. At first an examination is made of the relation of capital to the productivity of labor, and that of interest on capital to the remuneration of labor. The two separate meanings of the word "Capital" are compared, and in the concluding remarks an explanation is given of the present excess of supply over the demand for commodities and services.

Wreck of the Greyhound;

Or. The Romantic Love of the Earl's Daughter.

Vol. 3 of "The Fieetwing Series." Illustrated. 12mo. $1.50.

This is the story of a home-bound Indiaman, in which an English Ambassador and his daughter were wrecked, on Pratas shoal in the China Sea. All but Mr. Howland and the passengers were swept overboard at the time. The inhuman officer finally escaped on a raft, leaving three unfortunate passengers to perish in the water-logged All attempts at rescue had proved fatal, until Captain Lawrence boarded the wreck on surf-boards, and saved the Earl of St. Clare and Lady Seymour. The heroic Captain won the fair Lady's love, was knighted by the Queen, and the happy pair long lived to receive their friends at Moorland Castle, one of the grandest manorial homes of Old England.

NOTES IN SEASON.

TICKNOR & Co. have just published a limited edition of the late Carl Pfeiffer's valuable work, "American Mansions and Cottages," containing 100 folio plates in a handsome portfolio. They have also just ready a one-volume edition of Charles Wickes' "Illustrations of Spires and Towers of the Mediæval Churches of England."

D. APPLETON & Co. publish this week "Arthur Merton," Admiral Porter's new novel. Next week they will issue in the Town and Country Library "The Romance of Jenny Harlowe, and Sketches of Maritime Life," by W. Clark Ruseeil. They have also now ready "A Text-Book of Animal Physiology," with introductory chapters on general biology and a full treatment of reproduction, by Dr. Wesley Mills. They have nearly ready "Lessons on Hygiene," a revision of "How We Live," by James Johonnot and Eugene Bouton, prepared under the direction of Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, Supt. of the Educational Department of the W. C. T. W.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just ready the second volume of the "Cyclopædia of Music and Musicians," which contains, besides many text portraits of musicians and singers and fac-simile scores and autographs, full-page etched portraits of Gounod, Handel. Haydn, Lasso, Lizzt, Lully, Mendelssohn, Meyerbeer, Mozart, Paine, Palestrina, and Purcell; a new book by Donald G. Mitchell, (Ik Marvel), entitled "English Lands, Letters and Kings, from Celt to Tudor;" a fascinating volume by Frank R. Stockton, entitled "Personally Conducted," illustrated by Pennell, Parsons, and others; and a new and cheap edition of Mary and Charles Lamb's delightful little volume of "Poetry for Children."

S. C. GRIGGS & Co., Chicago, have just issued a translation from the Danish, by Prof. Julius C. Olson (of the University of Wisconsin), of Peter Lauridsen's work entitled "Vitus Bering, the discoverer of Bering Strait," which has already been fully described in the Fall Announcement number of the WEEKLY. On the 20th inst. they will publish a new edition, from new plates, of Dr., J. R. Boise's "First Lessons in Greek," thoroughly revised, with the advice and approval of the author, by Prof. G. Pettengill (of Ann Arbor High School). This work has had the approval of leading classic scholars in this country and is especially adapted to Goodwin's Greek Grammar, and that by Hadley as revised by Allen.

HARPER & BROTHERS will publish on October II a volume on the "Constitutional History of the United States," by George Ticknor Curtis, It is a new and carefully revised edition of Mr. Curtis' earlier work, which, though published thirty years ago, remains to-day the established authority on the history of the formation and adoption of the Constitution. Many years ago Silas Wright, then United States Senator from New York, requested George Bancroft to write a life of Martin Van Buren, and furnished a complete collection of papers and letters as materials for the work. From these and other sources Mr. Bancroft compiled a biography which Van Buren, when he saw the manuscript, pronounced to be authentic and true as a record of facts relating to himself. Party feeling ran high at the time, and Mr. Bancroft deemed it best to postpone the publication of the work until the character and career of Van Buren could be judged without prejudice. Nearly coincidently with the author's eighty-ninth birthday Messrs. Harper & Brothers published this biography, which is entitled "Martin Van Buren to the End of his Public Career." In his preface Mr. Bancroft says, "In my recent revision of the original manuscript, I have made no change that could affect Van Buren's approval of it as thoroughly correct." They have nearly ready "The Quiet Life," with eighty-three illustrations drawn by Edwin A. Abbey and Alfred Parsons to interpret fragments of old British song, and a prologue and epilogue by Austin Dobson; also a capital book for boys by Henry P. Wells, entitled "City Boys in the Woods, or, a trapping venture in Maine."

WERKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the tradeouly upon application.

An outgrowth of the needs of the author's own classroom. The matter is essentially that presented to his classes in the University of Illinois for a number of years past, a considerable part having been used in the form of a blue-print manuscript text-book. It is now published for the greater convenience of his own students, and with the hope that it may be useful to others. The author believes nearly all of the matter to be entirely new, as he knows of no work which treats of any considerable part believes nearly all of the matter to be entirely new, as he knows of no work which treats of any considerable part of the field covered. The object has been to develop principles and methods and to give such examples as illustrate them, rather than to accumulate details or to describe individual structures. The following are the subjects: Pt. 1, The materials; 2, Preparing and using the materials; 3, Foundations; 4, Masonry structures. Appendix, Specifications for masonry.

The two families of the Penningtons and the Clucases are strongly contrasted. The first are people of wealth and importance, the latter only fisher-folks—but it is with the latter the virtues lie. The scene is the lise of Man. George Pennington's selfish and dishonorable pursuit of Bella Clucas being the opening motive. Pennington realizes the vision of the Babylonish king—with many rare gifts and strong personal attractions, he is at heart a dishonest man, an image of gold with "feet of clay." His checkered career and the mystery of his mother's life make up the plot. The characters, especially of the Clucases, are strongly drawn.

The Empress Eugénie was a heroine to Madame Carette, her Lady of Honor. In this very interesting volume of her recollections of life at the Tuileries during the period of the Second Empire, she has only the most flattering words for the unfortunate lady. "My mistress, the Empress Eugénie," she calls her work in the French, and it is Eugenie who is the principal theme. Her recollections go back to 1858, when the Emperor and Empress went to Brest to meet Queen Victoria. In this chapter a remarkably good word-picture is given of the Empress' appearance. Afterwards life at the Tuileries is minutely described. The Empress' toilets, dressing-rooms, methods of dressing, etc., her study, her oratory, the little details of her daily life; the dinners, receptions, and so on, all come in for respectful attention. Something is also told of the death of the Prince Imperial, and of the Elmess of the Empress Carlotta.

Written to promote the teaching of physics by what is known as the laboratory method. Embodies the experimental course which has been found suitable for students of the 11th and 12th grades at the Ann Arbor High School, where the author has had several years' experience in conducting large laboratory classes. The book consists of a series of selected exercises both qualitative and quantitative in character, in which full directions are given regarding the preparation of the apparatus, and the manner of conducting the experiments,

The Roman Emperor Nero's profligate career is the subject. He is introduced as a young man still under the gentle influence of his early preceptor Seneca; he is uncorrupted by the vices of his Roman world, noble and magnanimous, and superbly beautiful. His unscrupulous mother, the Empress Agrippina, is the bad influence of his life. Yielding to her imperious wishes he marries Octavia while fondly loving Acte, a Greek freed slave and serving-woman of Nicodemus the Nazarene. This is Nero's first step downward. His subsequent career shows him as indifferent and cruel to Ogtavia, the lover of many infamous women, and the slave of every vice; finally he is transformed into the inhuman monster history has painted him. His wanton burning of Rome and cruel persecution of the Christians bring their own punishment. His flight from Rome and death end the story The book is rich in descriptions of Roman life in public and private. in public and private.

In this volume the author reports to the teachers of the United States the results of a ten months' journey through the schools of Burope. The book contains truthful delineations of the present state of methodology and didactics in the public schools of Germany, France, Austria, and Switzerland. Lessons which the author heard are sketched as faithfully as a quick pencil could gather and the memory retain them The author saw the best that Europe could offer him, and in this volume he has pictured the best results, described the most advanced methods, and gives a great number of valuable hints that will be serviceable to all teachers who wish to advance the standard of their work. Numerous devices in use in Europe are offered in sketch illustrations and copies of pupils' work where they could be conveniently used. The manual training schools in Europe are shown in their results. The different systems of drawing and industrial training of girls are compared; each branch of study of the lower schools is represented by sketch lessons, and successful methods of teaching are illustrated by verbatim reproduction of model lessons.

A story which has for its basis a sketch formerly published in the Indespendent. Esther Bradford's one endowment was a wonderful voice; the story tells how she was enabled to cultivate her gift until a certain crisis came, which demanded an immediate decision; upon this decision rests the fate of Dr. Maurice. The characters are well delineated; there is a weak young man, an eccentric old one, a blind musician, a charming boy, a fussy German music-master, and the usual kindly physician; these are ably supported by the systematic young woman, the lovable elderly one, the talented girl, her devoted maid, and a typical Becky Sharp, called Lisa Vansant.

"The young Norwegian hero is introduced to us in his native land, where he is without a care, and where his life is one of hearty physical enjoyment. He falls in love with an English girl, the daughter of one of the firm for which his father is agent, and makes a proposal of marriage, which she accepts. When he goes to England to ask her father for her hand, he finds that he has been jilted, and that during his absence from home his own father has died a bankrupt. He is thus thrown upon the world to earn a living without any practical business experience; but, fortunately, he falls in with friends in London who had known him in Norway, and is offered an humble position in a music publishing house, which he accepts. His place there is not a bed of roses, owing to the enmity of one of the partners, but eventually he triumphs over all difficulties, pays off his father's debts, and wins a woman really worthy of affection. There are many pleasing fescriptions of Norwegian scenery and customs."—Boston Gasette.

At the time of the recent trouble with Osman Bey, Captain Somers, of the Athol Highlanders, was ordered to India; before going he sent his daughter to Manvers Court. Grace had been reared in a military school, and adopted a soldier's tenets for her self-government; she knew rigid adherence to duty, great courage, and strict obedience were the essentials of a good soldier, and she considered them as necessary attributes of a soldier's daughter. So conscientiously does Grace carry out her principles, that Sir Norton Manvers' prejudice against soldiers is removed. Besides the very good moral to be applied, the story is rich in bright scenes, natural, childlike characters, and escapades of the fun-loving young Manvers. young Manvers.

The lady of the forest. N. Y., F: Warne & Co.,

The lady of the forest. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1889. 3-318 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. Avonsyde was an old English country house situated near the bounds of a large forest. Rachel, Kitty, and little Phil. Lovel, the children of the house, had been told the legend of "The lady of the forest." The history of this mythical personage made such an impression upon their youthful fancies, that they are led into making all sorts of conjectures about her, and eventually confuse a real lady with the myth. After they learn their mistake and discover the identity of their mysterious friend, a still greater surprise meets them—the real Lovel takes possession of his heritage. Old-fashioned scenes, quaint little characters with odd fancies combine to make a charming book for young people.

On a slight thread of a story Uncle Lawrence gives young readers a popular rendering of many of the facts of physical science and chemistry. The characters and scene are French. Monsieur and Madame Dalize, with their two children, Albert and Mariette, live at the chateau of Sainte Gemmé, near the village of Sens. A friend of the family, Roger La Molière, a distinguished chemist, comes here on a visit. Some years previous he had lost his wife and boy at sea, through the vessel taking fire. He has proof of his wife's death, but not of that of his son. He finds his son in France, after a number of interesting enjacdes. all of which furnish him with ber of interesting episodes, all of which furnish him with texts for the instruction of the young people.

Brnest Bizet, a landscape painter, who has made a reputation in the Paris Salon, meets in travelling through the Alps the family of Prof. Charles Morian, consisting of himself, his wife, and three children. The professor is a celebrated geographer and is pursuing his studies in this spot. They all form an intimacy and make many expeditions through the mountains. This is the author's opportunity for telling his young readers all there is to tell in connection with mountains.

The volume was written and published to show why an Israelite cannot embrace Christianity. A Jew of Cincinnati became a Christian and was given a pulpit and much advertising in the hope of attracting other Jews. The author feels it his duty to resent this action on the part of church dignituries, which he considers an insult to Judaism.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

We have received from St. Louis an anonymous communication referring to the competition of the bazaars with the regular book trade and proposing as the remedy "that every dealer, be he large or small, enroll his name with the Executive Committee of the Newsdealers' and Booksellers' National Association. Then let the committee appoint in each city and large town a member to report the sale of books by dry-goods houses and bazaars, with the names of the publishers of the lines so handled. At intervals, notification should be sent to all members and dealers of the facts, with the request that all such lines be discontinued for sale by every dealer until the withdrawal of such obnoxious lines from 'scab trade." We cannot indorse such heroic advice as this. It is as imposible as it is undesirable to form the book trade either into a trust or a trade union against "scabs," even under better auspices than those indicated. What the book trade chiefly needs is a method of doing business which shall not give the outside trade greater advantages than the regular book trade, which, after all, does the most service. But such a reform is not to be accomplished by tying down the safety-valve and making a dead set against the laws of trade.

We are glad to note a "change of heart" on the part of the Tribune which enables it to do justice to one of the foremost as well as oldest of American publishing houses. Nearly twenty years ago some misunderstanding with the editor of the Tribune, now absent in Paris, caused the exclusion even of the name of that firm from the columns of the Tribune, and for years that very small policy had been kept up by it. In its issue of Sunday last, the Tribune printed an excellent article of well-deserved compliment on the house of D. Appleton & Co., evidently one of a series which was started a week ago in a paper on Harper & Bros. We congratulate the Tribune on its return to common sense in this respect.

WE print elsewhere what is doubtless an "inspired" statement as to the affairs of Belford, Clarke & Co., whose affairs, it is rumored, are in process of negotiation for settlement so that the firm may go on. Some of the statements in this article will cause some surprise in the trade, although, as before stated, the house has been bringing up its reprints of English books into more and more creditable shape. The statement that no American book by an American author, published by them, has ever resulted in a loss, indicates an infallibility which is almost without precedent in the history of the publishing trade.

THE speech of Mr. Theo. L. De Vinne before the meeting of the Typothetæ, at St. Louis which we reprint in full elsewhere, is one of the most significant in favor of international copyright that has been made from any quarter. It is of all the more value because it comes from one who is now regarded as perhaps the masterprinter of this country, certainly the masterprinter of New York, who as boy and man has spent a lifetime in the business and knows it thoroughly from Alpha to Omega. His testimony is of the first importance and unimpeachable, and what he says as to the influence of promiscuous reprinting on the printing trade itself is worthy of attention. The indications are that the International Copyright Bill will go before the new Congress with greater strength than ever before, and the action of the Typothetæ in deciding to cooperate in pushing it will be of much help, as both the Unions and the master-printers are in harmony on this issue. It is worth noting that within the past month an association in connection with the Authors' Copyright League has been formed in St. Louis with so well-known a publicist as Henry Hitchcock at its head, and with Chas. Claffin Allen as its Secretary.

MOST of the exhibitors at the Paris Exposition have united in a memorial to the American Minister asking him to recommend the name of Emil Terquem to the French Government for the decoration of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his services in connection with the American book exhibition at the Paris Exposition. This is a well-deserved compliment, for M. Terquem. both at this and preceding world's fairs, has been very energetic and successful in connection with the book trade exhibits, and we shall hope to welcome him here in turn as a representative of the French Government at our world's fair. But we have some doubts as to whether it is well for American citizens to ask for such a decoration on this ground, and particularly through the American Minister, for a citizen of the French Government.

NATIONAL TYPOTHETÆ AND INTER-NATIONAL COPYRIGHT.

THE Third Annual National Convention of the Typothetæ was opened at St. Louis on the morning of the 8th inst., in the Odd Fellows' Hall, by the President, Mr. A. McNally. There were about 200 delegates present, representing all the large cities of the United States. President Barnard, of the local branch, delivered an address of welcome, to which President McNally responded, incidentally describing the conditions under which the organization was originally effected. The speaker disclaimed any attitude of hostility to-ward the Typographical Union, and expressed a belief that the organization of publishers would improve the relations between employers and employés.

The afternoon session was devoted in large part to the international copyright question. lively discussion ensued, which brought out the sentiment generally that it was desirable that some law should be passed securing to an author in one English-speaking country the right to his productions in other countries. The view of the English publishers, that when the English copyright of a work was sold, this sale should include the United States, was not indorsed, the Convention holding that an author had the right to sell his manuscript on both sides of the Atlantic. In the course of the afternoon Mr. Theo. L. De

Vinne delivered the following address:

"As I understand it, international copyright is a plan which proposes for literary property that every man shall have his own, and no more than his own. If an Englishman works with his hands in America, his earnings are not seized because he is not an American citizen. All civilized nations agree that citizen and foreigner shall have equal rights before the law to the earnings of the labor of their hands. For work of the brain or pen a different rule prevails. As laws stand now, an English publisher can seize the work of the American author, and deprive that author of all benefit therefrom. The American publisher can make a similar seizure of any English work, and he does it thoroughly. Here is an anomaly: the worker with his hands is protected; the worker with his brain is not—he has no rights that the law respects. It is this unfairness which we are trying to correct in the Chace bill, about to be brought before the next Congress. It is not an ideally perfect bill in all its provisions, but it is just to authors, liberal to printers, and should command our votes.

"Has an author a right to the earnings of his pen and brain? There are those who say that he only restates thoughts or facts which others have had before him, and which, as common property, are not copyrightable. This assertion misleads, and totally misses the point. No author copyrights facts or thoughts; he does copyright his arrangement and method of presenting them. What should we think of a man who would gravely argue that no patent for any mechanical invention is just, because all machines are nothing but elaborations of the five mechanical powers? or of a man who should deny the originality or merit of Homer, Dante, and Shakespeare, because their poems are nothing more than a combination of alphabetical letters which they did not inveint? The world is, and always has been, of opinion that writers are creators; that its thinkers, authors, teachers, or amusers are true benefactors. If it honors those who are dead, it should pay those who are living, early law of France, quoted by the Rev. Dr. Van Dyke, says that copyright 'is one of the natural rights of men, there being no property more pe-culiarly a man's own than that which is produced by the labor of his mind.'

"To that limited few who deny the right of property in written ideas, this answer can justly be made. If you think it unfair to pay an author for his work, do not buy his book. You are not obliged to. You can, if you please, hunt up for yourself all that he has gathered from many sources. You can write your own poems, or histories, and weave your own webs of philosophy. No one hinders you. All the copyright law asks is that if you do buy a book you shall make some pay to the author.

"What is the price asked by the author? The usual rate is ten per cent. of the retail price. The book for which you pay a dollar gives the author just ten cents; the five-dollar book gives fifty cents. There are a few authors who get more, but there are more of them who get less. The rate, surely, is not high; it cannot justly be called an oppressive tax.

"Are authors overpaid? Most absurd misrepresentations have been made concerning the profits of literature. Authors like Dickens, Thackeray, and Scott have received much money for their copyrights; but they and a few others have had exceptional success. There are not, probably, in the United States a score of authors whose copyrights on books have yielded them $5000 annually In ten consecutive years. There are hundreds of able, highly educated, and hard-working men whose copyrights on books of real value do not vield them the earnings of a mechanic. Under the ten per cent. rate, the average returns of literature are less than those of manual labor. Is it fair dealing in us to contest a foreign author's right to this ten per cent.?

Would international copyright make books dearer? On a few, yes; on most books, no. After the law has passed, any printer will be at liberty, as he has been, to print any book he pleases that has not been copyrighted. The law is not retroactive. It prevents no one from re-printing old books. Nor is it perpetual, for all copyrights, domestic or foreign, will end at twenty-eight or forty-two years. I do not be-lieve that the new law will make copyrighted school or ordinary text books any higher in price. That it will slightly increase the price of fiction yet to be written is probable, but it will not increase the cost of books of science, history, or the fine arts. I see no reason for believing that the concession of copyright to the foreign author will ever be felt as a tax by the backbuyer. That part of the law which makes type-setting in the United States compulsory will also compel the American publisher to issue the book at a price which will insure a large sale. If he is protected in his publications, he will issue a popular book in a cheap as well as in a good form. There will be editions at 50 cents as well as at $1.50. I shall not regret the suppression of the ten-cent and the fifteen-cent editions. Who will?

"Will the copyright law work injury to print-I think not. It certainly will cause printing to be done here that is now done abroad. Even if some of this printing be done by foreign firms on American soil it will not affect our pros-

"The new law will do a service to all of us in restricting speculative editions. The last popular fiction, Haggard's "Cleopatra," was published by ten publishers, in ten distinct editions. Not all of these editions could have paid expenses: on some the publishers must have lost; and when publishers lose, the printing trade must also lose. Printers receive no share in the profits of publishing, but they are sooner or later involuntary partners in publishing losses. It is not the time nor the place for me to tell how many active and able book-printers I have known who have been dragged into bankruptcy by giving credit to the publishers of unauthorized editions: but this is the time and the place to ask you to do what you cañ as a society to prevent one of the greatest causes of failure in our business.

"Unauthorized editions degrade the quality of printing. When many publish one book, the profit is to him who will do the work quickest and cheapest. This means bad workmanship, poor proof-reading, poor plates, poor presswork, paper, and binding, and poor pay-and sometimes no pay at all. It is not to the interest of the trade to favor any policy which compels too low rates and bad workmanship.

"Will the new law hurt the weaker publishers? I think it will not. It is true that the stronger publishers will get, as they always have got, a large share of new books; but it does not follow that they will get all of them, or that they ever can or will ever try to establish a monopoly in The author is, and will be, the masoublishing. ter of the situation. He will give his books to that house which will give him the best terms, or do the work to his advantage. The largest percentage is not always the greatest inducement. The publisher who can give the work most of personal attention, or insure the largest sales. will be the best agent of the author; and this kind of publisher is to be had among the vounger and weaker quite as often as among the older and stronger.

"Be this as it may, the right of the author to give his book to whom he pleases should be at unquestioned as his right to select an agent for any other interest. He may select wisely or foolishly, but his right to select is beyond contro-

"And it is really on this right that the whole question depends. For it is, after all, a question of right and wrong. Concede that the author has a right to the fruit of his own labor, he has a right to dispose of his book as he may please, and we do wrong to contest that right. The question of profit and loss to us as publishers or printers should not be considered an instant. Whether we make or lose has really nothing to do with our decision. It is enough for us to know that we must not take what is not ours.

"There is a specious plea for no copyright based on the ground that our country is full of readers who cannot afford to buy and pay the price of authorized, editions, and that the suppression of competitive editions is really an obstruction to education. I confess that for a time I was sophisticated by this proposition, which afterthought showed was untrue. It is not philanthrophy-it is bad morals-that allows a poor man, because he is poor, to help himself from his neighbor's fields or shelves. This plea is a practical denial of the right of property, which sends us back to barbarism at once.

"That public opinion has favored the unauthorized printing of books is undeniable. Printers and publishers have grown up in the belief that flowers of literature as the unprotected flowers of a waste field. It is the school-boy's reasoning about the apples that grow over the fences by the roadside. We have all had our share in this and in other errors, but have, I trust, outgrown them. The elderly men of our number have seen the time when the seizing and holding of slaves was justified in pulpits and authorized by law; when privateering was not piracy, but patriotism; when lottery-dealing by the State was not regarded as a debauchment of morals, and a robbery of the earnings of the poor, but was rated as a really benevolent enterprise, especially when the lottery was organized for a public improvement. I do not mention these changes in our public policy with intent to make a comparison which would be as odious as unjust. I do not assume to censure men for the errors of their times. I mention these changes only to show that a policy which was once adjudged to be right is now adjudged to be wrong.

"A new judgment will soon be made about copyright. It has already been made. The time is not far off when this country will agree to the rule which prevails in all other civilized countries, and will say that unauthorized publication is wrong. We should fairly meet the question. Of all trades ours should be foremost in upholding the right of the author. We owe him a double debt, not merely for the instruction or amusement he gives us, but for the work he furnishes to our presses. No one reads books or papers to see our workmanship only. Every one reads to get the thoughts of the author. It is upon him more than upon us that the life of our art depends. It is our duty, and it should be our pleasure, to see that he receives all he is entitled to.

On the following day a resolution was adopted to appoint a delegate to act in conference with the International Copyright League in New York, and that he record the views of the Convention in favor of the principle of an international copyright law. Emphasis was laid on a provision that all copyright books shall be printed in the United States.

Among the resolutions adopted was one in which ground was taken that there is nothing in the condition of the printing trade that would justify a reduction of the hours of labor from ten to eight.

On the evening of the oth the Convention sat down to a dinner on the river steamer Annie P. Silver. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed, the exercises being enlivened by speeches from George D. C. Barnard, of St. Louis; Joseph J. Little, of New York; H. T. Rockwell, Boston; Richard Ennis, St. Louis; Andrew McNally, Chicago; Clayton McMichael, Philadelphia; Theodore L. De Vinne, New York; James Davidson and A. H. Pugh, Louisville; and P. F. Pettibone, Chicago.

BELFORD, CLARKE & CO.'S AFFAIRS.

WE reprint the greater part of the statement on behalf of Belford, Clarke & Co. in the American Bookseller, which has lately had its offices with them and may be presumed to speak on their au-

"All kinds of estimates of assets and liabilities have appeared in the daily papers, all of them based on conjecture, for some time must necessarily elapse before the official statement can be they had as good a right to pluck unprotected produced. On the day when the first judgments were entered against the firm, there is perfect certainty that the assets were considerably above the liabilities as they stood in the books. But, as can easily be seen, assets consisting in great part of plates are not likely, when suddenly thrown on the market at auction, to bring anything like their real value, if value is to be considered with reference to cost; and therefore, until some expert valuation can be placed on this stock, it is idle to give figures.

"The cause, or at least the chief cause, of the suspension of this well-known firm was the immense cheapening of 'standard works.' For the last three years the system of undercutting has grown and spread and developed till anything like a good line of 'standards' in clear type, on decent paper, and with a good binding could not be sold at the cost of production. Belford, Clarke & Co., with their well-made editions, had therefore to compete with the manufacturers of much inferior editions, and had to 'meet the market' or else leave their whole plant unproductive. With this the question of international copyright has nothing to do, and the remarks attributed to R. J. Belford on this point are, if not perversions, at least exaggerations of his statements. He said, as every man must say, that the present state of the law is calculated to diffuse piratical reprints at the expense of American authors. The firm has never, at any period of its existence, engaged in making reprints of popular English works, and all the statements of unfledged journalists about their being among the leading pirates can be refuted by the production of the books bearing their imprint. The reprint of 'standards' has been a loss, but, on the other hand, their original works, American books, by American authors, have been invariably successful, and their list of original works comprises the names of the most rising and most characteristic authors of the modern school of American literature. No American book, by an American author, published by them has ever resulted in a loss. The newspaper report that their line of 'paper cover' books was unprofitable is utterly false, for this line consists solely of the original American works above alluded to.

Another newspaper statement seemed to imply that the collapse of the firm arose from the style of its publications, which the said newspapers were pleased to describe as erotic. As a fact, we state most authoritatively that the firm refused two novels that have had a large sale and have since found publishers less scrupulous. . . .

"Till the official statements are before us, we refrain from giving definite figures, or making conjectures as to the future. If the younger authors of the country were consulted, they would, we think, unanimously vote for an immediate resumption of business, as Belford, Clarke & Co. have given them more generous terms than any other house. It has received and published Mss. from any quarter, without fear, favor, or affection, without regard to any clique, but with a single eye to the merits of the works submitted.

"Belford's Magazine will go on. A considerable sum of money was sunk in establishing it in its present flourishing condition. It is now, however, on a paying basis and its subscription-list increasing at the rate of 3000 to 4000 a month. Fears have been expressed in one or two quarters as to the fate of MSS. already sent in. We can confidently say that such fears are groundless; that all manuscripts accepted will be duly paid for, and all others returned.'

THE BOOK PRODUCTION AND LITER-ATURE OF RUSSIA IN 1888.

S. PAWLENKOW, in the issue of the Istoritscheski Westnik for May, 1889, has printed a statistical report, compiled from official sources, of the number of books published and printed in the Russian Empire (excepting Finland), from which the following is extracted:

The number of titles recorded in 1888 amounted to 7427; the total number of copies printed. 21,103,272. Of these 5318 books were in the Russian language, 716 in Polish, 343 in Hebrew, 311 in German, 217 in Lettic, and 178 in Esthonian.

The following is a classified list, in tabulated form, showing the number of titles and the editions printed of books in the Russian language:

Among the Books of Reference there are catalogued 155 Russian almanacs, of which 1,537.649 copies were printed; besides these there were also 205 almanacs in other than the Russian lan-Dorpat, Charkow, Reval, Mitau, etc.

The total number of periodicals was 667, of which 493 were printed in the Russian language, 76 in Polish, 49 in German, 13 in Esthonian, 8 in Lettic, 7 in French, etc. The most of these are printed in St. Petersburg. The statistics showing the proportion of inhabitants to the daily journals issued are most remarkable. It appears that, taking European and Asiatic Russia together, there is but one journal to 484.590 inhabitants. The proportions taken in the cities, for instance, show in Reval, one daily journal to 8550 inhabitants, in Riga one to 13,490, in Tiflis, one to 14,860, in St. Petersburg, one to 28,970, and in Moscow, one to 75,350. This gives one a toler-Moscow, one to 75,350. This gives one a tolerably clear idea of the intellectual development of the masses.

M. Pawlenkow also gives the following facts concerning the prices some of the prominent Russian authors realized for their work. Shortly before his death Turgéniew sold the rights in all his published works, "for all time," to Glasunow, for 90,000 rubles (over $69,300*). publishing house of Ssalajewy offered to the novelist Shtshedrin for his writings 60,000 rubles, but the transaction was not consummated. Gogol received 60.000 rubles, Pushkin 35.000 rubles, Schukowskij 5000 rubles, Krylow (for his fables) 14.000 rubles, Nekrassow 15,000 rubles, Gontsharow 35,000 rubles, Ostrowskij 10,000 rubles (for one edition), Grigorowitsh 5000 rubles, Aksakow 3000 rubles (for one edition), Mey 1000 The popular author, Gleb Uspenskij sold his works to Pawlenkow and Ssibirjakow for 25,000 rubles. Pawlenkow printed a cheap edition of these books and sold 10,000 copies within one year. Popular text-books seem to have the largest sales, and Polubojarinow, the publisher, paid to the author of a series of arithmetics. Mr. lewtushewskij, the sum of 50,000 rubles.

From the foregoing it will appear that the notion that Russian literature is made up solely or largely of those writers whose works have thus far been translated into English-Turgéniew, Tolstof, Dostovevsky, and Gogol—is fallacious. As a writer in the Christian Union recently pointed out, it would be as just to England and America to translate Dickens, Hawthorne, and Haggard into some foreign tongue and represent them as English literature as it is to Russian literature to be judged by the writings of the authors now known to us through English translations. "Nothing could be more unfounded or contrary to the fact than the impression which is abroad that we have in these translations a fair presentment of Russian literature. In reality, we who only read English-and even those of us who know French and German-have gained no more of that literature than the faintest glimpse. With very few exceptions, the books that have been Englished are all novels; they are all novels of the modern period, but they do not do the smallest justice to the novelists of that period. We rave about Turgéniew and Tolstol, but what of Gontcharov, Pisemsky, and Pomyalóvsky, and half a dozen others equally or unequally noteworthy, about whom never a word is said? And then what have the Russian poets, the Russian essavists, the Russian historians, the Russian scientists, done that we should be kept in the most Cimmerian darkness as to them and their works? By what strange caprice of translator or publisher or public is it that to Anglo Saxon readers Pushkin, Lérmontov, Griboyedov, Kylov, Bielinsky, Káramsin, Bestyuzhev-Ryumin, Soloviev, Pisarev, Dobrolyúbov, and so many others, remain practically unknown? All the more is there reason to wonder at and deplore this neglect when it is remembered that in ignoring writers like these we are taking special pains, as it were, to hold unliquidated our manifest duty to a great race.'

In conclusion we give a list of the English books the prohibition of whose sale has been decreed by the Imperial Censorship during the first six months of the current year:

THE OLIVER DITSON COMPANY.

THE well-known Boston music publishing house of Oliver Ditson & Co., founded in 1834, has become a corporation under the name of the Oliver Ditson Company. The officers and directors of the new company are: John C. Haynes, President; Chas. H. Ditson, Treasurer; Chas. C. Williams, Chas. F. Smith, and Moses Williams.

Mr. Haynes began his work for Mr. Ditson forty-four years ago and was employed by the firm until 1857, when he became a partner. He manages the business, taking charge of the principal store in Boston, at 449 and 451 Washington Street, where all the printing and publishing are Mr. Charles H. Ditson, son of the founder of this house and the Treasurer of the corporation, was with the old firm as partner for twenty years, and remains in charge of the New York City branch house at 867 Broadway, where the style of Charles H. Ditson & Co. is retained.

The branch store at 33 Court Street, Boston, will be carried on as heretofore under the style of John C. Haynes & Co., in charge of Mr. Charles C. Williams, who for many years has been the head of affairs there and is now a director and member of the corporation. The Philadelphia branch store goes on as heretofore under the title of J. E. Ditson & Co. Messrs. Lyon & Healey, of Chicago, remain the Western agents of the new company as formerly for Oliver Ditson & Co.

Thus, though there is a change in the formal firm style, there is none in the membership, outside of that occasioned by the death of Mr. Oliver Ditson.

Information got by galloping through a multitude of books is about as nourishing as the mustard scraped off a sandwich. It may make your tongue "smart," but it won't make you strong.—Life.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

J. A. FROUDE is preparing a biography of Beaconsfield

PROFESSOR F. T. PALGRAVE is editing a "Treasury of Sacred Song."

C. A. SWINBURNE has in press a collection of critical essays on Ben Jonson.

Mr. Max O'Rell is going to lecture again next winter in the United States. He sails on January I.

MRS. "STONEWALL" JACKSON, says the N. Y. Tribune, "is engaged upon a biography of her husband, which will contain many facts not printed in previous memoirs. She is not the only 'blue-stocking' of her family. Her sister, Mrs. Irwin, of Charlotte, is even better known than she as a writer."

MRS. FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT, the authoress, is seriously ill at her house in East Grinstead, East Sussex, London. She is suffering from shock caused by the overturning of her pony-cart while riding on the 7th inst. She was thrown out of the cart, fell upon her head, and was picked up unconscious.

Ex-MAYOR A. OAKEY HALL has sued James Bryce, author of "The American Commonwealth," for libel, placing the damages at £10,000. The libellous matter, it is charged, is contained in an article in that book written by Professor Frank Goodenough, of the School of Political Science in Columbia College, entitled "The Tweed Régime," in the course of which Mr. Hall is referred to as having been a member of the Tweed ring. The suit has been brought in London, and, it is expected, will come to trial about the middle of the month.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

CHARLES L. WOODWARD, 72 Nassau St., N. Y., has issued the first of a new series of catalogues of "Books and Pamphlets mainly relating to America." The titles, as usual, are carefully described, the notes being characterized always by originality and often with humor. Many of the issues of the first series have become scarce. No dealer in Americana can afford to be without these catalogues, as in many cases they supplement the leading catalogues, such as Rich, Sabin, and others. (36 p., 685 titles, 8.)

DUPRAT & Co., 349 Fifth Ave., N. Y., have begun the publication of a catalogue of the most interesting and valuable books for sale by them. It will be issued in parts of eight or more pages each, the whole to form a volume of not less than three hundred pages, with an index and title to be issued with the last part. The catalogue will be printed on the presses and with the types The titles of the rare and valuof Jouaust. able books will be given in full with collation, and between the titles will be inserted such anecdotes and book-gossip as will be of interest to bibliophiles. Fac-simile reproductions of bindings, title-pages, illustrations, etc., of exceptional volumes will also be given. With the index Messrs. Duprat & Co. propose to give, with the owner's consent, the whereabouts at that time of the exceptional volumes described in this catalogue. The first part contains the illustration by Louis Leloir to Molière's "Les Précieuses Ridicules." (1-16 p., 8°.)

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

WE are pleased to note that our friend, The American, has prospered to such an extent that it feels justified to enlarge itself by the addition of 4 to 8 pages, making its regular issue 20 to 24 pages. The American, as a bright and original journal of literature, science, the arts and public affairs, deserves to succeed.

The first number of the No Name Magasine (October) offers a very inviting table of contents. It starts with "O Tempora! O Mores!" the newly discovered poem of Edgar A. Poe, followed by "Our American Cousins." by an English Visitor, in which certain phases of New York life are cleverly sketched; Mark Twain is handled without fear or favor in the first of a series of American Literary Portraits; "A Doubting Dominie," receives a severe castigation: the article on "American Booksellers" takes us back to the very beginning of book-making in this country; bright "Personal Gossip," lively ChitChat, and a variety of short, crisp original articles make up a very entertaining magazine.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ATLANTA, GA.—S. P. Richards & Son, book sellers, have removed to No. 36 Whitehall Street

BIRD ISLAND, MINN.—A. Brown, bookseller, has sold out.

MANISTEE, MICH.—Danville Bros., booksellers, have sold out.

MARLIN, TEX.—W. O. Christian, bookseller, has sold out.

URBANA, O.—Reed & Williams, booksellers, are selling out.

UTICA, N. Y.—About a year ago Kelly & Bostick opened a book and stationery store at 62 Genesee St. "Their business was surprisingly good from the start, and they built up an excellent trade. Another partner has been added to the house and the firm name will hereafter be Kelly, Bostick & Mead. Arrangements have already been completed for increasing their facilities and improving and enlarging the store. Mr. Mead is a young man whose home is in Oswego, but who for some time has had a responsible position in the Harrisburg railroad offices. comes to Utica under favorable auspices, and will be a welcome addition to the young business men of the city. Mr. Kelly, who remains at the head of the firm, has had long experience in the book business, and the large trade he has established is evidence of his popularity and ability."

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

LEE & SHEPARD have in press an important book on "The Law of Husband and Wife," by Leila I. Robinson, of the Suffolk bar.

Our attention has been called to an error in Mr. W. R. Jenkins' letter in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY September 28, page 479, first column, fourth line from the bottom. "Sunday-school teachers," of course, should read day-school teachers.

THE FOREST AND STREAM PUBLISHING CO. announce for immediate publication "Pawnee Hero Stories and Folk-Tales," by George Bird Grinnell. The book is said to present a faithful delineation of the Indian's character and his daily life.

ROBERTS BROTHERS are about issuing a new and revised edition of "The New Priest in Conception Bay," by Robert T. S. Lowell, D.D., of which two editions have already appeared. Among religious novels of the class to which "Robert Elsmere" belongs, this book stand second to none in power and interest.

THAT "Ben-Hur" will outlast "Robert Elsmere" in popularity is the judgment which Miss Ellen M. Coe has formed from her experience as Librarian of the New York Free Circulating Library. "Ben-Hur" has now passed "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which in 1887 headed the list of fiction in greatest demand. The recent report of the Maimonides Library, in New York, gives the same testimony. "Ben-Hur" heads the list of single volumes of fiction most sought after.

The Authors' Cooperative Publishing Com-PANY, London, starts well with a list of ten books for the approaching autumn. It includes two stories by John Law, author of "Captain Lobe. one entitled "A Manchester Shirtmaker," and the other a second edition of "A City Girl." Then there is a novel, "Ruby," by Amye Reade, illustrated by Talbot Hughes; and we are also Indistrated by labot riughes; and we are also promised "A Book of Vagrom Men and Vagrant Thoughts," by a new writer; "The Education of Man," by John G. Speed; "After Shipwreck," by J. A. Owen; and "The Laws of National Evolution," from the French ("Contrat National") of Ph. Delbert .- London Literary World.

JOHN WILEY & Sons have published "A Chart showing Composition, Digestibility, and Nutritive Value of Food," prepared by Prof. Henry A. Mott. The chart is arranged under the following heads: Relative Value of Foods; Digestibility of Foods; Standards for Daily Dietaries; Warmth and Strength Derived from Various Articles of Food and Drink; Composition of Various Meats; Analyses of Cheese—Analysis of Milk; Analysis of the Products of the Dairy; Fruits arranged in the order of their contents of Free Acid, expressed as Hydrate of Malic Acid, their contents of Sugar, and according to the proportion between Acid, Sugar, Pectin, Gum, etc.; and the Working Power of the Human Body. chart mounted on rollers retails at $1.25.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

- 1. By whom and where is the "Journal of the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis" published?
- 2. CAN any of your readers tell me anything about "The Telephone of Labor?" C. D. R.

BEN PERLEY POORE'S "Rise and Fall of Louis Philippe" was first issued in Boston early in the forties, by B. B. Mussey & Co., Boston. In 1848 W. D. Ticknor & Co. published a new edition—illustrated 16°, cloth, $1.

SECOND VOLUME OF THE

CYCLOPEDIA OF MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

Edited by John Denison Champlin, Jr. Critical Editor, William F. Apthorp. With over 1000 illustrations, including 36 full-page etched portraits. 3 vols., 4to. Decorated parchment binding, uniform with the "Cyclopedia of Painters and Paintings." This edition limited to 500 numbered sets for this country and 50 for Europe. $25.00 per vol., net.

Like the well-known "Cyclopedia of Painters and Paintings," the first of the important works of reference having this plan and scope, the "Cyclopedia of Music," the second volume of which is now ready, derives special value from its simplicity for consultation—artists and their works being arranged in the same alphabetical order; from the great value of its references to original works, and from the great amount of original biographical and other material included. The second volume contains, besides many text portraits of musicians and singers, and facsimile scores and autographs, full-page etched portraits of Gounod, Handel, Haydn, Lasso, Lixt, Lully, Mendelssohs, Meyerbeer, Mozart, Paine, Palestrina, and Purcell,

ENGLISH LANDS. LETTERS. AND KINGS.

From Celt to Tudor, 12mo, $1.50.

Mr. Mitchell's new book is a combined chronicle and commentary, treating of English letters, the chief figures therein, the places associated with these—towns, castles, taverns, universities, their birthplaces, haunts, and the various scenes through which they passed—and also of the succession of meanchs, the annals of whose reigns make up the history of the time. The style has all the warmth and sympathetic sentiment of Ik Marvel's earlier writings, and an added maturity of eloquence, sustained and felicitous figures, and sonority of diction.

, Two of the most popular of Mr. Mitchell's earlier books, "Reveries of a Bachelor" and "Dream Life," are issued in the "Cameo" Edition, affording examples of the art of dainty and beautiful book-making. The heavy paper, wide margin, clear type, flat back, and gilt top, make the volumes precious to a genuine book-lover. Rach volume has, as a frontispiece, an etching by Percy Moran. (Bach, 16mo, $1.25.)

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED.

By Frank R. Stockton. With 46 illustrations by Joseph Pennell, Alfred Parsons, and others. Square 8vo. $2.00.

A fascinating volume of travel by the famous story-teller, the chapters being a series of pleasant, informal talks with an imaginary party of young people to whom the author is showing the curious and interesting sights of the Old World—a fancy that Mr. Stockton works out with his customary ingenuity and eleverness. The illustrations give the book a high artistic quality and make it a volume admirably suited for a holiday gift.

POETRY FOR CHILDREN.

By MARY and CHARLES LAMB. To which are added "Prince Dorus" and some uncollected poems by Charles Lamb. Edited, prefaced, and annotated by Richard Herne Shepherd. New and cheaper edition. 16mo, $1.00.

Originally published in 1808, and republished in 1877 after being for fifty years out of print, this famous book is now issued in a cheaper form, and will appeal to a larger constituency than ever before.

"A delightful little book, in all respects excellent for children, wholesome, amusing, edifying. Not only to little people, but to children of a larger growth, the book will be welcome."—Besten Post.

VITUS BERING,

The Discoverer of Bering Strait. By PETER LAURIDSEN, of the Royal Danish Geographical Society. Translated by Prof. J. E. Olson, of the University of Wisconsin, with an Introduction by Lieut. Schwatka, our own well-known explorer.

It is a record of the Russian explorations from 1725 to 1743 under Bering, who carried his expedition six thousand miles across a wilderness and launched it on the shores of an unknown sea. By the acquisition of Alaska the people of this country have now a special interest in the field of Bering's labor, and this work will be found a valuable addition to American historical geography.

METZEROTT, SHOEMAKER.

Anarchy in Chicago—Communism in Paris—Socialism in London and Germany-Nationalism in Boston! The air is full of germs of new thought which the people are consciously or unconsciously drinking in, "Metzerott, Shoemaker," is a novel written in an unpretentious style, with a masterly blending of pathos and humor, with an extraordinary galaxy of interesting characters, with a rapid movement and dramatic climaxes. A notable work of fiction, yet a wise and intelligent presentation of a practical and practicable phase of Christian Socialism. Absolutely free from cant, it is radical, vet religious and wholesome. A GREAT NOVEL. 12mo, $1.50.

NOTES IN SEASON.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready Alfred Church's "To the Lions," a story of the persecution of the Christians, under the early Roman Empire; and "The Story of Boston," by Arthur Gilman, in the series of Great Cities of the Republic.

GEBBIE & Co., Phila., have just issued "Froudacity: West Indian fables by James Anthony Froude," explained by J. L. Thomas, a scathing criticism of Mr. Froude's late book on the West Indies, written by a native in defence of his colored companions in the West Indies.

MACMILLAN & Co. have just ready Charlotte M. Yonge's new story, "A Reputed Changeling;" "Select Essays of Dr. Johnson," edited by Geo. B. Hill, in the Temple Library; a selection of the best essays of De Quincey, edited by W. H. Bennett, in the Stott Library; a new library edition of Wordsworth, in eight octavo volumes; and a twenty-five-cent edition of Kingsley's "Westward Ho!"

SCRIBNER & WELFORD have just ready Prof. A. B. Bruce's new book, "The Kingdom of God, or, Christ's teachings according to the Synoptical Gospels. They have nearly ready a new edition of Dr. Newman Hall's work on the Lord's Prayer, with an introduction by T. L. Cuyler; and "Iris—studies in color and talks about flowers," by Prof. F. Delitzsch, translated by Rev. A. Cuzin. Scribner & Welford have become the sole agents in this country of T. & T. Clark's theological publications, of which they carry a full line.

D. APPLETON & Co. call attention to their various editions of Cooper's novels. They have now the Darley Edition in thirty-two 8vo volumes printed on fine tinted paper, illustrated with steel plates from drawings by F. O. C. Darley: the Illustrated Edition in sixteen volumes, with 64 engravings from drawings by Darley; the "Leather-Stocking Tales," in five 12mo volumes and in one 8vo volume, illustrated; and the "Sea Tales," in the same style as the "Leather-Stocking Tales." They have also a handsome folio entitled "Cooper's Vignettes," consisting of sixty artists' proofs on India paper of the Darley drawings, with letterpress descriptive of each subject.

ROBERTS BROTHERS will publish on the 25th inst. "Belief," by G. L. Chaney, a series of discourses the object of which is to "find some basis of truth and reality on which to plant the feet of active charity, and where a genuine devotion may kneel without superstition or fear;" "Lil," another one of those bright, sweet, pure little tales of English domestic life, by the author "Tip Cat," etc.; "Flipwing the Spy," by Lily F. Wesselhoeft, with illustrations by Miss A. L. Plympton, a delightfully humorous story for children; and "Kibboo Ganey, or, the lost chief of the Copper Mountain," a story of travel and adventure in the heart of Africa, by Walter Wentworth, with illustrations by E. T. Merrill.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS publish this week "The Viking Age," by Paul B. Du Chaillu. This work is the product of many years of incessant labor in the collection and arrangement of facts which throw a flood of light upon the character of the progenitors of the English-speaking race. Recent researches have made it clear that those Northmen who at the decadence of the Roman Empire overran and settled in Britain and the Northern coast of Germany and France, were not barbasians, as has long been erroneously sup-posed, but a most highly civilized and accomplished people. Vast quantities of objects, including arms and armor, gold and silver ornaments of the most skilful workmanship and refined beauty; wood-carving, filigree work, agricultural and domestic implements, magnificent carriages, etc., have been unearthed. The work is in two octavo volumes, and contains 1400 illustrations.

Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1889. c. 5+325 p. D. cl., $1.25.

From Miss Ames' preface one is led to suppose that this is the biography of a real woman—a wealthy philanthropist recently dead, whose name she withholds. The heroine of this volume, Mildred Brewster, unexpectedly inherits in her twenty-sixth year a fortune of thirty millions. The remainder of the book, after this fact is explained, is devoted to her charitable schemes for spending the money, anecdotes illustrating her intelligence and independence, and the author's own views upon the responsibility of wealth. Many of the leading religious, social, and political questions of the day are discussed broadly and intelligently, and many suggestions offered as to the best ways of helping the needy.

and its radical solution. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hulbert, 1889. c. 4+205 p. D. cl., $1.

Though the war has long been ended, and the negro freed, the North and South are still disunited. The author starts from these premises. The negro, he inasiss, is the cause. He reviews his past and present, points out his opportunities, and shows how he has failed to realize the expectations his best wishers have had for him. The prejudice against him which is not dispelled even when he is improved by education, is a natural race-prejudice, the writer believes, which nothing can ever remove. He is not dying out, but increasing at a rate that already makes him a dominant factor in many Southern States. If permitted to exercise the political rights the late war secured him, the result, he believes, southern States. If permitted to exercise the political rights the late war secured him, the result, he believes, would be another civil war. He is no apologist of slavery, but he does not want the negro in this country. His remedy is a wholesale exportation by the government of the negro race to Africa or some other country.

Ballou, Maturin M. The new Eldorado: a summer journey to Alaska. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1889. c. 12+352 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The great mineral wealth of Alaska and its many mining interests warrants the title of "The new Bidorado" the author bestows upon it. He made the westward trip from Boston to Sitia, the capital of the Territory, by the Northern Pacific Railroad to Tacoma, on Puget Sound, where the remarkable inland sea voyage begins, thence sailing north to Pyramid Harbor, and Glacier Bay, stopping at the intermediate places of interest. On the homeward passage, to vary the journey and to enjoy the wild scenery of British Columbia, Alberta, Assiniboia, and Manitoba, he left the steamer at Vancouver, returning by the Canadian Pacific Railway. He offers a very interesting account of Alaska, its marvel-lous wealth in gold, furs, fisheries, coal, and timber: its great rivers and glacial marvels, and the peculiarities of the native race, their manners, domestic usages, and superstitions. stitions.

"The manuscript was seen by Van Buren, who pronounced it, as a record of facts relating to himself, authentic and true. At the time of its preparation the public mind was grievously agitated by party divisions on public affairs and on public men; the manuscript was therefore put aside for publication in times more favorable to a fairness of judgment on the character and career of Van Buren. In my recent revision of the original manuscript I have made no change that could affect Van Buren's approval of it as thoroughly correct."

Catherwood, Mary Hartwell. The romance of Dollard. N. Y., The Century Co., [1889.] c. 3+206 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The episode upon which this romance is based is one of the most notable ones in the history of Canada. Adam of the most notable ones in the history of Canada. Adam Dollard and his sixteen heroic followers are looked upon as the deliverers of New France from their relentless enemies, the Iroquois Indians. His life was sacrificed to his daring, and the anniversary of his death is to this day celebrated in Canada. The romance of his life, of which a noble French girl is the heroine, is a beautiful story, beautifully told. The chief personages of the tale were actual men and women two and a quarter centuries ago. The story appeared first as a serial in the Century Magazare.

The simple trials and joys of Miss Alcott's young life, were confided to her journal; as she grew in years and fame she still continued to keep an account of the books she read, the people she met, the events of the family circle, the books or stories she was writing, her methods of writing them and the thoughts that were hers whilst at work. Later, during the war, she was an hospital nurse, and had in a brief time some exciting experiences. All these facts she describes herself, and Mrs. Cheney has quoted largely from letters and journals, connecting the material by a consecutive story full of love and sympathy for its subject. All the readers of "Little women" will desire to hear the details of the beautiful self-sacrificing life of their favorite author. life of their tavorite author.

Presents a concise but authentic narrative of the leading military operations and events during the third period of the war, from the opening of the year 1864 to the close of its summer months. This period includes the battles of the wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Resaca, Kenesaw, Mariette, and Atlanta. As in "Drum-beat of the nation" and "Marching to victory," the opening volumes of this series, the author has endeavored, as far as possible, to divest himself of prejudice, and to do justice to the bravery of the Confederate soldier, while at the same time he points out his mistakes and condemns them. The many illustrations are full of interest, the paper and print excellent. full of interest, the paper and print excellent.

The characters are typical New England ones. Nelly Morgan, rearred on a farm up in the New Hampshire hills, is suddenly transplanted to a luxurious home. She has her ideas enlarged by Continental travel, but her mode of life is not wholly satisfactory. She tires of herself until she meets "Marigold" Henderson; to this charming girl Nelly attributes the change which enables her to keep her unruly spirit within bounds. Like all of Mrs. Conklin's books, there is a moral to be applied.

Plucky Smalls is a street Arab, or "wharf rat," in New York, who has never known a home, or parents, or friends. He has a single companion, the Tinker, as he calls him, and the two live by picking up scraps of food anywhere and sleeping in boxes round the wharves. One day Plucky saves the life of a child who has fallen overboard from a vessel lying at the wharf, and its father, who is a naval officer, makes places for the two boys on board his ship. As naval apprentices they visit various parts of the world, and much of the book is taken up with the story of their adventures. It is a capital story, capitally told.

The first volume of this work contains the whole of Mr. Curtis' "History of the origin, formation, and adoption of the constitution of the United States, with notices of its principal framers," which was first published by this house more than thirty years ago. The first volume of the new work has its separate index. The author has carefully revised his former work on the formation and adoption of the constitution. The second volume, now in preparation, will have its own index, and will be divided into fourteen chapters. The author explains in his preface his reason for grouping together in these several chapters the topics to which they relate, instead of giving the constitutional history of the United States in a strictly chronological order. The period covered by the second volume is from the adoption of the constitution to the close of the civil war—three quarters of a century.

Edwards, H: Stillwell. Two runaways, and other stories; il. by E. W. Kemble. N. Y., The Century Co., [1880.] c. 6+246 p. D. cl., $1.50. The author is one of the most popular of our magazine writers. These stories are already known to a wide circle of readers through the Century Magassims and Harpers. They aim to depict the better and brighter parts of the older negro character, and of some of the people whose lives touch or touched his. The "Two runaways" tells of an old negro of Georgia who periodically ran away. Once, when his master, Major Crawford Worthington, believed he was preparing for one of his annual flittings, he insisted upon going with him, and penetrating the secret of his flight. The story of their journey is most laughable, the climax being related in a masterly way. The other stories are: Elder Brown's backslide: An idyl of "Sinkin' Mount';" "Ole Miss" and "Sweetheart;" "Sister Todhunter's heart;" "De valley an' de shadder;" "Minc," a plot; "A born inventor;" "Tom's strategy." Negro superstitions are most amusingly illustrated in each story.

Gilman, J: Bradley. The kingdom of coins: a tale for children of all ages; il. by Frank T. Merrill. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1889. c. 82 p. O. bds., 60 c.

Tommy, as he sits modding on his own doorstep, is accosted by a queer old man, who tells him his name is Midas. Under Midas' care Tommy visits the Kingdom of Coins, and is shown all the wonders of this strange place. He makes the acquaintance of its inhabitants—the Pennies and Pounds—and hears some odd stories about them. He also visits the museum and finds there the Crooked Sixpence of the nursery rhymes, the twenty pieces of silver for which Joseph's brethren sold him, and other remarkable curiostics. The author's quaint wit is rather above the heads of very young children. The cover has a characteristic design of silver coins.

Fourteen new "Uncle Remus" stories for children, humorously illustrated by R. W. Kemble. "Daddy Jake" was originally published as a serial in St. Nicholas. It tells of a slave who runs away because he is hit by an overseer; two of his master's little children take the boat, and go in search of him; they have some childish adventures, and hear some quaint stories. The other stories are mostly about animals—"Brer Rabbit" figuring in the majority of them.

A study of family character. A young German officer, Rudolph von Tollen, sacrifices the comfort and happines of his whole family to his selfish vices. His father and mother are reduced almost to beggary through his debts, and his sister Lora marries a man she despises that his money may be used in helping her brother out of a new scrape. Lora's husband turns out to be a man of an principle—another wife appearing upon the scene, after Lora's wedded life has become unendurable to her. There are many other characters, taken from fashionable German society, and plenty of action and telling incidents.

This volume is a suggestive study of the part which the Christian Church has had in the institutional development of society, and of the position which it occupies and the work that lies before it, if it is to guide comprehensively and practically the social factors of modern life and keep them within its control. It is neither a denominational nor a speculative statement, but a candid discussion of questions which are in the air as they are regarded by those most conversant with them and most in sympathy with the trend of things. Mr. Ward has been a constant student of religious and social questions, and the aim of his book is to show how the Christian Church can be brought into closer contact with the whole of present life.

Two city boys, Dick Halsted and Harry Hildreth, had their hearts so set upon a hunting and trapping expedition in the Maine wilderness, that their fathers decided the best policy would be to fit them out properly, supply them with money, and let them go, trusting that the actual experience would care them of their fancy for a trapper's life. After a good deal of roughing, and some thrilling adventures, the boys find themselves near the Maine wilderness, but without having yet caught anything. By an accident one day they lose supplies, money, and clothes, and are in despair, when they come upon the camp of an old hunter, Mr. John Dant. He is very kind to them, gives them shelter, and arranges for them to stay some time with him. They learn from him all about the arts of trapping and hunting, and the rough side of life in the woods.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

AN "APPEAL TO CÆSAR."

LAST spring Mr. A. D. F. Randolph addressed to a few of the leading houses in the general publishing trade a letter specifically asking them to consider such a change in the system of discounts as might stay the demoralization of the retail trade before the distributing system was further broken down. One or two houses did give the matter partial consideration, others made merely formal response, and still others did not answer. This fall, Mr. W. R. Jenkins has sent a circular letter to the leading school-book houses and has received replies from most of them, which have been printed in the Publishers' WEEKLY without names. These two eminent booksellers (experienced also as publishers) expressed the difficulties felt by hundreds of booksellers throughout the country.

The suggestions implied in their letters were not in the direction of any trust or agreement as to prices or any measure contrary to the general laws of trade. They simply suggested a return to the method of doing business which is at once rational and fair—the only obstacle in the way of which is the fear of each publisher that if he took the desired step, somebody else would get the better of him by not taking it.

But it is high time that the fact of the increasing demoralization should be faced by the great houses if they are to hold the leadership of the trade or if the trade is to be preserved from utter demoralization. Their one error, ever since the mistake made by the A. B. T. A. in 1876, has been in neglecting to rearrange business on the basis of the present actual prices of books, which are by no means the advertised retail prices. Notoriously, booksellers do not get "publishers' prices," but the public still hold to the superstition that they do, and consequently flock to the dry-goods stores where prices are supposed to be broken. The only way out is for the leading publishers to set the example of a sufficiently general reduction of retail prices to make the nominal price of books about what they are now actually sold for, and then to rearrange their lines of discount accordingly and stick to the new lines. Of course, there will be pressure again to increase the discount five per cent, here and two and one-half per cent there: to give discounts to individual purchasers who should not have them as well as to the trade who should. The millennium has not come, nor will business be without its difficulties even after such a reform has been put in practice. But the great firms will find it definitely to their advantage to revive the retail book trade in this way, and they will be building up instead of destroying their distributive machinery. In behalf of the retailers, we ask Messrs, Harper, Appleton, Scribner, Putnam. Houghton, Lippincott, and the other leading houses fairly entitled to be called the heads of the trade, to look into this matter carefully and fairly, and see if they cannot each for himself, or by common agreement, begin to right the system of the American book trade. With all these houses, the merest agreement or announcement will serve the purposes in question. Most of the advantage of the cheap publishers and the reason for the existence of dry-goods bazaars will be taken away. When the margin for breaking down prices is reduced by a common-sense measure like this, the public will be glad to pay the retail bookseller the slight profit he demands in return for the service he renders.

The school-book trade has reached close to the bottom level of retail prices. Nowhere in the world are books so good in text, so finely illustrated, so excellently made, sold at a lower price. The business is in its nature a wholesale one, where the competition is great and the prices very close. All the same, it costs something to handle this business locally, to distribute the books, particularly to supply single copies to scholars, and to keep a stock which should permit that supply to be prompt and sufficient. If a teacher runs a retail bookstore it must be at the expense of his teaching time. All that the retailers ask, as we understand it, is that so far as practicable this local handling of the books shall be done by them as local agents of the publish-This would not interfere with the making of arrangements between publishers and schools direct, but would transfer to dealers the local handling and the kind of petty business which individual teachers now do. The simple way to accomplish this result is not to give to individual customers (teachers) the same discounts allowed to traders (retailers) who mass orders and do the local work of distribution. We suggest to Messrs. Appleton, Barnes, Ivison, Blakeman & Co., Van Antwerp, Bragg & Co., and Harper & Bros., who do so large a part of the school-book business of the country, that they consider this matter and set an example to the smaller houses who have already indicated their desire to follow.

WE learn from Mr. Caspar that the sale of at least 500 copies more of his Directory is required to recoup the expenses which he has incurred on behalf of the trade in compiling this work. This resembles the early experiences of Mr. Levpoldt in his battles on behalf of the trade. We have received from some quarters of the trade criticisms of the quality of his work as regards ratings, etc. Admitting that mistakes have been made, we are unable to see that they destroy or invalidate the great value of his work. As it stands, imperfections and all, the work is so much ahead of anything of this sort that has ever been attempted, that we hope that Mr. Caspar will receive such support from the trade as will authorize the issue of his book another year in the improved shape which a reissue will certainly take.

WE give elsewhere, as a matter of public interest, the proposition made by Messrs, Belford, Clarke & Co. to their creditors. No information is vouchsafed in this statement as to their actual assets and liabilities and actual standing, and the letter is practically a jaunty exhibit of "What are you going to do about it?"-very like that of the case of Mr. Geo. J. Swayne. The acceptance of such a compromise as that offered simply puts a premium on recklessness and everything else that is bad in business method, and is a knock-down blow to men who are trying to keep in business and pay their debts. The printers and paper-makers who have lent credit under such circumstances, and who, it is stated, agree to a compromise on this basis, may be in so bad a fix as to make it necessary for them to get what they can out of the ruin. But for publishers to set a concern on its feet again on such a basis as this, is to make a thrust in the back at every man who is trying to do business on the basis on which alone permanent success ought to be won -the payment of a hundred cents on the dollar.

THE SCHOOL-BOOK DIFFICULTIES: ANOTHER PUBLISHER REPLIES.

THE following is a delayed answer to Mr. W. R. Jenkins' letter, given in the issue of the Publishers' Weekly for September 28:

"We think all you say is reasonable, and we believe that we have (not seldom with considerable sacrifice to ourselves) made as much of a struggle as anybody in the trade to conform our practices to what the conditions manifestly call for.

"We, of course, are not the house to initiate a concerted movement in this matter. If the syndicates (to which we do not happen to belong) were to take it up, we would undertake to be as rigid as any regulations they might make, at least as long as they would be."

BELFORD, CLARKE & CO.'S PROPOSI-TION TO THEIR CREDITORS.

THE following is the text of the circular letter addressed to their creditors by Belford, Clarke & Co.:

NEW YORK, Oct. 16, 1880 In reference to the account owing you by Belford, Clarke & Co., we would say that about all the tangible property which the corporation owned has been attached by various creditors, leaving very little in the hands of the Receiver with which to pay the unsecured claims. In talking the matter over with the principal creditors it has been decided that two corporations be formed, one in New York, to be known as "Belford Company," and the other in Chicago, to be known as "Belford, Clarke Company." principal attaching creditors in the East have agreed to release their attachments and put the property in the hands of "Belford Company," Belford Co. paying to the Eastern creditors twenty-five cents on the dollar in three, six, nine and twelve months; Belford, Clarke Company of Chicago settling with all Western creditors. Only for the leniency of the attaching and judgment creditors we would not be able to even offer that much. Of course you know how publishing property depreciates when the machinery is stopped.

Belford, Clarke Company of Chicago will be operated by Mr. Belford, Mr. Clarke and some new men who intend to put in fresh capital in the The Eastern business will be operated business. by Mr. Robert Belford, with the principal creditors having a say in its management until such time as the Eastern creditors receive their twentyfive per cent. We know that the offer is not a large one, but we think with the new capital that will go into the business that we will be able in the future to do a safe and large business, and trust that before long you will make enough off the two concerns to reimburse you for the loss made on Belford, Clarke & Company. The offer has already been accepted by unsecured creditors holding over ninety (90) per cent. of the liabili-

We hope that you will accept this offer, as we assure you that it is the best possible thing that can be done. If the attaching and judgment creditors sell out under the sheriff, they will not get the amount of their judgment. If the offer is accepted, kindly sign the enclosed and send to Robert Belford, 22 East 18th Street, New York.

Yours very truly,
BELFORD, CLARKE & Co.,
Robert Belford.

THE PHI BETA KAPPA PRIZE COM-PETITION FOR 1892.

THE National Council of the "Phi Beta Kappa Society," at its triennial meeting at Saratoga in September, appointed a committee to consider means of securing, in connection with the proposed national commemoration of the discovery of America in 1892, "a proper representation of the intellectual life of the American people, as manifested by their progress in science and literature." The committee was instructed especially to consider the preparation of a "monumental work," to comprise a series of monographs on the progress of our people, during the four centuries since the discovery by Columbus, in science and literature.

The committee was authorized to offer two prizes of $3000 each, "for the best general essays on the progress of science and literature respectively. Such essays to embrace a philosophical discussion of the development in the past and of the outlook for the future."

The committee appointed is a thoroughly competent and admirably representative one, its members being Bishop Henry C. Potter, chairman; President Eliot, of Harvard University; President Dwight, of Yale; President Gilman, of Johns Hopkins; President Adams, of Cornell; President Angell, of the University of Michigan, and President Northrup, of the University of Minnesota.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

FRIEDRICH SPIELHAGEN is reported to be writing his autobiography. It is to be issued in instalments in a new German magazine.

MISS KATE FIELD, the author and lecturer, contemplates starting a journal. Her idea of the real journalist's duty is that he shape the thoughts of his generation, not to submit his own to be shaped by it.

GUSTAV FREYTAG, the novelist, will shortly publish a little work on the late Emperor Frederick, taken from his notes during the war, and his letters from the camp down to the election of the German Emperor.

HORATIO SEYMOUR, of Marquette, Mich., who was formerly State Engineer of New York, is preparing for publication the correspondence of Gov. Horatio Seymour, and desires to secure copies of letters not already in his possession.

LAFCADIO HEARN, the author of "Chita," is both a Greek and an Englishman. He was born, in 1850, in Santa Maura, one of the Ionian Islands. His mother was a native Greek, and his father a surgeon in the British army. Mr. Hearn has for a long time made the United States his country by adoption.

M. RÉNAN is at work on the fourth volume of his "History of Israel." He is also correcting the proof-sheets of a new book to be entitled "The Future of Science." It is an essay entirely written as long ago as 1848, and deals, among other topics, with the theory of development subsequently enunciated by Darwin. In various other matters M. Rénan is shown to have anticipated subsequent discoveries in the fields of knowledge, and to have indicated the general direction to which science was tending. He has neither added to nor excised a single passage from his earlier essay, the only alterations introduced being those of style.—Tribune.

LIEUTENANT R. H. FLETCHER, U. S. A., the author of "A Blind Bargain," has had an interestingly varied history. He is a son of Dr. Robert Fletcher, well known in connection with the library of the Surgeon-General's office, Washington, and the excellent bibliographical work done there. He graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1872, but was afterwardstransferred into the army and for some years served on the Indian frontier as aide-de-camp to General Howard. Lieut. Fletcher was afterward detailed for service on the Pacific coast and was retired in 1887, "for disability contracted in the line of duty." He has since his retirement done more or less literary work, but "A Blind Bargain" is his first novel. In it his naval and army experiences are interestingly utilized. He now resides in San Franciso.

Mr. Gordon L. Ford, of Brooklyn, has in press a number of interesting unpublished agreements between Washington and his overseers and workmen, throwing much light upon the management of his estates, as well as on the "labor question" of colonial Virginia. The agreements are copied from the originals in Washington's writing, and all date before the Revolution. In this volume will also be included a correspondence that Washington had in 1774 with a number of merchants and others concerning a scheme he entertained of importing German Palatines to settle upon his western lands, and one of Washington's advertisements for runaway servants. Very little of this material has been published heretofore, and "Washington as an Employer and Importer of Labor" will present a new phase of his character. The edition will be limited to 500 copies.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The next (November) number of the Century begins the twentieth year of the magazine with a notable number in which Jefferson's autobiography will begin; also novels by Frank Stockton and Amelia E. Barr. Among the contributors to this number will be Mark Twain, George Kennan, Walt Whitman, Col. Higginson, Aubrey de Vere, Brander Matthews, Judge Ernest Crosby, Margaret Deland, Dr. Huntington (of Grace Church, New York), W. J. Stillman, Nicolay and Hay, and Charles Henry Webb.

Sun and Shade, published by the Photo-Gravure Co., N. Y., has just concluded the first volume of a most successful year. Starting almost as an experiment, with a list of less than fifty subscribers, it has by dint of its excellency won for itself, as its publishers claim, a circulation of 4000 copies monthly. It is a novel undertaking in that it is simply a picture periodical without letterpress excepting a table of contents. In the next volume will be presented reproductions of leading pictures in the Metropolitan Museum of Art; portraits of prominent leading men, first among which will be one of Mr. W. H. Appleton, the senior of the firm of D. Appleton & Co., to be followed by one of Henry George; and reproductions of the works of American artists, whether painters, sculptors, or architects. The reproductions by whatever process are all of the very best quality. The subscription price is $4 per year.

OBITUARY NOTES.

SAMUEL ROCKWELL REED, author of "The War of 1886," "Woman, and other essays," and for years a noted editorial writer on the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, over the signature "S. R. R.," died on the 6th inst. on the steamer Lahn, on the way over to Europe. He intended to take a European tour for his health.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

Answer to No. 1—The Journal of the Society of Bibl. Lit. is henceforth to be published by a committee of three—Prof. J. H. Thayer, of Cambridge; Rev. L. H. Cobb, Bible House, N. Y.; and Prof. Geo. F. Moore, Andover, Mass. The publications of the Society are in charge of Prof. C. R. Bunn, Newton Centre, Mass. W. F. D.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

GEORGE P. HUMPHREY, 25 Exchange St., Rochester, N. Y., has issued a neat catalogue of 376 books in various branches of literature. The titles are given in full and frequently annotated. (No. 21, 32 p., 16°.)

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have issued an index to their Atlantic Monthly covering the years 1857 to 1888. A brief history of the magazine prefaces the volume, which is handsomely printed and bound in green cloth.

JAMES POTT & Co., Astor Place, N. Y., have just issued a catalogue of the theological and miscellaneous literature published and imported by them. It contains as a frontispiece a view of the interior of their handsome and cosey retail department. (32 p., sq. 8°.)

THE LIBEARY BUREAU, 146 Franklin St., Boston, have issued a neat illustrated catalogue of the Card Index outfits manufactured only by the Bureau. These outfits will be found useful and convenient by others than librarians—by business men, all, in fact, who have to keep lists of addresses that are subject to frequent changes, by banks, railways, and others. (32 p., 8°.)

Wm. Evarts Benjamin, 6 Astor Place, N. Y., has sent us a batch of catalogues, foremost among which is, of course, his new list of Autograph Letters (No. 26). The catalogue describes an interesting collection of strictly authentic manuscripts, with the signatures of their authors. (16 p., sq. 8°.) The other catalogues are one of Standard Books at reduced prices (No. 23, 24 p., 8°); Daintie Foode for Booke-Wormes," a selection of rare and desirable books (No. 24, 4 p., 8°); and a supplement of 16 pages to the Book-Lover for September, containing a collection of good books.

Catalogues of New and Second-Hand Books.—U. P. James, 151 W. 7th St., Cincinnati, American history, general and local. (No. 34, 32 p., 8°.)—E. W. Johnson, 1336 Broadway, N. Y., Scarce and interesting books, including some American (No. 10, 12 p., 8°.)—Lea Bros. & Co., 706 Sansom St., Phila., Medical and surgical publications, classified and indexed. (32 p., 8°.)—Lockwood & Coombes, 275 Flfth Ave., N. Y., Rare and curious second-hand books, American and foreign—neatly printed and very fully annotated. (No. 9, 24 p., 16°.)

BUSINESS NOTES.

NEW YORK CITY.—The International News Company have removed to 83 and 85 Duane Street, one door east of Broadway.

PERU, NEB.—W. C. Purviance, bookseller, has sold out.

PINE BLUFFS, ARK.—Miller & Co., booksellers, have sold out.

RIVERTON, NEB.—David Eastwood, bookseller, is closing out his business.

SPENCER, IA.—Henry Cardell, bookseller and stationer, has sold out.

TEMPLE, TEX.—W. Haas, bookseller, has sold out.

TUSCALOOSA, ALA.—Fitts Brothers, booksellers, have been succeeded by Charles Fitts.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

J. E. Munson, Tribune Building, N. Y., has reprinted his important "Phonographic Phrase-Book," which has long been out of print.

"AN APPEAL TO PHARAOH," recently published by Fords, Howard & Hulbert, we understand, is making much discussion, especially at the South, leading papers treating it editorially on repeated occasions.

Cassell & Co. have published in their Sunshine Series a remarkably interesting story entitled "The Lost Inca," by the Inca Pancho-Ozollo. The descriptions in this story of Peru and Lake Titacaca are all real and as seen by the author, long a resident of Peru.

THE Reform Club, N. Y., has just issued a Tariff Dictionary, explaining the specific and ad valorem duties as imposed on every article under the present law and as proposed by the Mills and Senate bills. It has been prepared by the Tariff Reform Committee of the club.

J. G. CUPPLES COMPANY announce a little book entitled "The Elixir of Life," being a compilation of what has been written concerning Dr. Brown-Sequard's discovery. It also contains "Dr. Brown-Sequard's own account of his famous alleged remedy for debility and old age, Dr. Variot's experiments, and a sketch of Dr. Brown-Sequard's life, and a portrait.

ESTES & LAURIAT have just published a fine illustrated edition of Owen Meredith's beautiful poem, "The Earl's Return." The drawings by W. L. Taylor are of special value from the fact that the publishers sent the artist direct to Normandy where the scene is located, and the scenes are faithfully depicted, instead of being created from the imagination of the artist. They have, also, just ready two delightful volumes for young people—"Feathers, Furs, and Fins," by C. Emma Cheney, Kate Tannatt Woods, Mrs. D. P. Sandford, and others, a collection of stories about birds, fishes, and animals, both wild and domestic, with illustrations; and "Queen Hildegarde," by Laura E. Richards, the talented daughter of Julia Ward Howe, a new and charming story for girls, with many original illustrations by E. H. Garrett.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. will publish at once the fourth volume of the new edition of "Chambers' Encyclopædia." The new volume extends from Dionysius to Friction, and contains a large number of specially interesting articles; among them is a biographical sketch of Emerson, by Dr. O. W. Holmes; District of Columbia; Benjamin Franklin; Florida; Dollar; Duluth, etc. A colored plate of the flags of all nations is included, together with maps of the district of Columbia, England, Europe, Florida, and France. The entire work is marked by the thoroughness and skill of arrangement which characterize the They have preceding volumes of the edition. just ready a volume on the development of bicycles, tricycles, and man-motor carriages, by Robert P. Scott, under the title of "Cycling Art, Energy, and Locomotion;" also "The Pariah," F. Anstey's latest story.

CORRECTION FOR EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE.—
"Stillwell's Practical Exercises in Analysis is published by W. D. Kerr, N. Y., not by Thos. Whitaker, to whom the book has been credited by an accidental transposition of the type of the keyword, which ought to be Kw, instead of WK.

Sampson Low & Co. will publish shortly a biography of Palmerston, by the Marquis of Lorne.

"How to CATALOGUE A LIBRARY," by Mr. Henry B. Wheatley, is announced by Mr. Elliot Stock as the forthcoming volume of the Book-Lover's Library.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH & Co. will publish immediately, as vol. v. of the author's Collected Works, a new edition of Mr. Lewis Morris' "Songs of Britain," enlarged by various odes and poems written since 1887, when that work appeared.

Longmans, Green & Co. will publish this month a volume on "France and Her Republic—a record of things seen and heard in the Centennial year, 1880," by W. H. Hurlburt, formerly editor of the N. Y. World. Mr. Hurlburt is a keen and well-informed student of men and movements, and, therefore, his impressions of French affairs ought to prove interesting, especially at the present crisis. They will also publish soon a book on "Russia in Central Asia in 1889, and the Anglo-Persian Question," by George Curzon, M.P., who made a detailed examination of the Trans-Caspian country last fall. The book will contain maps from the latest investigations, some forty illustrations, and a bibliography. They have in preparation a brief history of the growth of modern music under the title of "The Story of Music," by W. T. Henderson, the musical critic of the New York Times.

AUCTION SALES.

OCTOBER 28.—Parcel sale of new books, fancy holiday and menu books, gold pens, pencil-cases, diaries for 1890, etc.—Eschiel & Bernheim, Cincinnati, O.

OCTOBER 29.—Parcel sale of books and stationery.—Bangs.

OCTOBER 30, 3 P.M.—Nuggets for collectors of Washington portraits and early imprints; also rare collection of early Philadelphia almanacs with imprints of Bradford, Franklin, etc.—Thes. Birch's Sons, Phila.

Booksellers and collectors are awaiting with interest the 'publishing of the sale catalogue of the late Mr. Barlow's library. His hobby was for books relating to or printed in this country. Among the principal gems in his collection are two copies of Columbus' letter announcing the discovery of the New World; a copy of Amerigo Vespucci's "Mundus Novus." published between 1502 and 1508; the first known map of America, drawn about 1506 or 1507 by John Ruysch, for the 1509 edition of Ptolemy, printed at Rome; a large-paper copy (one of three in this country) of Captain John Smith's History of Virginia; two interesting tracts which, by the late Henry Stevens, were once quaintly characterized as "the verie two eyes of New England history"—John Brereton's "Briefe and True Relation of the Discoverie of the North Part of Virginia," 1602; also Mourt's "Relation or Journall of the Beginning of the English Plantation at Plimoth (sic), New England, printed in 1622; and a prayer-book said, on the authority of Winthrop Sargeant, to have been bound for and used by General Washington. Besides these there are hundreds of other volumes all more or less valuable and rare. The catalogue is being carefully compiled by J. O. Wright, and will be issued in a few weeks.

J. E. MUNSON, Publisher, Tribune Building, New York.

"I was caught in a python's folds and saw fierce eyes glaring down into mine. If that tremendous coil were tightened around me, I knew that I might at once cheek my luggage for the undiscovered bourne. In this crists of my fate I saw the great python's tail in close proximity to his mouth. I grasped the snake's tail and pushel a yard or two down his yawning jaws. Serpents seldom bits their prey; they lubricate it and suck it down. With such a long and cold-bluoded creature, I calculated that it would take over a half a minute before the sensations of his tail could be conveyed to his head, and render him aware that he was committing suicide."

The Following are Some of the Opinions of the Trade and Press:

"For the time that we have devoted to its examination, are well pleased with it."—ROBERT CLARKE & Co., Publishers and Booksellers, Cincinnati.

"You deserve well of the world till you die, and after, but the book trade is just as ungrateful as any republic, and although they may sling an occasional laurel wreath out your way, the silver buzzard and the golden eagle 'fieth not so fast nor so far.' There is but one Directory of the Book and Stationery Trade and that is Caspar's."—P. F. VAN EVEREN, New York.

"It is just splendid. The most complete book of the kind we have seen."-J. H. Kurzenknabe & Sons, Harrisburg, Pa.

"I am greatly pleased with your Directory. It is the best work of the kind ever issued and deserves a large sale."—NATURAL SCIENCE PUBLISHING Co., New York.

"It seems more complete than anything of the kind I have seen before."—J. B. MARTINDALE, Chicago.

"We like it very much, and we don't know but what it is the best thing of the kind we have ever seen."—P. R. McCargo & Co., Boston.

"Am very grateful to you for the conscientious care and painstaking effort in preparing so valuable and so complete a work. Be kind enough to enter my name, and mail me all addenda sheets in future, and do not fail to notify me of any new project in this line you may engage in."—Gro. H. Colby, Bookseller, Lancaster, N. H.

"We have looked it over with great interest and appreciate the fact that it will be of great value to us."—W. O. Daviz & Co., Booksellers, Cincinnati.

"I think your book a most valuable one and believe it will be better appreciated as it becomes better known."—WILL H. LYONS, Newport, Ky.

"Bven a cursory examination of this important directory will convince any one of the thorough manner in which it has been put together and of the value of the completed work. Mr. Caspar has produced a work which, if properly kept up from year to year, will be the standard."—The American Stationer, New York City.

"The Appendix to 'Caspar's Directory of the American Book, News, and Stationery Trades is a most valuable compilation, exhaustive and complete. The information it contains is absolutely unique and not to be procured from any other source. Hence it is of the first importance to every one in the trades. It is admirably arranged; the references are simple, and being grouped under special heads, makes consultation a matter of little or no difficulty. Such a work is really a great trade textbook, from which the initiated can feel the pulse of the whole book-publishing world. It is a monument of careful, painstaking and accurate labor, and is as reliable as it is extensive. . The preparation of this useful volume must have been a work of immense labor and patience, and Mr. Caspar must be congratulated on the success which he has achieved. It is a manual for publishers, booksellers, newsdeales, stationers, and libraries, indispensable to them all."—The American Bookseller.

One volume, large 8vo, 1450 pages, bound in half black cowhide, $12 net.

For the convenience of those who send out Travelling Agents, the publisher has had the Geographical Part bound separately in a handy shape, at $13 for the two volumes. These volumes will not be sold separately.

PAUL B. DU CHAILLU'S GREAT WORK-NOW READY.

THE VIKING AGE.

The Early History, Manners, and Customs of the Ancestors of the English-speaking Nations. #Illustrated from the Antiquities Discovered in Mounds, Cairns, and Bogs, as well as from the Ancient Sagas and Eddas. By PAUL B. DU CHAILLU.

Mr. Du Chaillu's great popular work is the product of many years of incessant labor in the collection and arrangement of facts which throw a flood of light upon the character of the progenitors of the English-speaking race. The author gives a complete description of the religious, social, political, and warlike life of the Northmen. The reader follows them from their birth to their grave—sees the infant exposed to die, or "water-sprinkled;" the child in his education and in his sports; the young man in his practice of arms or in his wooing; the maiden in her domestic duties; the adult in his warlike expedition on sea or land. He learns about their dress, ornaments, weapons, dwellings, their primitive or beautifully carved furniture, their temples, sacrifices, gods, and sacred ceremonies; their festivals, feasts, and drunken revels; their ships, horses, chariots, slaves.

THEIR CANOE TRIP.

By MARY P. W. SMITH, author of " Jolly Good Times; or, Child Life on a Farm," "Jolly Good Times at School," "The Browns," etc. 1 vol., 16mo, cloth, $1.25.

A story founded on the actual experiences of two Roxbury boys during a canoe trip on the Concord, Merrimac, Piscataguog, and other rivers. The book abounds in incidents, some of them quaint and curious, and as a lesson of experience it teaches a certain dauntlessness and selfreliance, a contempt for obstacles and for trifling inconveniences. A healthy, breezy story of outdoor life on New England rivers, and a boon to all sturdy lads and lovers of aquatics.

FLIPWING THE SPY.

A Story for Children. By LILY F. WESSELHOEFT, author of "Sparrow the Tramp." With illustrations by Miss A. L. Plympton. 16mo, cloth,

A happy little story in which a bat called "Flipwing" does some clever secret service in trapping Mr. Fox. The conversations between the Donkey, Heifer, Rooster, Goose, and Toad are extremely ludicrous and amusing. It is very much in the same vein as "Sparrow the Tramp," and like that book will surely be a favorite with all the children.

RECENT ECONOMIC CHANGES,

And Their Effect on the Production and Distribution of Wealth and the Well-Being of Society.

BY DAVID A. WELLS.

President American Social Science Association, etc.

ramo, cloth. Price, $2.00.

The readers of "The Popular Science Monthly" will remember the interesting series of papers communicated to its pages during the years 1887 and 1888 by Mr. David A. Wells; in which were traced out, and exhibited in something like regular order, the causes and extent of the wonderful industrial and social changes and accompanying disturbances which have especially characterized the last fifteen or twenty years of the world's history. It is safe to say that no economic papers published in recent years, on either side of the Atlantic, have attracted more attention or been read by so many persons. Since their original publication in the Science Monthly, these papers have been in great part rewritten by the author, bringing them down to the latest date, and they are now presented in one convenient volume.

WILL PUBLISH IMMEDIATELY:

The Diary of Philip Hone.

Edited by BAYARD TUCKERMAN. In 2 vols., large 8vo, $7.50.

Philip Hone, a member of an old Knickerbocker family, was one of the few men of his time in America who had the leisure to keep a diary, and the varied experience to make such a record valuable to posterity. He held the office of Mayor of New York, and for many years was high in the counsels of the Whig party, and was closely identified with the leading interests of the city. His diary extends from 1884 to 1845. The political life of these years commented upon by one who was familiar with its inner workings. Daniel Webster, Martin Van Buren, with a score of their prominent contemporaries, are familiarly described and conversations with them recorded. A graphic description is given of the famous Tippecance election, in which Hone took an active part on the side of Harrison.

But probably the portion of this diary which will be most eagerly read is that relating to the social life of New York.

The Knickerbocker of to-day will learn what company was present at his father's wedding; where his grandfather most frequently dined, and what people thought about him. The student of the history of New York will fad Hone's diary a mine of information; the gossips of to-day will pause to enjoy the forgotten small talk of their grandmothers.

By Austin Dobson. 2 vols., 12mo, rich gold ornamentation and gilt tops, or in plain boards, uncut, $4.00; half calf, $8.00; half levant, $9.00; full calf or levant, $12.00.

These volumes contain "Old World Idyls," published in America under the title "Vignettes in Rhyme," and "At the Sign of the Lyre." The edition has been especially prepared by the author, and a goodly number of posses have been added which appear now for the first time. It is the author's edition, published by special arrangement with him.

Feet of Clay.

By Amelia E. Barr. A story laid in the Isle of Man. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

In Bella Clucas Mrs. Barr has drawn one of those noble women who have almost disappeared from the fiction of the day—a woman whose womanliness is not obscured by convention, and whose innate nobility of character is not buttressed by social position and conventional standards. Bella Clucas stands alone in the native purity and dignity of her nature, as genuine, as spirited, and as beautiful a figure as Mrs. Barr has ever portrayed.

Letters of the Duke of Wellington to Miss J., 1834-1851. 12mo, boards, with label, uncut, $1.75.

At the time Miss J.'s correspondence with the Duke of Wellington opened she was a very beautiful woman about twenty years of age.

Of a deeply devotional nature, she felt she had been especially called of God to do a great work. Looking around her for an object, her attention was drawn to the Duke of Wellington.

The Duke of Wellington was at this time (1834) a man sixty-five years old. He was in the prime of strength and health. He had now been a widower for three years.

Battlefields of '61.

Taken Alive, and Other Stories.

By the late EDWARD P. ROE. 12mo, cloth, uniform with Mr. Roe's other stories, $1.50.

This volume contains eight or ten stories, some of them of very considerable length, which have appeared in various periodicals or were found among Mr. Roe's papers at his death. It completes the edition of his stories, making the eighteenth volume of the series. Mr. Roe's two works on gardening have also been issued in a shape uniform with his novels,

The Home Acre.

Which aims to show what may be done with an acre of land about the home, and contains chapters on such subjects as "Small Fruits," "The Lawn," "Trees and Tree Planting," "Shrubs," etc., etc.

Works and Poems, With Glossary and Life. By J. TALFOURD BLAIR. Carefully edited from the best texts. With 40 Line Block reproductions of Westall and others' well-known Engravings. Eight vols., crown 32mo, 4050 pages, from a new font of nonpareil type, and beautifully printed by the Glasgow University Press, on thin opaque PAPER MADE ESPECIALLY FOR THIS EDITION.

Though there are many editions of Shakespeare, the Publishers feel confident that there is a real want for one smaller in size and price than any which has yet appeared. The "Illustrated Pocket Edition" adds to its other stranges as clear a letter press as the other smaller editions, although these latter are almost twice as large and more costly.

NOTES IN SEASON.

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish immediately "The Diary of Philip Hone," edited by Bayard Tuckerman. Philip Hone, an old Knickerbocker, was Mayor of New York, and for many years high in the councils of the Whig party, and closely identified with the leading interests of New York City in the early part of this century. His diary extends from 1828 to 1845, and is especially rich in reminiscences of the political and social life and events of that period. They have also nearly ready "Emanuel," a story of the Messiah, by William F. Cooley, and "The Life of John David the Navigator," by Clemens R. Markham, the first of a series of Great Explorers and Exportions

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS publish this week, as already announced, Du Chaillu's "The Viking Age;" also a "History of the United States," by Henry Adams. Mr. Adams' work, when complete, will cover one of the most important periods of American history, that embracing the two administrations of Jefferson and the two following of Madison, from 1801 to 1817. The two volumes now ready are devoted to the first administration of Jefferson and to the great political, financial, and international questions that arose after the transfer of the control of the Government from the Federalists to the thencalled Republican party. The first half dozen chapters are given over to a review of the economic, social, and intellectual status of the country at the beginning of the century, the domestic and foreign policy of Jefferson's administration being then taken up.

HARPER & BROS. will publish shortly "Cathedrals and Abbeys in Great Britain and Ireland, a large and sumptuous volume containing over forty illustrations which present all the cathedrals in England, and the leading ones in Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, together with the more celebrated abbeys. The Rev. Richard Wheatley, D.D., has prepared the descriptive text, giving as much of history and art as is necessary to a clear and accurate knowledge of this interesting subject. They have also nearly ready "The Odd Number," a translation by Jonathan Sturges, of a number of Guy de Maupassant's charming short stories, "Would You Kill Him?" a new novel by George Parsons Lathrop; "London: A pilgrimage," text by Blanchard Jerrold, with Doré's designs; "Thomas Nast's Christmas Drawings for the Human Race," and Constance Fenimore Woolson's "Jupiter Lights."

A. C. Armstrong & Son have now ready a new illustrated handy-volume edition of William Wordsworth's poetical works. It is in eight sixteenmo volumes, printed from new type, with red lines, on paper made specially for the edition. Wordsworth is distinctively the poet for the common people; he was enthusiastic in behalf of their rights, and earnestly opposed to all social distinctions and privileges which the will of the people had not decreed—hence no poet can be studied at the present time to better advantage. In these convenient volumes songs, sonnets, and passages of familiar beauty will be, moreover, reread with new delight by those who have found in their acquaintance with Wordsworth one of the strongest consolations and most vivid influences of their intellectual A comprehensive life of the poet has been added to the collection. They have also just ready a new and handsome red-line edition of Shakespeare's works, with a life, an index to common quotations from his work, and a full glossary. The edition is in eight sixteenmo volumes, and in get-up and general style uniform with the Wordsworth described above. They will soon issue, in cooperation with Elliot Stock, a fac-simile of the first edition of John Bunyan's "Country Rhymes," which has recently been discovered and acquired by the British Museum. The Rev. John Brown, of Bedford, England, will furnish an introduction, giving the history of the little volume.

These two volumes are devoted to the first administration of Jefferson and to the great political, financial, and international questions that arose after the transfer of the control of the government from the Federalists to the then-called Republican party. The first half-dozen chapters are given over to a masterly review of the conmic, social, and intellectual status of the country at the beginning of the century, the domestic and foreign policy of Jefferson's administration being then taken up. Mr. Adams' work, when complete, will cover one of the most important periods of American history—that embracing the two administrations of Jefferson and the two following of Madison—from 1801 to 1817. It is an epoch to which Mr. Adams has devoted many years of study, aided by the papers of his family and by many other original and valuable sources of information, and concerning which he speaks with authority. which he speaks with authority.

Alaska. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1889.] c. 5-348 p. il. O. cl., $2.50. Gives an account of a trip taken by a gentleman and his family from the eastern part of the United States to Alaska, partly in search of a mountain of which they had heard, where it was supposed that very valuable minerals could be found, and partly for a vacation and pleasure trip. Mr. Allen has given a most excellent idea of this little-known country, at the same time interwaving an exciting and interesting narrative of adventure. The book is illustrated with many pictures made from original drawings by the well-known artists, F. T. Merrill and W. L. Taylor.

87.50. The series of descriptions embraced in these two handsome volumes were brought together by Mr. Du Chaillu, through the most patient and laborious research. The reading of the Sagas alone, of which there are many hundreds, dealing with the events of a man's life from his birth to his death, was a work of many years. And this was done, not from translations, but from the original documents. not from translations, but from the original documents. The testimony of archeology, as corroborating the Sagas, forms one of the most important links in the chain of his argument. The researches of the past fifty years have uncarthed almost every kind of implement, weapon, and ornament, throwing a wonderful light upon the history of the Northmen. The volume is profusely illustrated with specimens of arms and armor, gold and silver ornaments of the most skilful workmanship and refined beauty, wood-carving, filigree work, carriages, agricult-ural implements, etc., showing that the Northmen who settled Britain were a most highly educated and civilized

The scene is laid in France in the middle of the 17th century, when the religious contest between the Jansenists and Jesuits was exciting the subjects of Louis 14th. Flectitous characters, and a number of real personages, such as the Duc de Roannez, his sister, and Blaise Pascal, fillustrate the principles of the Jansen fraternity, while Mme. la Duchesse de Roannez supports the Jesuit faction. Considerable mention is made of the institution,

Port Royal, and the habits of Mère Angelique. Altogether the book is a fair picture of the times, although the view is from a Jansen standpoint. A quaint little romance adds a charm and is a fitting ending to a historical novel.

The author, who has written many books on the study of music, says in his preface: "Among the vast army of music students busily engaged in acquiring technical skill in manipulating instruments and voices, there are comparatively few who cultivate the critical faculties in listening properly to music, or have sufficient analytical knowledge to enable them to name and classify a composition after a single hearing." The reason of this is that "listening to music is an art, and can be acquired only through a systematic series of exercises and instructions." This book is offered for this purpose, and appears to be most thorough. It gives illustrations of all kinds of music and musical compositions with descriptive text.

"It is a novel written with a high ethical purpose, and yet it never descends to the level of mere didacticisms.

. . . The scene is placed among the German population of an American city, but into this focus are brought many of the principal forces that are now moulding our national life. Karl Metzerott, after whom the book is named, is a socialist, and he lives to see the tree of soctaism bear both sweet and bitter fruit. Then there is Father McCloskey, the brilliant Romanist, given to sharp speeches and kind deeds; Brnest Clare, the sincere, frank, devoted, unselish preacher: Henry Randolph, the proud, unscrupulous capitalist; Dr. Richards, the atheist who demonstrates the greet truth that character is more proud, unscrupulous capitalist; Dr. Richards, the atheist who demonstrates the great truth that character is more than creed; Louis Metzerott, a martyr to his faith; and all the delightful company that gathered about the centre of cooperative experiment known as 'Prices'—an experiment which might easily be put into practice on the lines laid down by the author, so definite is the plan and so careful the exposition of its workings."—Boston Bes-

Porter, D: D. Arthur Merton: a romance. N. Y., Appleton, 1880. c. 328 p. D. pap.,

Admiral Porter has laid the scene of his romance in England. It tells of a most unhappy marriage, brought about by fraud and deceit. A young girl loves a man of her own age and station, but they are both poor, and are waiting hopefully for the time when they may prudently marry. Mr. Marton, a rich manufactuer, swears he will win this girl, and finally does so, after ruining her lover's good name, and driving him to Australia. Arthur Merton is the issue of this marriage. He in his turn is the victim of an enemy, and is thrown into prison for theft. At the end of the book the truth about all parties is brought out, after a good deal of skilful detective business. Admiral Porter has laid the scene of his romance in

First printed in Macmillan's Magasins. A story of the sea of some fifty years ago. The hero, Mr. Musgrave, has undertaken to escort to Rio Janeiro his cousin Alexander's betrothed, Miss Aurelia Grant. The captain of the brig they sail on is a brute, and the crew mutiny, murder the captain, and put the two passengers ashore on a desert island, hence the name "Marooned." After many weeks they leave the island in an open boat, and are, after many thrilling adventures, carried back to England.

il. D. cl., §2.

From the great interest that is manifested by the present generation in "cycling," this might well be termed, as the author states, the "living wheel age." The interesting art of man-motor carriages has developed an industry of vast importance, the product of which does service to a great variety of individuals. Very little, however, has been published concerning the "cycling art," and the author now places before the public a work that furnishes information of a valuable as well as scientific nature. It is profusely illustrated with cuts especially prepared, and is undoubtedly the best book yet produced on this subject. duced on this subject

Che Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

OCTOBER 26, 1889.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

A CENSUS OF PUBLISHING.

THERE has been so much said as to the decadence of publishing that it would be of real business value if there could be a means of comparing the actual product of the trade from one year to another, or from one decade to another. If, for instance, there had been an adequate report of publishing as distinguished from printing in the census of 1880, which could be compared with a similar return for 1890, it would give not only much food for reflection, but be a practical business guide in every-day trade relations. If the trade had actually fallen off, or had fallen off in relation to the population, publishers would have reason to set themselves to asking why and to planning how their business could be bettered. We hope sincerely that such a return may form a feature of the plans for the census of 1890, and we understand that the matter is under discussion by the census authorities. It is indeed difficult to obtain from publishers actual returns which would give the original data for tabulation, partly because the individual publishers do not keep such figures in shape for their own purposes. But it would be worth not a little trouble on the part of each house to contribute its share to the general result. We trust, therefore, that the Census Bureau will be heartily supported by the leading publishers in case it should undertake such a work.

It is announced, apparently on the authority of Belford, Clarke & Co., that they have succeeded in effecting a compromise with 95 per cent. of their creditors on the basis, it is to be presumed, of 25 cents on the dollar, unsecured. These statements, in some instances, are not sustained by the facts; moreover, there seems to have been no creditors' meeting properly called at which all creditors were permitted opportunity to be present, and the whole affair is, to put it mildly, in very curious shape. We can only protest in the name of dealers who pay a hundred cents on the dollar both against the method in which the house of Belford, Clarke & Co. has met its difficulties and the bad policy on the part of creditors who accept such a compromise as this. The result is an inducement to other houses to imitate this course of inflating their business indefinitely and then permitting creditors to whistle for results.

BELFORD, CLARKE & CO. TO RESUME.

THE statement has been given out that at a meeting of the creditors of the firm of Belford, Clarke & Co., held at Cleveland, it was decided to accept the proposition, viz.: to pay 25 cents on the dollar in three, six, nine, and twelve months. It is claimed that all the important creditors indorsed this measure, the amount represented by those who have not yet signed being estimated at below ten thousand dollars.

It was decided, as put forth in the communication printed in our last issue, to divide the business into two corporations, one in New York and the other in Chicago. The Eastern concern is to be called the Belford Company, to be in charge of R. J. Belford, who will also continue Belford's Magasine; the Western house is to be known as the Belford, Clarke Company and to be run by Messrs. Belford, Clarke, and some new men who Belford, Clarke intend to put in fresh capital. Company will settle with the Western creditors, and the Belford Company with the Eastern creditors, who are to have a voice in the management of the business until their twenty-five per cent. has been paid.

YOUNG MEN AS PUBLISHERS.

Bok's literary letter contains a good story of a sedate and elderly Boston gentleman whose business recently brought him to the Scribner publishing house in New York. His errand concerning itself with the advertising department, he asked to be introduced to the responsible head of that branch of the business. He was introduced to young Edward Bok, who is perhaps twenty-five. He looked the youth over, and concluding that he wanted to talk to an older head, asked to be taken to the manager of the educational department. Compliance with this request brought him to Mr. William D. Moffat, who is twenty-four. Again the sedate, elderly man found his yearnings for some one advanced in years unsatisfied, and asked for the business manager of the magazine, whereupon he was taken to Mr. Frank.N. Doubleday, himself twenty-six. This wouldn't do, and as it chanced Mr. O. W. Brewey, the general traveller, or representative of the house, who is twenty seven, was passing, the Boston man was introduced to him. By this time the Eastern man of years grew desperate and asked to see Mr. Scribner. This disclosed to him Mr. Arthur H. Scribner, the junior partner, who owos to twenty-six summers, and was the final blow to the man seeking after age. Mustering courage to faintly ask for Mr. Charles Scribner himself, he finally brought up in that gentleman's office only to meet a man just turned thirty-five! Then was the Boston man perfectly aghast to find that a group of what were almost boys could conduct one of the largest and most profitable publishing houses in the country.

PRICES OF BOOKS AT AUCTION.

From the N. Y. Observer.

THOUGH auction sales of standard, miscellaneous, and rare books are numerous in New York. they do not form so regular and important a feature in the annual record of book sales as they do in the city of London. There the greatest private libraries are year after year scattered by the auctioneer throughout the wide world. It is in this way that the greatest public libraries obtain their most important acquisitions and the most valuable private libraries are continually enriched. It seems that there is no house or family in Great Britain that will not sooner or later exchange its literary treasure for money. who regret such a state of things as this will be glad to learn that the book sales of London in 1888 were not so numerous or so important as during several of the years immediately preceding. It is said that there are usually about seventy high-class book auctions in London during a year, while during the season of 1888 there were but forty-nine, and these included comparatively few books of great reputation and value. may indicate that the supply of such works in private hands is gradually diminishing as the leading libraries of the world absorb more and more of the limited number of those works which are valued mainly for their variety and antiquity. Shakespeare folios are rarer every year. At the Aylesford sale the first folio realized £200; the second folio, £140; the third £93, and the fourth £29. Only the last was perfect.

Early printed American books and tracts have long been objects of special interest to the British collector. "Americana" is one of the constant headings in all English catalogues of second-hand books. At the Martin sale a pamphlet of thirty-five pages, printed at New York in 1719, entitled "The Charter and Laws of the City of New York," sold for £75, and a "Brief Description of the Province of Carolina," 4to, 1666, for £46. The "Epistola" of Columbus, the edition supposed to have been printed by Planck at Rome in 1493, was sold at the Crawford sale last year for £36. At the sale of the Wimpole Library, the highest price of the season was reached, namely, £555 for twelve tracts relating to America, bound in one small quarto volume, comprising such rarities as Hamor's "True Discourse of the Present Estate of Virginia," 1615; Cotton's "Abstract of the Laws of New England," 1641; and Ashley's "Relation of Cochin-China," 1633. At the same sale nine other tracts, also relating to America, sold for £66.

Early editions of standard authors held their own in 1888. The first edition of Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy," possessing the leaf of errata at the end, realized £25 10s. at a sale in February, and at the same time £12 10s. was obtained for the "Pickwick Papers" in the original parts. At this sale a unique copy of "Paradise Lost" sold for £15, the first edition of 1668, with seven preliminary leaves not previously observed by any bibliographer. At the Gibson-Craig sale, the Kilmarnock edition of Burns' "Poems" brought £111, the highest figure ever paid for this rare work. Fifty pounds was paid for the first edition of Walton was sold for £23 as fourteen leaves were absent.

We have a flourishing Grolier Club in New York. Its members are not necessarily all wealthy, for men have been known to wear rags, in order that they might have books which were dressed in rich leather and gold. At the Gibson-Craig sale, £78 was paid for the "Prognosticatio" of Liechtenberger, Cologne, 1520, on account of the inscriptions in letters of gold, "Io Gr et amicorum" at the bottom of the cover, and on the reverse "Portio mea Domine sit in Terra Viventium." Books from the Library of Grolier are said to be worth their weight in gold. "Camerarius de Prædestinatione," 1556, follo, bound in white leather, the sides blind tooled with the emblems of Diana of Poitiers, brought £146. At the Turner sale, £61 was paid for Rogers' "Italy" and "Poems" in two vols., 1830-4, both volumes splendidly bound by Bedford in morocco extra, covered with minute gold tooling, relieved by variegated leathers in the Grolier style. Such are some of the curiosities of what has been called bibliomania by a wondering world.

Until bibliomania has been completely cured and extirpated, "Caxtons" will be the despair of all collectors with moderate means. At the Wimpole sale, an imperfect copy of the "Game and Play of Chesse," 1475, brought £260, and a very imperfect copy of the "Myrrour of the Worlde," 1481, brought £60. We have printed so much and so often in regard to the prices of old Bibles that we do not mention these in this summary.

In noting the prices of books the uninformed should remember that the price is largely determined by the condition of the book. Sometimes an unbound copy would bring five or ten times what it would if bound, and again the binding may give a book nearly all the value it has. We have little sympathy with any kind of speculation, and none whatever with speculation in books. But if any one has any special interest in the treasures of print, he may make them a study and acquire such knowledge as will prove a pleasant recreation. He cannot purchase judiciously without knowing the history of the volume and the class to which it belongs. Such knowledge is the recreation of the student and scholar, who is incapable of finding pleasure in the ordinary amusements of the thoughtless world.

NEWBERY HOUSE.

SINCE the rebuilding of the old house at the corner of St. Paul's Churchyard (London), the business of Messrs. Griffith, Farran, Okeden & Welsh has developed to an extent that could not possibly have been foreseen four or five years ago, and in consequence they have been obliged to build larger premises, which are now completed, and the publishing department of Messrs. Griffith, Farran & Co.'s business has been transferred thereto.

It may be interesting to state that the house was founded in the year 1740 by John Newbery, the philanthropic publisher of St. Paul's Churchyard, as he is called in "The Vicar of Wakefield." After his death in 1767 it was continued successively by his son Francis Newbery, his nephew Francis Newbery, and his step-son, Thomas Carnan. Most of Oliver Goldsmith's writings were published by John Newbery, who also issued the works of Dr. Johnson, Christopher Smart, Dr. Dodd, and many other celebrated writers. The old house in St. Paul's Churchyard was also a renowned medicine and tea warehouse. Dr. James' fever powders, and numerous patent medicines were for years sold there. Cephalic snuff, analeptic pills, and tea at 30s. per pound were also among the commodities to be bought at the establishment a hundred years ago. After the Newbervs, John Harris succeeded to the business. It subsequently became Grant & Griffith, later on Griffith & Farran, and five years ago the present style was adopted.

The new house is built upon a prominent site in Charing Cross Road, at the corner of Bear Street and Cranbourne Street, it stands upon land which is the property of the London County Council, and it bears the name of Newbery House in memory of the founder of the business. It contains an area of nearly 3000 superficial feet in the basement, and over 2000 feet on each floor above. It has three frontages, the two principal ones being faced with red bricks and white Portland stone; the third is faced with picked white glazed bricks.

The house, which is six stories in height, is substantial and handsome in appearance. Here and there is introduced in the carved stonework the sign of the "Bible and Sun," with the motto "Fiat Lux." There are about 120 tons of iron used in the building, each floor having a continuous iron girder built in the enclosing walls besides a stanchion in nearly every pier.

The main entrance leads directly into a large hall, with a tessellated pavement; on the right is a private reception and waiting room. In this hall are displayed a complete set of the publications of the house and of Messrs. Griffith, Farran & Co.'s special productions in books in leather bindings, Bibles, prayer-books, hymnals, etc.

In the waiting room, contained in two large bookcases, is the collection of the publications of John Newbery, the founder of the house, dating from 1740 to the end of the last century, and of Harris, his successor; and of the successors of Harris, from 1800 down to the present time.

CANADIAN PROTECTION OF BOOKS.

On October 18 a circular was issued to the Canadian collectors of customs, notifying them that it has been reported that two cheap editions of Dickens' works have recently been published in the United States and are likely to be largely circulated in Canada. The collectors are requested to see that the copyright royalty of 124 per cent. is levied upon such importation, as well as the customs duty of 15 per cent.

COMMUNICATIONS.

"AN APPEAL TO PHARAOH."

NEW YORK, Oct. 22, 1889.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

SIR: Your summary or digest of "An Appeal to Pharaoh," in the Weekly Record of last week, says: "His remedy [for the evils of the negro problem] is a wholesale exportation by the government of the negro race to Africa or some other country.

That is precisely what his remedy is not. It is, on the contrary, a carefully elaborated plan of induced emigration on the part of certain specialized classes among the negroes; and one reason why the book is arousing such an interested discussion is the great pains taken by the author to make a plan to serve the welfare of the negro, as well as to provide a gradual and natural remedy for the ills endured by both races, on account of his presence in the country.

The Philadelphia Telegraph says: "More copies of it will be sold and read than of most successful novels." Whether this be true or not. the book has already made a marked impression; and, as it is an eminently fair book, it deserves fair discussion, on its own merits or demerits.

FORDS HOWARD & HILLREST

Our brief note was perhaps not fully accurate, as the author accepts forcible exportation only if a necessary alternative. But it was based on the following passage:

following passage:

"The forcible removal of the whole black and colored population of the United States could be accomplished, and should be accomplished, if that were necessary. Their gradual and induced immigration [sic] will be equally efficient and far preferable, and should be eacouraged and effected wherever and so far as it shall be favored, by either the white people or the blacks themselves. The whole influence and resources of the natios, operating through the agency of the general government, can be and ought to be employed for the permanent restoration to the Union—for that is what it amounts to—of so much of the soil of the Union as shall bid for redemption through its return to the exclusive control of the white race."

OBITUARY.

EDMUND McLoughlin, formerly of the firm of McLoughlin Brothers, died on the 17th inst. at his home, No. 558 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn, aged fifty-six years. He had been confined to the house for about four weeks. He retired from the publishing firm in 1885, and has since been engaged in various enterprises, but the condition of his health has for a considerable time inter-fered with his pursuits. He had a large circle of friends in old Williamsburg, the Eastern District of Brooklyn, and was well and favorably known among business men in New York. He leaves a wife and four children.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

WILLIAM C. CHURCH, the authorized biographer of John Ericsson, will contribute two articles on the great inventor to Scribner.

MRS. L. B. WALFORD.—Our correspondent, " Broad Brim." in his friendly desire to enlighten our ignorance concerning the identity of this lady novelist, appears inadvertently to have led us astray in two particulars. Mrs. Walford is the niece, not the daughter, of "Scotland's premier baronet," and Mr. Walford is not a member of the firm of Millington & Sons, but is a large shareholder in and director of the firm of Wrigley & Son, Limited .- London Bookseller.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

- "THERE'S nothing like leather." not even that imitation leather, made of paper.—Puck.
- D. Applieton & Co. will shortly publish W. Clark Russell's new novel, "The Romance of Jennie Harlowe."
- S. W. FLEMING, Harrisburg, Pa., has just ready a set of fifty views of the terrible disaster at Johnstown. The views are lithographed from photographs, and put up in a neat portfolio.
- CASSELL & Co. have secured for publication a novel by Will N. Harber, a rising Southern author, which they are confident will make a sensation in the North as well as in the South. It is entitled "White Marie."

DE WOLFE, FISKE & Co. have just ready "Essentials of the Metric System," by George Jackson, with full explanation of its principles, and numerous examples for practice, making a valuable handbook for technical schools.

Longmans, Green & Co. will publish shortly two volumes of American short stories, "Gerald Ffrench's Friends," tales of California Irishmen, by George H. Jessop, and "A Family Tree, and other stories," by Brander Matthews.

J. W. BOUTON is soliciting subscriptions for the "Salon of Paris" for 1889. Like its predecessors, it will illustrate the principal works by the photogravure process, one hundred plates being promised in various colors, and the majority of them full-page.

THE WORTHINGTON COMPANY have just issued François Coppée's "Henriette, or, a Corsican mother," translated by Edward Wakefield, and illustrated with photogravures. They will publish, on November 1, "A Study of Ben Jonson," by Algernon Charles Swinburne.

THOMAS WHITTAKER has just published a new edition with some changes of Miss Anne Ayres' "Life and Work of William Augustus Muhlenberg." The first edition of this work was published by Harper & Brothers, the second and third editions by A. D. F. Randolph & Co.

D. C. HEATH & Co. will issue at once Hoffman's "Tales from History," with historical and explanatory notes. They also issue Freytag's "Aus dem Staat Friederichs des Grossen," with notes explanatory and critical by Herman Hager, and an appendix which adds some notes on the phonetic changes in German.

GEBBIE & Co. have recently published, at a popular price, a new edition of Dumas' "The Lady with the Camellias," with reproductions in photogravure of all the illustrations that appeared in the expensive edition of last year. It makes a handsome octavo volume and is beautifully printed and appropriately bound.

THE WRITERS' PUBLISHING Co., N. Y., have just issued "A Directory of Catholic Colleges, Academies, and Leading Schools in the U. S. for 1889 and 1890." It is arranged alphabetically by States and towns, with ample marginal space for changes and corrections, and is planned especially for advertisers who have need of a complete addressing and ready reference list in a convenient form.

THE NEW YORK SCHOOL-BOOK CLEARING-HOUSE, by an arrangement with the English publishers, have just issued the series of Hossfeld's "Methods for the Study of Modern Languages" German, Spanish, and Italian. This series of language books, originally issued by the Society for Promoting a Knowledge of Foreign Languages, of London, met with almost immediate success, and their continued use is attributed to the lessons.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will soon publish the Hon. William Waldorf Astor's second novel, "Sforza: a story of Milan." As in his "Valentino," Mr. Astor chooses historical and romantic Italy for the scene of his novel. It is a tale of one of the most famous families of mediæval Italy, and gives the author the richest possible material for a dramatic plot, several well-drawn and sharply accented characters, and a succession of brilliantly-worded pen-pictures of the times he portrays. The Scribners have assumed the publication of "Goodholme's Domestic Encyclo pædia" (formerly published by C. A. Montgomery & Co.). The work will hereafter appear with their imprint. The book has for years been considered the most complete and authoritative domestic work published.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. will publish shortly "With Gauge and Swallow," by Judge Tourgee, a new novel in a somewhat new field, though one with which the author is most familiar, and gives free scope to his quaint humor, his keen satire, and his well-known fondness for socio-political questions; "Adrift," a novel, the scene of which is located in the neighborhood of Niagara, by Julia D. Young; a new translation, by Mrs. Wister, entitled "Erlach Court;" and "The Bursting of a Boom," a novel, by Frederick R. Sanford. They will also issue this month a treatise on "Crime," by Judge S. M. Green, who has embodied in this work the opinions and settled convictions to which he has been led by a long experience as judge both in the Circuit and Supreme Courts of Michigan. While the volume will naturally be of much service to lawyers, it is not specifically a legal book, but is a popular and, at the same time, exhaustive discussion of the nature, causes, treatment and prevention of crime. Judge Green arraigns heredity, intemperance, ignorance, poverty, and our unsatisfactory social conditions, and makes a strong case against them.

GEORGE BELL & Sons have in preparation the early diary of Frances Burney (Mme. d'Arblay), in two volumes, edited from the original MSS. by Annie Raine Ellis.

CHAPMAN & HALL announce "Behind the Scenes of the Comédie Française, and other recollections," by M. Arsène Houssaye, translated, with notes, by Mr. Albert D. Vandam.

ADAM & CHARLES BLACK, of Edinburgh, announce a new and enlarged edition of the collected works of Thomas De Quincey, edited by Prof. David Masson, De Quincey's biographer in the English Men of Letters series. Several papers not before reprinted will be given in this edition, and the whole will be carefully classified. It will consist of fourteen volumes, to appear at intervals of one month; and it will be illustrated with portraits and views.

WE hear tidings from time to time of choice prints on hand-made paper of unpublished letters and poems of poets and writers from Shelley to the present day, made by unknown printers in divers States of America, which wicked rumor says are situated in the city of London; "but where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise." Collectors of book rarities may, however, some day find that they have not yet heard of all the privately-printed productions of even the present year of grace.—Academy.

T. FISHER UNWIN, London, announces "The English Novel in the Time of Shakspere," by J. J. Jusserand; Ibsen's "A Doll's House," with portrait and photographs, and "The Lady from the Sea," translated by Eleanor Marx; Sir William Jones' "Sakuntala, or, the fatal ring," edited by Prof. Rhys-Davids; "The Barbary Corsairs," by Stanley Lane-Poole; "The Butterfly: its nature, development, and attributes," by John Stuttard; and "The Diary of the Parnell Commission," revised upon the Daily News by John Macdonald.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

ROSSETTI AS DESIGNER AND DANTE GABRIEL

WRITER.

Notes by WILLIAM MICHAEL ROSSETTI, including a prose paraphrase of "The House of Life." $2.00.

The present is the only volume that Wm. M. Rossetti has issued regarding his famous brother. In this volume the author has not attempted to write a biographical or critical account of Dante Rossetti, shrinking modestly from a task which he would be sure to perform well. "Mine is a book of memoranda and of details," he says; but it is more than that, for the thread upon which these memoranda are strung is of spun gold, which lends a brilliancy to what might be, but is far from being, dull reading.

ZEALAND AFTER FIFTY YEARS.

By EDWARD WAKEFIELD. With numerous illustrations. 1 vol., 8vo, cloth, $2.

Mr. Wakefield has the faculty of being exhaustive and accurate without being tedious, partly from the habit of studying every subject thoroughly, and partly from the good fortune of possessing a clear, direct, and graphic style. He has the advantage, too, in describing strange lands, of being an excellent naturalist.

SUBJECTS OF SOCIAL

WELFARE

THE MORGESONS.

By ELIZABETH STODDARD, author of "Two Men." "Temple House," etc. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

A well-known writer says of Blizabeth Stoddard's novels: "She is the Charlotte Bronte of our time, in her high, lonely, isolated genius. To read her novels is to come into the direct atmosphere of an almost unrivalled power of creative art."

AN HONEST HYPOCRITE

By EDWARD STAATS DE GROTE TOMP-

KINS. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents
"The Great Theological Novel of the Day."
This volume is really the author's own beliefs put into the form of a story. The point that is at once raised is,
"Is Christianity a sham or is it not?" There is no preaching in the work, but there is a good story and a stirring plot.

SCRIBNER'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

PAUL B. DU CHAILLU'S GREAT WORK.

The Viking Age.

The Early History, Manners, and Customs of the Ancestors of the English-speaking Nations. Illustrated from the Antiquities Discovered in Mounds, Cairns, and Bogs, as well as from the Ancient Sagas and Eddas. By PAUL B. Du CHAILLU, author of "Equatorial Africa," "Land of the Midnight Sun," etc. With 1400 illustrations. 2 vols., 8vo, $7.50.

Mr. Du Chaillu's great popular work is the product of eight and a half years of constant labor. It presents a graphic picture of the civilization of the Norsemen, their laws, customs, habits, industrial skill, and mode of life. Mr. Du Chaillu's conclusion, from the great mass of evidence presented, is that ancestors of the English-speaking race were Scandinavian, and not, as is generally held, Germanic in origin. The volumes are enriched with 1400 illustrations, conveying a vast amount of curious information, and adding beauty to a useful holiday volume.

"In these two volumes we see the ancient Norseman as he lived—in peace and war—at home and in his incursions into far distant lands. We follow him from the cradle to the grave. We learn to know him even to the hair, eyes, face, and limbs. We meet him in his dwelling-place and in his convivial halls—in his temples engaged in sacrifices and sacred ceremonies—at his athletic games and at his festivals and betrothal and marriage feasts. It is a reconstruction of a people and their daily life, teaching us to know them as they were, and to take pride in them as worthy of being our ancestors."—Pkiladelphia Times.

History of the United States.

The First Administration of Thomas Jefferson. By HENRY ADAMS. 2 vols., 12mo, $4.00.

Mr. Adams's work, when complete, will cover one of the most important periods of American history—that embraced in the two administrations of Jefferson and the two following of Madison—from 1801 to 1817. The two volumes of the work here announced are devoted to the first administration of Jefferson, and to the great political, financial, and international questions that arose at that time. Mr. Adams found in the governmental archives in Paris, London, and Madrid many documents never before consulted, that form the basis of his scholarly and important work.

It is a dignified, scholarly, brilliant work, the fruit of many years of labor, fresh and virile in style, and revealing in every line the care and thoroughness with which the author has made the subject his own. The work is crowded with remarkably subtile and discriminating character portraits of famous Buropeans as well as Americans, entertaining descriptions of historic scenes and lucid analysis of political questions and political crisis.

W. W. ASTOR'S NEW NOVEL.

Sforza: A Story of Milan.

By WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR. 12mo, $1.50.

As in his successful work "Valentino," Mr. Astor has chosen historical and romantic Italy for the scene of his novel, and deals with the fortunes of one of the great Italian families.

The qualities that give distinction to this tale are many; among others, the sharply-accented characters, the simplicity and dramatic strength of the plot, the succession of brilliantly-worded pictures of the popular festivals of the time, both in Milan and in the neighboring, though hostile, State of Venice. The romance, in a word, gives further proof of the thoroughness of Mr. Astor's historical studies, and cannot fail to add materially to his literary reputation.

Square 12mo, Red Cloth, with Elegant Design in Black, White, and Gold, 440 pp., with Steel Portrait, and Numerous Excellent Illustrations.

PRICE WILL BE TWO DOLLARS.

A BEAUTIFUL GIFT-BOOK.

"The design of this work is not to trench upon the ground of strict biography. . . . The writer has undertaken a labor of love, which finds its excuse in the desire to present to the young people of the age, and particularly the young women of America, a list of the literary works of Harriet Beecher Stowe, with an outline of each, and an unpretentious running commentary, such as is naturally suggested in their reading.

"The main focts of Mrs. Stowe's life are given, with such reference to her personal experience as seems to explain the motive, the conception, and the prosecution of the great works which have made her our most famous author. To these are added personal reminiscences."—From the Preface.

"Mrs. McCray, who is widely known as an authoress, has been engaged for two years in preparing her work, and it will prove a delightful contribution to the literary history of the period,"—New York Times.

James Fenimore Cooper.

By PROFESSOR T. R. LOUNSBURY.

In Series of American Men of Letters. With Fine Portrait. 16mo. $1.25.

This is an admirable volume on Cooper's Life and Writings. It is not only the best, it is the only biography of him ever published.

When on his death-bed Cooper enjoined his family to permit no authorized account of his life to be prepared, and his wish has been respected. However, his daughter, Miss Susan Fenimore Cooper, in introductions to many of Cooper's stories, gives much information relating to the Novels and to Cooper's Life, thus lending a peculiar value and interest to the Edition of Cooper's Works published by

HANDBOOK OF COMMERCIAL GROG-RAPHY. By G. G. Chisholm, M.A., B.Sc. 8vo,

This book is designed to meet a want recognized by all who are interested in adapting our education to the needs of the time; another way of saying that it has been my aim to make the book really educational. In writing the work I have had three classes chiefly in view—first, teachers who may wish to impart additional zest to their lessons in geography from the point of view of commerce; secondly, pupils in the higher schools and colleges that are now devoting increased attention to commercial education; and thirdly, those entering on commercial life, who take a sufficiently intelligent interest in their business to make their private studies bear on their daily pursuits."—Estract from Author's Praface.

MAGNETISM AND ELECTETY. By A.

W. Poyser, M.A., Assistant Master in The Wyggeston and Queen Elizabeth's Grammar School, Leicester. With 23; illustrations. Crown 8vo, 8c cents.

"This book is the result of practical experience in teaching, and it has been thrown into experimental form from a conviction that, if the student is to gain an adequate knowledge of the subject, it is absolutely necessary for him to acquire it by experiment. Scientific knowledge derived from mere book-work, with a view to pass some particular examination, is almost useless, and indeed is not unlikely to produce a result the opposite of that intended by the student."—Extract from Author's Preface. NOTES IN SEASON.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish shortly "Standish of Standish," a story of the Plymouth Colony, by Mrs. Jane G. Austin, whose former historical novel, "A Nameless Nobleman," has enjoyed decided popularity. They will also soon publish a book devoted to the interpretation of Solomon's Song, by Dr. W. E. Griffin, entitled, "The Lily Among Thorns,"

D. APPLETON & Co. have just ready, in their Torns and Country Library, a novel by Richard Aske-King, entitled "Passion's Slave." They have nearly ready "Five Thousand Miles in a Sledge-midwinter's journey across Siberia," by Lovel F. Gowing; and David A. Wells' new work, "Recent Economic Changes, and their effect on the production and distribution of wealth and the well-being of society."

LEE & SHEPARD have just ready "Osborne of Arrochar," a new novel by Amanda M. Douglas. They have in preparation "The Tartuffian Age," by Paul Mantegazza; "Swedish System of Edu-cational Gymnastics," by Baron Nils Posse; "The Law of Husband and Wife;" by Leila J. Robinson, the eminent lady lawyer; "Origin and Formation of the Hebrew Scriptures," by Lorenzo Burge; and a "Swiss Thoreau," by Caroline C. Leighton

LITTLE BROWN & Co. have just ready Margaret Deland's new book. "Florida Days." The book is full of the sentiment and color of the sunny land which it describes, and will make a charming gift-book for many seasons to come.

Louis K. Harlowhas contributed to the volume a number of characteristic sketches of the scenes described, four of which are colored. They have also now ready Dumas' "Valois Romances" and "The Count of Monte Cristo," the former with historical portraits, the latter with a number of photogravure plates made from original designs by Edmund H. Garrett; and an exquisite edition of "Walton and Cotton's Complete Angler," with an introduction by James Russell Lowell. The illustrations include 74 beautiful wood-engravings in the text (illustrations of fish, and of persons and places mentioned in the text), and 17 plates, including six original etchings.

A. C. Armstrong & Son have just published a second series of "The Book-Worm," an illustrated treasury of knowledge on old-time literature, with stores of wisdom on subjects which are attractive to book-lovers, giving them in a readable form much out-of-the-way literature of the past—such as chapters on Scarce Books, the works of Special Presses, First Editions and Unique Copies, their former and present value, Remarkable Dedications, Americana, Great Libraries, Collectors' Whims, etc., and nearly every other conceivable topic relating to books and their surroundings. They have also just ready an interesting volume in the Book-Lover's Library, by Henry B. Wheatley, entitled, "How to Catalogue a Library." This volume is intended to meet the difficulties which beset tyros in the art of cataloguing—forming a manual which shall give them accepted theories of cataloguing, accompanied by practical directions and illustrations for carrying them out. The various points are brought forward in their natural order, and the principles involved in the rules are discussed. This discussion leads up to a collection of such rules as are supposed to be necessary in the making of a catalogue for an ordinary brary. Interspersed with the more practical directions is given much useful and entertaining information concerning catalogues, books, and librarians, etc., which will be acceptable to those who are not practically concerned in the management of libraries, but who appreciate a readable book on a bookish subject. The house will publish shortly the second volume of Spurgeon's " Salt-Cellars."

The Sweenes was a brig of four hundred tons that sailed from Briatol, England, commanded by John Fearing. Captain Fearing gave way to intemperate habits, lost his latitude, and readily became the victim of a plot constructed by his first mate. The boy hero tells of the mutiny, how his brother, the captain and self were cast on a deserted island, of their meeting with the marconed men, their experience in the Everglades, and the recapture of the Congress. of the Swansen.

A Chicago merchant buys two evening papers of Luke Walton and gives him a five dollar bill, telling him to bring the change to his office. Luke's friends coax him to keep it, but he resists them, and takes back the change on time. He receives a ten dollar bill for his honesty, which he spends upon his mother and a sick friend. Little by little his fortunes improve. He meets a man who had cheated his dead father, and by the aid of a skifful lawyer makes him pay capital and interest, which become the basis of his fortune in the commission business.

When Miss Rae Whitney is first introduced to the reader, she is a most unbappy, discontented girl. Soon afterwards one of those happy providences came into her life which are not altogether confined to stories. She has considerable musical ability, and the opportunity is offered her, by a kind and wealthy relative, to come to the city and begin her career. She succeeds very well, and grows into a strong and noble character. Her experiences grows into a strong and noble character. Her experiences during this period of her education are very interesting. The story is adapted to young ladies and the older girls.

Ruh Irving does not get her M.D. until near the close of the narrative. We meet her first as a young nurse, and the story of her life forms one of the most important elements in an exceedingly interesting book. The scene is laid in the West-Omaha—and we have vivid pictures of the life in that city, in days a little earlier than the present. It is a story of woman's struggles with adversiy, sorrow, temptation, and care.

Although described as a "scientific romance," the situations border on the marvellous throughout, remining the reader very much of Jules Verne. The plot is outlined by the title; the characters are an English baronet of fabulous wealth, an enthusiast in matters of science, his daughter, two English engineers, a French electrician, and other scientists. They go out to Egypt fully equipped with every scientific apparatus for pursuing their experiments. The equipment and an army of workmen are sent by ship from London by way of the Suer Canal, to ascend the Euphrates to Babylon, but Lord Badger and his immediate party land on the eastern shore of the Mediterranean, taking the route to the Persian Guli, graphically describing the places of interest as they proceed, Antioch, Aleppo, and, after they embark on the river Euphrates, the character of the river, and the cities of its valley, giving, in fact, a most coraplete account of modern Mesopotamia. The tale is laid in the beginning of the second century.
The scene is Nicæa, in Asia Minor. In Prof. Church's ingenious way, under the guise of fiction, much information about the early Christian martyrs is given young people. The younger Pliny, at that time governor of the Roman province of Bithynia, plays an important part in the lives of the Christians, who are crucified, or burned, or given "to the lions."

The "three little maids" were Rosalind, Marjory, and Ida Peel. Their father, an officer in the Queen's service, was away in India on duty, his wife, their stepmother, with the younger children, being with him. The three girls were left in England under the charge of two maiden ladies and a "perfect treasure" of a nurse. They were bright, clever, and daring, and enjoyed their lives as much as it was possible, with the strict watch that was kept over them. Some of their exploits are funny enough, and all of them in ocent and childlike, if alightly unconventional. The illustrations are remarkative contractions are remarkative.

c. 5+267 p. D. cl., $1.
The plot is simple enough. Two people meet, fall in love, marry, and are estranged, but are reunited under somewhat tragical circumstances. Katherine Desmond is somewhat tragical circumstances. Katherine Desmond is a young and beautiful widow, who has gained a fortune through marrying a man many years her senior. Paul Remington is a handsome young Englishman, also rich and handsome, but disillusionized and cynical. As they are both clever and cultured their wooing is extremely fresh and interesting. The scene shifts from Boston to Paris, where an Italian countess, an old love of Remington, and a French marquis bring about a misunderstanding. The style is the special charm of this work; it is most graceful and attractive. The story is said to be the writer's first book.

The first and second volumes of this biography of the great anti-slavery leader were published four years ago. The narrative was then brought down to a point in 1840, when the Abolitionists were divided by a combined sectarian and political revolt against Mr. Garrison's leadership. As the first two books were naturally more largely personal, these two are more largely political. They trace the progress of the movement, with ample details, the outsit was in the third volume: while the fourth trace the progress of the movement, with ample details, through twenty years in the third volume, while the fourth volume, beginning with 186 goes through the years of the war, the final triumph, and the last years of Mr. Garrison's life, ending with 1879. Some interesting chapters are those devoted to the visits to this country, of Father Mathew and Kossuth, the Nebraska Bill, the Personal Liberty Bill, Fremont, the Disunion Convention, the Irrepressible Conflict, John Brown, and Abraham Lincoln. A chapter on "Inner traits" is altogether personal. Aside from the historical value of this work few romances have a deeper interest. The index is full and most excellently arranged. There are a number of portraits of leading Abolitionists. The two volumes are fine specimens of printing. printing.

The author has treated his rich subject with skill. His history begins on August 26, 1629, the day on which the decision was taken that determined the settlement of the town. "The story of Boston calls us to a study of independency—to the contemplation, first, of a vigorous strugele by strong men for a century and a half against a powerful monarchy; and next, to an examination of the fruits of a discipline of debate and conflict in the development of a typical American civilization. . It is hoped that in some degree the real lives of the fathers of Boston and of those who labored and suffered by their sides may be brought out." The Hossfeld methods for acquiring the modern languages, first issued in London by The Society for Promoting Knowledge of Foreign Languages, have had a success almost phenomenal. They are now republished in this country, to meet the requirements of a school method as well as of a practical method for those who desire to study privately (either with or without an instructor). The works are uniform in size and in arrangement. Each work is divided into from 6s to 66 lessons, and each lesson into four pages. The first page of each lesson is devoted to grammar; the second to a vocabulary and exercises; the third to questions on the grammatical rules; the fourth to a reading lesson with explanatory footnotes. Each book has also an appendix, containing the conjugation of regular and irregular verbs.

Maupassant came into the literary world a dozen years ago under the protection of the great Flaubert. His celebrity has been gathered in a short career, as he is not yet forty years of age. He is wonderfully concise and direct, yet he characterizes vividly. He has published less than half a dozen novels and more than a hundred tales, and upon these his reputation chiefly rests in a country which, in this form, has an array of masterpieces. He is ashamed of none of his faculties, and describes what he sees and hears, especially of rural facts—the barnyard, the wine-shop, the Norman cottage, and the market-place. Maupassant travels, explores, navigates, shoots, goes up in balloons, and writes a story every week. A translation can give but little idea of the perfection of his style. The stories selected for this volume are Happiness, A coward, The wolf, The necklace, The piece of string, La mère Sauvage, Moonlight, The confession, On the journey, The beggar, A ghost, Little soldier, The wreck. Neatly bound in blue and silver, with new cover design bearing the old Greek motto of the house.

Nast, T: Thomas Nast's Christmas drawings for the human race. N. Y., Harper, 1890 [1880.] c. no paging, il. Q. cl., $2.

This is the first collection of Mr. Nast's works which has been published. They are called "Drawings for the human race" because they appeal to no particular religious denomination or political party, but to the universal delight in the Christmas prepared by Santa Claus, its good genius of domestic tradition. The grotesque fancies of childhood are reproduced, and the artist aims to make the home circle gay with humorous representations. cies of childrood are reproduced, and the artist aims to make the home circle gay with humorous representations of the Santa Claus of "The night before Christmas," Every child can understand these big pictures, which ex-plain themselves or have merely a line of type to point their meaning. The reindeer of Santa Claus and the well-known steed of Mother Goose run a race over the gray linen cover.

During the holidays a little new baby comes into the Trevor family. While their mother is ill the children are left wholly to the care of Miss Mostyn, the governess, who fears he self totally unable to cope with their high spirits and original ideas for games and pastimes. Gradually her common-sense and patience bring order out of chaos, and a pretty story tells how, rightly guided, the imaginations and exuberant spirits of her charges made them very attractive and interesting children.

Mortonville was a manufacturing town which had been founded by a man of that name. Mr. Morton was a Methodist, and that sect had always predominated in the village until the sudden advent of Father Le Grand, who established a Catholic church very near the site of the Methodist. This led the Rev. Charles Foster to deliberate upon some mode of ousting a man he deemed an enemy to his cause. Upon the result of his deliberation and future to his cause. Upon the result of his deportation and future action the story depends, as some controversy, the reliancy is a sound of the principle of the priest and the Puritan, there is a complication between the Father's niece and the pastor's son.

The preface was written in 1874. The story was written while the author was suffering from a gun-wound, which almost proved his death-shot. A story of the Texas plains at the time when Texas was an independent republic. Runaway slaves, outlaws, freebooters, skilful hunters, adventurers, friends, and some true-hearted girls are the characters. All ends well after endless complications, giving vivid pictures of the dangerous life of an old-time mission station.

Reid, Mayne. Gwen Wynn: a romance of the Wye. N. Y., White & Allen, [1889.] 5+479 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Gwen Wynn leads a happy, careless life on the banks of the Wye, in the county of Herefordshire, England. A large ball is given on the evening of her twenty-first birthday; she has a misunderstanding with her lover, and while sitting, regretting her hastiness, she is a ttacked and loses consciousness. She awakes in a convent, and the plot turns upon the efforts of her friends to release her. A Jesuit priest and a French woman of loose character are the villains of the story. A second romance, dealing with the love-story of a boatman and a gril, who also disappears, helps unravel this thoroughly old-fashioned tale of mysteries.

This is the only work W: M. Rossetti has written about his famous brother. It is not a blography, nor a critical account of his work. It is simply a succession of descriptive notes chronologically arranged, giving first an account of his various paintings and designs, and second, of his writings. These are supplemented by a "Tabular list of Rossetti's works of art "and an Index to his writings. The prose paraphrase to "The house of life" is given, because its meaning is considered obscure by the generality of readers. the generality of readers.

Although the book is intended for children, an older reader will be captivated with the odd sayings and doings of two children, belonging to a type that has recently found its way into juvenile fiction. Neither the theme of the story, the plot, nor the incidents are new, but they have been so gracefully handled that this fact is lost sight of. Deb Sylvester and Michael Thorgold's small affairs take up the most space, but the duchess' entrance and exit furnish a pathethic ending.

New Zealand lies 1200 miles east and stretches 600 miles south of Australia. Its area is 104,403 square miles, a little less than that of Great Britain and Ireland. It resembles Italy in latitude, shape, climate, and natural conditions generally. It was unknown to Europe until 1642. Captain Cook explored it in 1774. Edward Gibbon Wakefield in 1839 founded the first English colony on the site of the city of Wellington, now the capital. Good index. dex.

Florence and her sister Evie are sent by their parents to live with two unmaried aunts while their father spends a year in New Zealand for his health. Florence is fifteen, gay, hot-tempered, impulsive, and harsh in her judgments of new people and new circumstances. The curate gains an influence over her and teaches her to make allowance for the peculiarities of her aunts and her friends. After three years she has become patient and lovable, and the story leaves her about to be married prosperously and happily.

The compiler of the short descriptive summaries given with the pictures is well known and highly esteemed in the Methodist Church in this country. He was engaged in the revision of the Methodist Hymnal. He has travelled, and has thoroughly readup his subject. In footnotes he gives his authorities, which include Hooker, Milman, Freeman, Bonney, Walcott, King, Dean Stanley, Howson, the Encyclopædia Britannica, etc. As far as possible, he gives a history of each cathedral, with a list of its bishops from its foundation and its present mode of government, salary of present bishop, etc. Forty-three cathedrals are represented. Most of these pictures have already appeared as a feature of special interest in Happer's Basser. The binding is plain gray linen with red lettering of title and a bishop's mitre as sole cover design.

The author of "Anne" and "For the Major" once more shows the unreasoning, all-pardoning love of two good women. Jupiter Lights are beacons situated off the coast of Savannah, Ga., and on the shore of Lake Superior, between which scenes the action shifts. Eve Bruce, learning in England of her brother's death, comes to America to comfort his widow, and finds her already married to Ferdie, Morrison, a handsome, lovable, goodnatured man, whom she idolizes. At intervals this man drinks to excess, and then always becomes dangerous to his wife and her former husband's child. The part Eve plays in rescuing Cicely from her husband's rage, her meeting with Morrison's brother, her own love and doubt, remorse and fear, Cicely's changes of mental condition, and the pictures of Southern life on the islands off the coast of Georgia, immediately after the war, are handled with the old skill by this American woman novelist, who combines realism and romance with artistic courage.

NOTES ON CATALOUGES.

THE BROOKLYN YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 502 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y., has just issued a useful little catalogue, entitled "Good Books, and how to use them," compiled by its librarian, Silas H. Berry. A full list of books classified under practical headings is prefaced with a clear explanation as to the Card Catalogue of the library—how arranged, how it may be used, its advantages, etc., and information as to other aids, viz.: the Classed Finding List, the Case for Attractive Books, the Bulletin, Catalogues of other Libraries, and Poole's "Index to Periodical Literature;" Some Remarks on the Use of the Reference Library, and How We Classify. The handbook will prove useful to all interested in providing good literature for others as well as to patrons of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. Library. (96 p., T. pap.)

Catalogues of New and Second-hand Books.— H. L. Kilner & Co., 103 S. 11th St., Phila., Standard Prayer-Books, Catholic Works, and Religious Articles. (24 p., D.) David Nutt, 270 Strand, W. C., London, Works on the history of wars, military science, maps, etc., chiefly from the library of the late Duke of Cambridge and that of a retired head-master of a military college. (No. 14, 16 p., D.)

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE Publication Agency of the Johns Hopkins University has just begun the publication of a monthly journal to be known as the Hospital Bulletin. It will contain announcements of courses of lectures, programmes of clinical and pathological study, details of hospital and dispensary practice, abstracts of papers read and other proceedings of the Medical Society of the Hospital, reports of lectures, and all other matters of general interest in connection with the work of the Hospital. Subscription price is $1 per year.

Le Livre at the end of this year will discontinue in its present shape and be published by Octave Uzanne, who will carry it on as a small octavo magazine of contemporary literature and bibliography.

AUCTION SALES.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

NOVEMBER 2, 1889,

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a kelo thereusto."—LORD BACON.

THE ETHICS OF "COMPROMISE."

THERE is a feeling which does credit to humankind—that it is a mean thing "to hit a man when he is down." In creditors' meetings this wholesome sentiment often comes to the front and leads. men who have condemned the business methods of the bankrupt to "let him up easy" and "give him another chance." This would be right and proper and wise, when a man who has been a creditable member of society, a reputable business man. prudent, industrious, painstaking, has made mistakes, has been unfortunate, and is likely to do better if that other chance is given. But when bankruptcy is the inevitable or invited result of recklessness, of bad method, of playing fast-andloose with business principles, leniency is wrong and improper and unwise. Why? Because it gives to "the forgotten man," the one who is trying by hard work to pay his Monest debts at a hundred cents on the dollar, a slap in the face, and exposes him to a competition which, in these days of close profit and difficult business, no man can stand.

We do not hesitate to name two recent failures as examples of this latter class. We print elsewhere a letter from a country bookseller, who has sent his name to us as voucher for his statement, though not for publication, stating the methods of Messrs. Belford, Clarke & Co., as he has seen them, in competition with his hard and honest work. This firm has from time to time issued jaunty statements as to its bankruptcy, some of which have been at least very misleading: no explanation of its affairs has been made to its creditors in any proper manner, and the result which creditors are now facing is one which has been predicted time and time again through the career of this firm. Many in the trade will recall the failure a year or more ago of Geo. I. Swayne, of Brooklyn. Shortly before his failure he had made a preference, covering practically his entire assets, to a relative, who made in the creditors' meeting an extremely candid statement of facts, and virtually told the business creditors that they might look out for themselves. The trade rejected the absurdly small dividend which was offered, and looked to the assignee, a legal officer who is supposed to represent creditors, for such realization as was practicable. then the assignee, who in all probability represents the bankrupt, has made no report. The business is carried on apparently in the same way and with the same management, though nominally by the mother of the bankrupt, and the establishment of any independent well-stocked bookstore in Brooklyn, a city of 800,000 inhabitants, which has no considerable bookstore outside the dry-goods bazaars, has been made impossible. In such cases, to permit men to go on, to give them new credit, to pass over the business crime without punishment, to accept the plea that "we are now another concern, which has no liability for the old debts," is suicidal on the part of the trade.

We speak of these affairs by name because it is time for these questions to be handled without gloves by representative trade journals, even at the risk of vexatious suits for libel, / We have received letters from several leading houses in the trade, thanking us for the position we have taken in this matter, and assurances from others, who are creditors in the present case, that (contrary to report) they have not compromised and do not mean to. We pass on to the New York and other trade the appeal of these correspondents that they should take a firm stand and definite action in this matter. Honest trade at a hundred cents on the dollar cannot go on in competition with bankruptcies and "compromises" of this sort. They are wrecking the distributing machinery of a trade which depends upon that machinery for its success. Mr. De Vinne, in his address to the Typothetæ, pointed out how ruinous to the printing trade is the result of reckless reprinting which throws the risk and ultimate loss largely on the paper-maker and the printer. The case of Belford, Clarke & Co.. with the large amounts involved with paper-makers and printers illustrates this. It is against the laws of business morals and of business success that after successive failures of this kind men should be put on their feet again. We speak out boldly because we speak in the names of hundreds of honest men who love their calling, who desire to do right, and whose worst foes are not simply the men who fail, but the men who encourage failures of this kind.

COMMUNICATIONS.

THE BELFORD, CLARKE & CO. FAILURE.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

In your issue of October 12 you copy from the American Bookseller, Belford, Clarke & Co.'s statement, professing to give the causes leading to the failure of that concern. While giving various reasons for that event, they carefully avoid the principal ones, viz.: an attempt to conduct an immense business without regard to business principles, ignoring trade courtesy and justice to their customers, the jobbers and retail booksellers. It is well known that both the publishing and retail book trades are in a hadly demoralized condition, and those who know the "true inwardness" of affairs will admit that the house of Belford, Clarke & Co. have been a prime factor in this demoralization. They now state that " the chief cause of the suspension was the immense cheapening of standard works." Who caused this "cheapening" of such works? What other leading house has ever catalogued sets of standard works at $10, $12, $16, etc., and sold them at $2.40. $3.60. $4.80. etc., and even less? Belford. Clarke & Co. were the first, and most reckless, in making such reductions in prices, and forced responsible publishers into much unprofitable business, in a vain attempt to meet wildcat competi-What other large publishing house has made a catalogue of books at high prices, and after stocking up the jobbers and retail trade, has put cheap John travelling bookstores into the towns and villages throughout the country to retail these books at less than jobbing prices? Twice have Beltord, Clarke & Co. had a temporary concern in the town from which I write, selling their books at less than trade prices. Within a few weeks they have retailed their clothbound 12mos here at 25 cts., and when they went slowly at that price, put the books up at auction and sold them at any price they would bring.

R. J. Belford says that "the firm has never at any period of its existence engaged in making reprints of popular English works." If this be true, what bold pirate has flooded the market with the editions of Scott, Dickens, Thackeray, Macaulay, Carlyle, Ruskin, Lord Lytton, George Eliot, Black, Smiles, Ouida, Haggard, "The Duchess," and other English authors, bearing the imprint of Belford, Clarke & Co.?

He also states that "no American book, by an American author, published by them, has ever resulted in a loss." Newspaper report says that Belford, Clarke & Co. owe $50,000 to American authors. As to "erotic literature," it is well known that this house have published books that were not fit to read, and that have been condemned as corrupting and immoral by the better portion of the press. It is claimed that the assets at the time of the failure were in excess of the liabilities, but they now offer the creditors 25 cents on the dollar, with an insinuation that if the offer is not accepted they may fare worse. An impression is sought to be given that the firm's "generosity to American authors" is a leading cause of the failure. Possibly the "younger au-thors of the country" would favor "an immediate resumption of business," if they thought that would secure their $50,000. But it is doubtful that they would be willing to continue to furnish MSS. at twenty-five cents on the dollar.

No better commentary is needed on Belford, Clarke & Co.'s business methods than that furnished by their full-page advertisement in the same issue of the American Bookseller containing their "statement." This advertisement, which has been widely published, offers a "ten dollar" set of George Eliot's works and Belford's Magazine, one year, for $4.50.

Should this house be presented with three-fourths of their liabilities, they will be in a position to still further damage the business of old and honorable publishing houses, which always have met their obligations and paid one hundred cents on the dollar, and there is no knowing to what extent demoralization of the book trade may be carried. Should their suspension prove final, a long step may be taken towards again putting the publishing business on a sound basis. with fixed principles and recognized business A COUNTRY BOOKSELLER. methods

In justice to Messrs. Belford, Clarke & Co., we would say that we believe the rumor as to the debt of $50,000 to American authors to be a large exaggeration.—ED. P. W.]

THE BELFORD, CLARKE & CO. FAILURE.

VARIOUS statements continue to be made as to the progress of the compromise offered by this firm, but our representatives have not been able. after several calls at their office, to find any one in who could give definite information, despite the invitation given by the journal representing them to its contemporaries, "to take the trouble to investigate and find out what is really the truth." Our columns are, of course, open to them for any statement of facts or any reply to the criticisms on their course made in this journal.

No further information has been furnished as to the so-called "creditors' meeting," said to have been held at Cleveland, O., which city is not even in either of the States in which and under whose laws the firm have done their publishing business, and no notice of such a meeting was received by a number of the creditors in the publishing trade of whom we have inquired. meeting seems to have been a private consultation of the parties who were "deepest in," Most of the trade creditors of whom we have inquired have not "signed off," and are still in the dark.

Oct. 30, says:
"The receiver of Belford, Clarke & Co. was to-day authorized by Judge Shepard to pay the $5000 judgment of the First National Bank and to sell the bills receivable and accounts now in his hands to Alexander Belford for their face value. It is said that the above order entered to-day is the forerunner of an arrangement by which Belford, Clarke & Co. will resume business.

It is learned here that Mr. Lange, of the Trow Printing Co., which has been one of the largest backers and creditors of this as well as of other reprinting houses that have gone bankrupt of recent years, but which is said to be partly secured by large quantities of stock in its possession, has been actively cooperating in obtaining an arrangement with certain creditors, and that in some cases the indorsement or paper of the Trow Printing Co. has been obtained by creditors.

It is supposed to be the plan to arrange with the large creditors, whose interests are so considerable as to induce them to take any practieable compromise rather than show fight, and then to " put the screws on" the minor creditors or to buy up small claims in full.

There is much feeling in the trade as to the houses who have been backing the reckless business methods of this house, and the paper makers chiefly concerned have been refused orders by previous customers since the facts of the failure have in part come to light.

SOME PUBLISHING STATISTICS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO.

EXTRACT from a letter of Jared Sparks to J. C. Payne, of Montpelier, Va., brother of Mrs. Madison, dated November 7, 1836:

"The following statement will give you some idea of the extent of sales of books similar in character to Mr. Madison's:

Madison's:

"Marshall's Life of Washington, 20,000 were printed—there were 7000 subscribers, and the whole edition was not sold till 1830, being 25 years. Jefferson's Writings, Boston edition—3000 copies, printed six years ago, and are not nearly all sold. The first edition in Virginia was confined to the South. Washington's Writings, now in press —the present sale is 4000 copies, and the work has been in the market three years. I do not expect a sale of more than 5000 or 6000 in ten years. Life and Writings of John Jay, been published three years. The number sold
I cannot state positively, but my impression is that it is under 2000."

"The letter from which the above extract is taken," says the Washington Book Chronicle, "is in explanation of Mr. Sparks' failure to secure in Boston a publisher for the proposed publication of Madison's writings. He says that publishers looked somewhat coldly on the enterprise on account of the high expectations which the family was supposed to entertain of the profits in consequence of a clause in Madison's will appropriating $12,000 of the proceeds of the volumes."

AUTHORS' AND PUBLISHERS' RIGHTS IN GERMANY.

From the London Publishers' Circular.

". . . There is no common legislation as to the rights of authors and publishers in the German Empire. Many of the States have their own separate and distinct regulations, which are usually regulated by custom, and sometimes by the interpretations which the Court places upon a particular phrasing. The question of a common law for the whole Empire has frequently been debated, and its utility universally admitted, but it involves so many points and interests that the Imperial Parliament appears to be reluctant to take the subject up,

"Copyright laws, or 'Verlagsrechte,' in various parts of Germany, are much more fair and definite to authors and publishers than those in this country. After he has acquired the exclusive right of reproduction, the publisher is bound to publish the work; in this country certain members of the fraternity acquire the exclusive right, but when the 'copy' is in their possession flatly decline to make any advance until a certain number of subscribers or sum or money has been obtained; which 'may be years and may be never.' On the other hand, the author is bound to deliver his manuscript at a stipulated time, or the publisher may not only withdraw from the contract, but sue the man of letters for compensation. The tradesman is not permitted to make any alterations in the contents of the work. As a rule the assignment holds good for only one edition, a new contract being necessary for each new edition; and an author may not issue a new edition before the old one is sold, unless he compensates the publisher. In Prussia, if the number of copies of the first edition is not specified, the publisher may reprint the work without altera-tions as often as he pleases. In Baden the number is unlimited, but a reprint is not allowed. In Saxony, the law of January 2, 1863, makes it very clear that unless otherwise specified the first edition may not exceed 1000 copies. It was a fine stroke of genius on the part of the Prussian | years.

authorities to enact that 'in case of disagreement the fee for a new edition is to be half that for the first'! The author of an unexpectedly popular book would naturally demand payment at an enhanced rate for a new edition, and in repudiating any such claim the publisher would be simply driving his own wheelbarrow! The author is almost invariably an irritable animal! The lisbility of a publisher is, in Saxony at all events, very clearly defined. If a work is accidentally lost when in his hands, he has nevertheless to pay the fee; but the author is bound to supply another copy of the work if he is in a position todo so; and if a work is accidentally destroyed after publication the publisher is bound to replace the copies without paying any additional fee."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

BARON HAUSSMANN is preparing an edition of his memoirs in four volumes.

HENRY M. HUNT, a well-known Chicago journalist, has in preparation a history of the Cronin murder, which is to be published under the title of "The Crime of the Century."

W. CLARK RUSSELL, the marine novelist, who is now hopelessly crippled by rheumatism, lives at Brighton, England, and has most of his time to put in in a wheeled chair. He was born in Philadelphia.

AT the Paris Exposition, the highest award to any author of juvenile books was given to Thos. W. Knox, whose Boy Travellers series and other works for young people are published by Messrs. Harper & Brothers.

THE REV. EDWARD STAATS DE GROTE TOMP-KINS, the author of "An Honest Hypocrite," recently published by Cassell & Co., is the rector of a church in Troy, N. Y. Mr. Tompkins is a graduate of Yale College, and is of Dutch ancestry, his family having come from Holland and settled in Westchester County, New York, in 1620, which refutes the charge that the story is autobiographical. A young Englishman in New York with whom Mr. Tompkins is acquainted, and whose waverings and doubts form the basis of the plot, gave him his leading motive. book is really the author's own beliefs put into the form of a story instead of into a sermon. The point that is at once raised by this story is, "Is Christianity a sham or is it not?" question is not as to its theological, historical, or liturgical truth, but as to its actual practical workings. Mr. Tompkins denies the portraits he is said to have painted. The fashionable "Dr. Grady" is not the well-known clergyman he is supposed to be, nor is "Adrienne" intended for the Duchess of Marlborough. To be sure, the Duchess of Marlborough came from Troy, where the scene of the story is laid, but the author did not know her when she was a young Her character was formed before he had the pleasure of meeting her. Such, in brief, is the idea of one of the most striking novels of the day, the readers of which may be interested to know that Mr. Tompkins is a young man and unmarried.

OBITUARY NOTES.

EMILE AUGIER, the celebrated French dramatist and poet, died on the 27th October, aged 79 years.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

MR. E. C. SWAYNE, of E. P. Dutton & Co., sailed for Europe, Oct. 30, on the S. S. City of Paris, to be gone several months.

ROBERT BROWNING'S forthcoming new volume is not, as has been supposed, a single poem, but a collection of short poems.

"JOHN WARD, PREACHER," has passed its fiftieth thousand in America, been added to the Tauchnitz list in Germany, and now is translated into Dutch CHARLES A. WENBORNE, Buffalo, N. Y., has in preparation "Glimpses in the Upper Spheres," being Luther R. Marsh's conversations with chief characters of the Bible, through medial agencies.

FRANK R. STOCKTON'S new novel, "The Story of the Three Burglars," is to be published by a syndicate of newspapers. It presents the three burglars as exchanging stories of their adventurous lives in the course of a midnight prowl.

FREDERICK A. STOKES & BROTHER invite the trade and their friends to a "White and Gold" exhibition of water-color paintings by such American artists as Percy Moran, W. Hamilton Gibson, Maud Humphrey, C. R. Grant, H. W. McVickar, James MacDonald Barnsley, James Symington, Paul Nimmo Moran, Harry Fenn, and Susie Barstow Skelding. The exhibition will be open until the 15th inst.

Funk & Wagnalls have just ready "The Life-Work of the Author of Uncle Tom's Cabin," by Florine Thayer McCray, already fully described in the Weekly. The volume contains a portrait of Mrs. Stowe, at the age of forty-one, engraved on steel by J. L. Phillips, and a woodcut portrait of the author of "Old-Time Folks," also a number of fac-similes and views of the houses in which Mrs. Stowe's most important books were written.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. will soon publish "As You Like It," forming the eighth volume of the new variorum Shakespeare edition, edited by Dr. Horace Howard Furness. This edition has been held in such high esteem by Shakespearian students, that the present announcement will be more than welcome to those who have studied the previous volumes. This edition of Shakespeare throws much light on these dramas, and gives an interesting compendium of what has been written about them.

FLEMING H. REVELL, Chicago and New York, publishes this week a series of thirty maps and plans of the entire world as known in Scripture. The series is entitled "Revell's Biblical Wall Atlas" and was prepared by T. Ruddiman Johnson. who has availed himself of the results of the latest geographical research, including the recent surveys of the "Palestine Exploration Fund," to gether with every benefit of the most accurate modern scholarship. The maps are mounted on eight Hartshorn self-acting spring rollers, 54 x 46, and set in handsome cherry or oak lock-map case.

THE BURROWS BROTHERS Co., of Cleveland, will publish next week their sumptuous illustrated edition of R. D. Blackmore's "Lorna Doone." This deservedly popular story has been "extended" with several hundred original designs drawn largely from nature—from the wildly picturesque spots in Exmoor and the land of the Doones—by well-known artists, and reproduced on wood by the best engravers. The publishers have also added a fine map in colors of Exmoor, Devonshire, the scene of this fascinating romance. Typographically everything has been done to make the book attractive. It is full octavo, 7 x 10 inches (the type page in correct proportion measuring $3\frac{1}{2}$ x $6\frac{1}{2}$ inches), printed on fine white paper and bound in an ornate cover bearing in its centre (in red and gold) the coat-of-arms of John Ridd. Altogether it forms one of the leading books of this season.

DR. DANIEL G. BRINTON, 2041 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, has in press another contribution to aboriginal American literature, entitled "Rig Veda Americana—sacred songs of the ancient Mexicans." This volume contains a number of very ancient religious chants preserved in two Nahuatl MSS., one at Madrid, the other at Florence. both of which Dr. Brinton has personally collated. The songs, or chants, are valuable not merely as curious antiquities, but as throwing light on the religious thought and mythology of the native Mexicans, and as illustrating the archaic forms and sacred locutions of their tongue. The author has added to the volume a gloss in Nahuatl, a sixteenth century commentary on the obscurities of the text found in the Madrid Ms., a paraphrase, notes, and a very full vocabulary. The volume forms the eighth of Dr. Brinton's valuable Library of Aboriginal American Literature.

CASSELL & Co. will publish on the 11th inst. the "Journal of Marie Bashkirtseff," which was published in Paris a year ago, and at once attracted the attention of the artistic and literary world. No one seemed to know much about the book nor the young girl whose life it laid bare. It had evidently not been edited by an experienced hand, and the only introduction it had was a panegyrical poem by Theuriet. Soon after the appearance of the book, an article by Mathilde Blind was printed in the Woman's World, telling something more about this remarkable girl than was told in her journal. A few weeks ago Miss Helen Zimmern had an article in Blackwood's about her, and the November Scribner has a eulogy of the journal by Miss Josephine Lazarus. But the most eulogistic of all is Mr. Gladstone in an article contributed to the Nineteenth Century. Marie Bashkirtseff was a Russian artist who passed most of her short life (she died when she was twenty-four) in Paris. The diary covers the last twelve years of her life. A portrait of Marie with reproductions from some of her paintings, which are now being exhibited in Paris, where they were purchased for the Luxembourg Gallery, will accompany this edition of her journal, as will also Mr. Gladstone's article and an account of a visit to the young artist, by François Coppée. The translation is by Mary J. Serrano.

The most complete, the most accurate, the most perfect Series of Biblical Maps ever produced, and at a moderate price.

Everything that could be desired by the most critical Biblicle scholar, for Sunday School, Bible Class, Seminary, College or the Study.

The Series Contain Thirty Maps and Plans, Mounted on Eight Hartshorn Self-Acting Spring Rollers, 54x46, and set in Handsome Cherry or Oak Lock-Map Case.

In offering this new and elegent series of Maps to that large and steadily increasing body of Biblical Scholars, (including Theological Professors and Students, Clergymen, Sunday-School Superintendents and Teachers and Private Biblical Students), we do so with the greatest confidence that the very large investment necessary to the production of so incomparable a work will meet with such an appreciation, as we are assured

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. have just published a new edition, revised, of Prof. Joseph P. Remington's important text-book on the "Practice of Pharmacy;" "In the Beginning, or, stories from the Book of Genesis," by Annie R. Butler; "The Bursting of a Boom," a story by F. R. Sandford; and "Adrift," a novel by Julia D. Young.

D. APPLETON & Co. have just published a volume discussing the land question, entitled "The Land and the Community," by the Rev. S. W.

Thackeray, with an introduction by Henry George: also a new edition, revised and extended, of George H. Ellwanger's "The Garden's Story." and a new edition of Bellamy's "Dr. 10 Meidenhoff's Process."

ESTES & LAURIAT will publish at once the "Salop of 1889," a superb volume containing 100 photogravures of prize paintings, prepared by Goupil & Co., of Paris, with explanatory notes and critical and descriptive text by George Lafanestre, Conservator of the Louvre, translated by Henry Bacon. This volume is notable as being the first of the series with English text.

FLEMING H. REVELL, Chicago and New York, will publish shortly a new volume by the Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D., of Boston, entitled " Ecce Venit, Behold, He Cometh;" also an entirely new 12mo edition of that increasingly popular book of Hanna Whitall Smith's, "The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life," this being the fourth set of electroplates they have had to make for that book.

LEE & SHEPARD will publish at once the "Origin and Formation of the Hebrew Scriptures, orenzo Burge's third volume bearing upon the human family in its origin, and in the general trend of the purposes of its creation, and its relation to the Creator; "The Heroes of the Crusades," a historic romance by Amanda M. Doug-las; and "Little Miss Weezy's Sister," the third of Penn Shirley's "Weezy" books.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish next week, as already announced, "The Lily Among Thorns, a study of the Biblical drama, entitled, The Song of Songs," by Rev. Wm. Elliot Griffis, D.D., pastor of the Shawmut Congregational Church, Tremont St., Boston. The work is a literary study of a neglected book of the Bible, and of the masterpiece of Hebrew poetry. Part I. contains History and Criticism. In Part 11. the text in the Revised Version is given, with the parts and names of the speakers in solo or chorus clearly indicated. In Part III., Studies and Comments, every one of the five acts and fourteen scenes of the poem are treated in detail. thor, while vindicating the place of the Song of Songs in the canon of sacred Scripture, rejects the allegorical theory of interpretation, and proceeds according to the natural and historical view maintained by the leading Hebraists of this century.

HARPER & Bros. will publish at once a timely volume-"The Political Problem," by Albert Stickney-brought out by the discontent that can be observed in Europe and in this country with the practical working of existing forms of demo-cratic government; "Winter in Algeria," written and illustrated by the distinguished American artist, Frederick A. Bridgman-the outcome of the author artist's extended sojourn in Algeria; "Would You Kill Him?" a stirring story (which presents the case against capital punishment), by George Parsons Lothrop; "A Little Journey in the World," a trenchant satire upon modern social life in America, by Charles Dudley Warner; "Cradle and Nursery," a new book by Christine Terhune Herrick, advocating the treatment of "the baby," as a reasonable being; and a new story of adventure for boys by Kirk Munro, entitled "Dory Mates" which has for a hero a waif rescued from the sea, and for its changing scenes the Fishing Banks and the strange waters that surround Iceland.

Armstrong, W Cleopatra's daughter: romance of a branch of roses. Bost., De Wolfe, Fiske of a Dranch of Poses. Bost., De Wolfe, Fiske & Co., 1889. c. 6-226 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Natalie Varasov, daughter of Cleopatra, one of the most beautiful women at the court of Queen Olga of Wurtemberg, was married to young De Toqueville. He disappeared and she married Count Zapróny, who is a devoted husband. Mystery and intrigue make a complicated story. The end is a surprise and a tragedy.

Astor, W: Waldorf. Sforza: a story of Milan. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1889. c. 6+282 p. D. cl., $1.50.

D. cl., $1.50.
The author of "Valentino" again has gone to medieval Italy for his material, and shows his erudition and enthusiasm in the historical and romantic treatment of the period. Milan of the fifteenth century with its fêtes, fights, intrigues, astrology, murders, loves and adventures, furnishes the environment for Sforza, the ruling Duke of Milan. The story deals with the invitation of French intervention in Italy by Sforza. Chevalian Pared also plays an important part. The romantic lier Bayard also plays an important part. The romantic element is skilfully handled. Many of the important events take place in Venice, and Mr. Astor again describes the great Venetian festival of the marriage of the Adriatic.

Besant, Walter. The bell of St. Paul's: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1889. 3+358 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new ser. no. 660.) pap., 35 c. Dr. Robert Luttrell, scientist, concludes to make a social experiment, so goes to a low lodging house in Spitalfields, where he selects from a family of three children the most repellant. This lad has unexceptionally bad surroundings, and has inherited race peculiarities and evil traits through many generations, but the Doctor still sees possibilities. He purposes to educate the boy scientifically to eliminate all in the nature of illusion, and prejudice from a prescribed mode of training; this slow refining process he intends to pursue until Oliver arrives at maturity, when he hopes his adopted son will voluntarily choose the right course. The reader follows this peculiar career and becomes almost as deeply interested as Luttrell in the social problem. The story opens about 1868; the scenes are mostly at Bankside, or in the regions of Southwark-bridge, London. The characters are all to be considered socially.

Bookworm (The): an illustrated treasury of oldtime literature. 2d series. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1890 [1889.] 1+380 p. il. 0, d.

This is, as the title indicates, simply "a treasury of old-time literature." Long and short articles gathered from many sources are thrown together without any special method, but are easily found through a good topical index. It is a book to delight the worker in books, it is so rich in rare, out-of-the-way facts, and curious information. There are "Some book-stalling reminiscence," apaper on "French bookbinding," "Books at funeral," "Early London directories," "On spurious title-page," "Bookworms of yesterday and to-day," by Bensard Quaritch and Chancellor R. Copley Christie; "The Elzevirs," "Book-lovers' songs," "Book-plates and ther mottoes," "Lending books," Mechanical arrangement of books," "Illustrations to Dickens in the market, etc., etc. The few titles of papers here given afford but a faint idea of the richness within the covers of "The bookworm." story of a "King's daughter." N. Y., White & Allen, [1889.] C. 5-358 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The "seek and to save ten" was made up of boarding-school girls: an escapade of Witch Winnie's creater a desire in Amen Corner to help Jim Halsey. The four girls of this party recruit their forces from the Hornet's nest, and all enroll themselves King's daughters, and assign to themselves the special work of caring for little lost princes. The purpose of this circle is executed in an ideal way, as is shown in the incident that describes the Elder brother's home. The characters are fictitious, but the story is based upon facts surrounding the founding of The Messlah's Home, New York City. With a view to extending a good work, the author has given a few staticties and shown up the dark side of New York's child let.

Leadville, Colorado, is the scene. Mrs. Dansken, a bright, keen-eyed woman, keeps a boarding-house for the better class of fortune-seekers in the gold-mine of some years ago. She hires a "perfect treasure" to assist her old servant, a young, pretty girl, who has never learned to say either yes or no, and proves a fire-brand among "so many men folks." The end is sad. In the second story Madeline refuses to marry Alds, feeling a call to be a great singer. Hearing suddenly a report of his death, her emotion acts upon the vocal chords and love becomes "the fate of a voice." This author writes slowly and keeps freshness of touch.

Under the name of "Gerald Ffrench" Mr. Jessop figures all through these stories in the character of a journalist—the stories, in fact, being really based on incijournalist—the stories, in fact, being really based on inci-dents in his own journalistic career on the Pacific coast during a period of five years—from 1873 to 1878. They all deal with the Irish colony in California, and depict characteristic types of the native Celt of the original stock—as yet unmixed in blood, but modified by new sur-roundings and a different civilization. While the stories stock—as yet unmixed in blood, but modified by new surroundings and a different civilization. While the stories are not without pathetic touches, they abound in an exquisite humor. Few modern magazinists can be realled who have so perfectly described the Irish character, or so perfectly caught the vernacular. Many of the stories were first printed in the Contury. Their names are "The rise and fall of the Irish Aigle," "A dissolving view of Carrick Meagher," "At the town of the the Queen of the Angels," "An old man from the bld country," "The last of the Costellos," and "Under the redwood tree." country," " T

Lessons of courage and patient endurance are taught through "Lil's" sad life. She was the only girl in a family of six young people who had lost their mother. When still a little girl an accident injured her back and made her a hopeless invalid for life. Her gradual resignation is beautifully portrayed, and it is also shown how she becomes the central figure in the family to whom all come with confidences, and for advice and second second. with confidences, and for advice and encouragement.
There is a pretty romance ending in a marriage, with

The author says the design of this work is not to trench upon the ground of strict biography. She desires to present particularly to the young women of America a list of the literary works of Mrs. Stowe, with an outline of each, and an unpretentious running commentary naturally suggested by their reading. To these are added personal reminiscences, the author having been a frequent visitor at the home of Mrs. Stowe. The preface is swe worded as to convey the idea that Mrs. Stowe is already dead, but contrary to all expectation, the aged teacher, reformer, and novelist still lives in Hartford, Conn. A letter of Mrs. Stowe, dated December 11, 1887, and one from her son, Charles E. Stowe, dated Dec. 12, 1887, are included to show that at the time: the work was begun it was approved by Mrs. Stowe and Rev. Charles E. Stowe.

"Mr. Maclay's story of Old Japan is a really valuable study of feudal times in Dai Nippon. It abounds in very carefully elaborated descriptions of architecture, costumes, weapons, interior decorations and arrangement, social customs and Japanese life in all its phases. There are also a number of minute and charming sketches of scenery in various parts of the Empire. The story itself is intended to illustrate the closing period of the feudal era; the fall of the Shoguns and the Diamios, and the return to supreme power of the Mikado. A romantic episode of roninism is skilfully introduced, the motive being revenge upon the Prime Minister of the Shoguns, who had driven into outlawry and tried to exterminate a group of young men who were devoted to the Imperial cause. The picture drawn by Mr. Maclay of the system of espionage prevailing during the final desperate struggle between the two powers is a striking one."—New York Tribane.

"Oueen Hildegarde's" innately noble nature had not been improved by her contact with the fashionable set into which she had been born. In her fifteenth year she was already tired of life, pale, cold, and impassive. Her mother seeing this and regretting it, devised a cure for her. One summer she and Hildegarde's father planned to spend some months in California, and Hildegarde was sent up to an old-fashioned farm belonging to her mother's old nurse. Here, with simple clothes, some good books, and wholesome food, she was left to her own devices for a while. The experiment is quite successful, and Hildegarde comes back to her parents, bright and rosy and with new ideas as to her duty to her friends and to the poor and unfortunate.

"The task essayed in this work involves an attempt to draw out, within the limits of two octavo volumes, the entire historic development of the English constitutional system, and the growth out of that system of the federal republic of the United States. In the introduction an effort has been made to emphasize the fact that the constitutional histories of England and of the United States constitute a continuous and natural evolution the constitutional histories of England and of the United States constitute a continuous and natural evolution which can only be fully mastered when viewed as one unbroken story. That story the author has attempted to unfold in the light of the latest researches—English, German, French, and American—and in such a manner as to impart to it something of a human interest. The double effort has been made to satisfy the critical student of the 'science of politics,' as to fulness and accuracy of detail, and at the same time to interest every American citizen who desires to read within reasonable limits the entire history of the wonderful constitution under which he lives."—Preface.

It has long been felt that a connecting link is wanting between the electricity of the schools, and the electrical engineering of practical life. This work was written to supply this want. It explains in simple terms the ordinary every-day working of some of the forms of electrical apparatus that are in use by outsiders, and not under the constant supervision of trained electrical engineers; it is also hoped that it will be of service to young electrical engineers who are first commencing to make their practical experience.

The characters are Col. Leslie, an ex-confederate officer, his son and nephew, boys of fourteen and fifteen, a negro, "Nap," who was once a slave, and the dog, "Jack." The opening chapter finds them in London, preparing for a journey to the Soudan, where the Colonel desires to pursue some researches. The boys are bright, brave little fellows, used to fire-arms, eager for adventure, and thoroughly devoted to "Nap" and "Jack." who are both, at their solicitation, to be members of the party. The getting to the Soudan is full of incidents, and the time spent there a succession of thrilling adventures with the natives, with wild animals, etc. Through the whole story the negro "Nap" plays a prominent part, appearing in the end to be "Kibboo Ganey," an African king.

THE ESSENTIALS OF TRADE REFORM.

THERE is again some talk in the publishing trade of an alteration in the system of discounts and prices which shall put the business of bookselling on a more solid basis and do away with the misleading difference between "publishers' prices" and "our prices," which are made so much of by the undersellers. This, of course, involves not simply a shortening of discounts, but a corresponding decrease of nominal retail prices, so that the public shall not be expected to pay more than they pay now, while the bookseller will still receive his fair share of the returns. In other words, it is simply an acceptance of what is now the system in fact.

The publishers who are considering this reform hesitate to take the plunge, because some feel that long discounts help to sell a book, and others question whether the retail trade will not still be tempted by seemingly great discounts and transfer their trade to the houses which seem — but only seem — to offer greater inducements. The failure of Belford, Clarke & Co. has opened the whole vista of underselling methods and has proved an object-lesson of the evils of the present system, which should help to lead us to a better. There is, of course, a great deal of human nature in the book trade, and human nature is very apt to grasp after the biggest seeming advantage, although it is a disadvantage in the long run. But we should suppose that the trade - the retail trade especially - have had sufficient proof of the utter falsity and hurtfulness of the old system to be ready to support loyally the efforts of any houses willing to bring relief.

We do not look to a general agreement of the entire publishing trade as to the means by which this reform will be brought about. If it comes, it will come as the result of the forward step of a few houses, with strong lists, with more or less public spirit, and with reliance on the good-sense of the retail trade and of the public in the long run. A simple understanding among a few houses of this sort will be sufficient to inaugurate the revised plan, and we have little doubt that the publishers who are now holding back will sooner or later "join in the procession" and regret that they did not share the credit of being pioneers. Whether the present movement result favorably or not, there is little doubt that sooner or later this course must be adopted by the trade—at last as the only possible measure of self-defence.

THE BELFORD, CLARKE & CO. FAILURE.

The American Bookseller makes the following statements:

"Belford Company, of New York, has been organized in this State with a paid-up capital of $50,000. It is backed, too, by Mr. Lange, of the Trow Printing and Bookbinding Co. Mr. Robert Belford will be the manager of the incorporation, which will confine itself to the publication of copyright works and of Belfora's Magasine, and discontinue the manufacture of the so-called 'standards.'

"Belford-Clarke Company has been incorporated in Chicago under the laws of the State of Illinois. The incorporators are Alex. Belford, James Clarke, and Geo. Hammond, the latter of whom puts in $50,000 additional capital. Belford-Clarke Company will conduct the general business as heretofore carried on by the Chicago branch of Belford, Clarke & Co.; it will work their standards and manage the Dry-goods Department.

"The late firm of Belford, Clarke & Co. always exhibited, to quote Geyer's Stationer, 'pluck and energy which were deserving of success;' and it may be predicted that the members of the new companies will exhibit the same qualities under more favorable conditions than those which have prevailed in the trade for some years.

"Our modest statement that the compromise offered by the firm had been accepted by 95 per cent. of the creditors was, we believe, perfectly true. It ought to have been 99.99 to be nearer the truth. We are aware that a creditor for the sum of $30, for advertising in an obscure sheet, declined to come to terms, but the magnitude of this claim has had no effect in delaying the consummation of the arrangements."

We presume that this "retort courteous" refers to the "obscure sheet" known as THE PUBLISHERS WEEKLY, which has a bill against the bankrup firm of about the above amount for the insertion of its catalogue in the TRADE LIST ANNUAL. We may add that at the time of writing, and we believe at the present time, five leading houses in the trade from which we happened to have heard on this subject had also declined to sign off. We have reasons to believe that there are a number more. The statement above made on behalf of Belford, Clarke & Co. must be judged in the light of the above facts.

THE GROLIER CLUB.

Brander Matthews in the November Century.

THE origin of the Grolier Club of New York is recorded in the first volume of its transactions. A little gathering of men interested in the arts "entering into the production of books was held at the house of Mr. Robert Hoe, Jr., in January, 1884. They determined to organize a club, and to that end they appointed committees to present a name and to prepare a constitution. Early in February the members adopted a constitution which declares that the founders of the club are William L. Andrews, Theodore L. De Vinne, Alexander W. Drake, Albert Gallup, Rob-ert Hoe. Jr., Brayton Ives, S. W. Marvin, Ed-ward S. Mead, and Arthur B. Turnure; and then they elected Mr. Hoe, President, and Mr. Brayton Ives, Vice-President. A club device, including the arms of Grolier, was provided a fortnight later. Then the club, having a name, chose a local habitation at No. 64 Madison Avenue, where the council first met about the middle of Aprilless than three brief months after the first conference. Here, in rooms simply and most tastefully decorated and furnished, the Grolier Club has made its home ever since; here it has taken root and flourished and brought forth fruit; here its members have listened to a series of lectures as instructive as they were interesting; and here they have held separate exhibitions of etchings. of manuscripts, of original designs for book illustration, of bindings, and of early printed books. The President is now Mr. William L. Andrews, and Mr. De Vinne is the Vice-President; and the club is about to move into a house of its own, 29 East 32d St., where it will have more ample accommodation for its many new members. The architect, Mr. Charles W. Romeyn, has considered the special needs of an association of this sort. He has succeeded in giving the club-house a dignified and characteristic physiognomy of its own.

Of the founders of the club, some were merely book-lovers from taste and some were book-makers by trade—printers and publishers; and thus the club began with a novel and fertile alliance of the dilettante and the professional, an alliance likely to be of lasting benefit to both. The object of the club was in reality twofold—to bring together those interested in the arts of bookmaking, that there might be a stimulating interchange of suggestions and experiences; and also to further these arts in the United States.

So far as I know, the Grolier Club is the first society founded to unite book-lovers and bookmakers and to gratify the needs and wishes of both classes of its members by collecting and exhibiting the best works of the great artists of the past and by producing new books which may serve as types of the best that modern skill and taste may do. This double function of the Grolier Club I do not find in any other organization either in America or in Europe. Neither in England nor in France is there any society exactly equivalent to this New York club. In London, the Burlington Fine Arts Club was formed "to bring together amateurs, collectors, and others interested in art; to afford ready means for consultation between persons of special knowledge and experience in matters relating to the fine arts; and to provide accommodation for showing and compar-ing rare works in the possession of the members and their friends;" and during the past twenty years it has held nearly forty special exhibitions of works of art, and perhaps ten of these special exhibitions have been akin in subject to those held at the rooms of the Grolier Club. But the Burlington Fine Arts Club extends its interest over all the fine arts, and it is as likely to gather and display bronzes or ivories, porcelains or paintings, as it is to show wood-cuts, etchings, or illuminated manuscripts; while the Grolier Club confines its attention solely to the arts pertaining to the production of books.

After reviewing the publications thus far issued by the Grolier Club including (1) "A Decree of Starre Chamber, concerning printing, made the eleuenth day of July last past, 1637;" (2) Edward Fitzgerald's "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam;" (3) Washington Irving's "History of New York, from the beginning of the world to the End of the Dutch Dynasty, by Diedrich Knickerbocker," and several minor publications Mr. Matthews gives the following tempting description of the edition of De Bury's "Philobiblon" printed for the Club:

"The edition is limited to two hundred and ninety-seven copies on paper and three on vel-lum, one of which latter is properly reserved for the library of the club. The volumes are clad in pure vellum covers, stamped with the gold seal of the good bishop, while within there is a novel lining-paper, rich in color and congruent in design. The form is a small quarto, with a page six inches wide and a little less than eight inches long. The paper, a so-called 'white antique,' is American hand-made by the Brown company, and Mr. De Vinne regards it as whiter, clearer, and better than any English, Dutch, or Italian The typography is not merely printing-paper. decent and seemly; it is as exact and as beautiful as the utmost skill and loving care could make it. The type of the first volume, which contains the Latin text, is a pica black-letter; the second volume, which contains the English translation. being set in modern Roman (not old style) small The black-letter types were got out of the vaults of Sir Charles Reed's Sons for Mr. De Vinne by Mr. Talbot Baines Reed, and they are drives of punches believed to have been cut in France in the first half of the sixteenth century. There are rubricated initials, of a full-bodied vermilion not often seen nowadays. There are head-pieces and tail-pieces, some of them, and the more ingenious, having been devised by Mr. G. W. Edwards. There is page of fair proportion (as we have seen), and there is a type rightly adjusted thereto; and there is the very perfection of presswork, alike impeccable in impression and in register. Herein indeed we see the final superiority of the best modern printing by improved machines when guided by a fine artistic sense; such registry as this would be absolutely accidental, not to say impossible, on the handpresses of the early printers.

"In the manufacture of this edition of the 'Philobiblon' there is the full harmony which comes from a union of knowledge, skill, and taste. It is a delight to the eye, to the hand, and to the mind. At last the book of Richard de Bury has a goodly outside, as becomes the words of wisdom within. To love books and to own a book like this is to have a foretaste of the book-lovers' heaven. To study a book like this in an edition like this leads away from vice and conduces to virtue. Indeed we read therein (cap. xv.) that 'no man can serve both books and mammon.'"

The membership of the Grolier Club was at first limited to one hundred (it has now been enlarged to allow of two hundred and fifty resident members), but the editions of its publications have generally somewhat exceeded the smaller number, and the unfortunate outsider has sometimes been able to acquire these treasures by the aid of a friend at court. This liberality is in proper accord with the spirit of the inscription stamped on Grolier's own books—Io.

Grolieris et amicorum.

THE AMERICAN COPYRIGHT LEAGUE ANNUAL MEETING.

THE American Copyright League held its annual meeting in Mott Hall, 67 Madison Ave., on the afternoon of November 7, Mr. E. C. Stedman in the chair. A prior meeting of the Council recommended to the League, among other things, the support of the Chace Bill with the verbal amendments decided upon by the joint committees. Mr. Stedman in a short address remarked that, despite the defeat of the proposed bill in the last Congress, there was abundant evidence that Congress would have passed the measure if it had got a chance to vote. The Senate, he said, had passed the measure by a handsome vote, but in the House the filibustering of a single member had choked off all chance to get a vote. This single Congressman, the League says, was Judge Lewis E. Payson, of Illinois, who spent the whole day filibustering against the Pacific Railroad Funding Bill and the Chase-Breckinridge Copyright Bill, and had killed the latter's chance of life. After Mr. Stedman's address the Secretary read his report. had special reference to the action of the Joint Conference Committee, consisting of representatives of the Authors' League and of the Publishers' League. Among other things it pointed

The members of the Joint Committee decided that in order to overcome the opposition to the Copyright bill, which sprang chiefly from certain trades connected with the making of books—binders, stereotypers, etc.—it was necessary to have them consider the bill carefully. This was accomplished mainly through the efforts of Edward Eggleston, who convinced the leading members of the Typothetæ that the bill, in the event of its passage, instead of injuring their trade would in all probability largely add to the volume of printing and publishing business in the United States. The bill was framed with the intention of interfering as little as possible with the intention of interfering as little as possible with the gapers or syndicates of papers which bought the privilege of printing the stories of foreign authors in this country. Under the bill as now drawn stringent provisions are made for limiting the copyright to foreign publications, to those works which shall be printed from type set in this country. This distinction is important, as under the former bill plates could be imported.

The League authorized its Executive Committee to urge before the coming Congress a bill recently framed to take the place of the defeated measure, and which embodies suggestions made by Mr. Thorvald Solberg. Secretary George Walton Green called attention to the fact that the amended bill had received the approval of all the trades and interests identified with the bookmaking trade. The cordial support of the typographers had been secured for the measure by inserting a provision that copyright be granted to only those books by foreign authors that shall be printed in America from type set by American printers.

A Council of 30 members was chosen as follows:

James Russell Lowell, Edmund C. Stedman, Edward Eggleston, Robert Underwood Johnson, Colonel Thomas W. Knox, R. R. Bowker, Brander Matthews, Titus Munson Coan, George William Curtis, Laurence Hutton, Charles Dudley Warner, S. M. Clemens, George W. Cable, Bronson Howard, H. C. Bunner, W. D. Howells, Noah Brooks, Richard Watson Gilder, H. H. Boyesen, Henry M. Alden, Charles Barnard, the Rev. Dr. Robert Collyer, Frank R. Stockton, Albert Mathews, Alfred R. Conkling, the Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, Dr. James C. Welling, Thorvald Solberg, and George Walton Green.

Mr. Stedman, in closing the meeting, said that he believed the bill presented to the Senate last year was the proper bill, and that no opposition need be feared now, as the typographers fully understood the benefits to be derived from the change. Following the meeting of the League was another meeting of the Council. The Executive Committee, consisting of Edward Eggleston, Colonel Thomas W. Knox, R. R. Bowker, Robert Underwood Johnson, and George W. Green, was reëlected. At the meeting of the Council, which will take place on the 20th inst., the officers of the League will be elected. Mr. Stedman, after many years of active service both as a member of the League and Council, has declined to serve longer as Vice-President because of the pressure of private business.

OBITUARY NOTES.

Nikolai Gavrilovitch Tchernuishevski, the eminent Russian political and economic writer, died in exile, October 31, aged 70 years. He was first destined for the priesthood, but soon gave up theology for philology. Graduating from the University of St. Petersburg, he became Professor of Literature at the Cadet School of St. Petersburg, and afterward teacher of the grammar school of his native town, Saratoff on the Volga. From 1853 to 1862 he wrote for Sovremennik ("Contemporary Review") a number of articles and discussions of economical, critical, and historical character, which, from their manner of treating problems, and by their ironic, satirical tone awakened the widest atten-He treated with the same superiority and skill subjects of widely different kinds, but his principal interests centered in the solving of such problems as the arrangement of the relations between the sexes, the abolition of serfdom, and the abrogation of all individual property in land for the good of the community. In 1862, after nine years of uninterrupted liberty in writing, Tchernuishevski, to the surprise of everybody, was arrested and, after a two years' imprisonment in the Peter and Paul prison, was sentenced to fourteen years' hard labor in the mines, and then to exile in Siberia for life. The first part of the sentence was commuted to seven years' hard labor, which he performed with criminals in the Then fifteen years were spent in solitary exile in one of the most distant points of Siberia. A year or two since he was transferred to a milder place of banishment. Of all his literary work his novel "Que Faire?" what is to be done? (written in prison and finished in 1863), published in this country by Thos. Y. Crowell & Co., under the title of "A Vital Question," has exerted the most important influence among the masses in Russia. To the American reader much of this work may seem long-winded and tiresome, but this is not because the author lacked literary skill, but is owing rather to the fact that as every line of manuscript had to pass under the inspection of the prison authorities, he was compelled to express many things indirectly and frequently in a far-fetched manner. The book is not for superficial readers — it must be studied deeply and carefully; then it will be found to contain al! the Russian ideas of progress, and, it would seem, all the Russian utopias.

MRS. HELEN NITZCH (Catherine Owen), well known as the author of "Ten Dollars Enough," "Culture and Cooking," "Gentle Bread-Winners." and "Choice Cookery," died at her home in Plainfield, N. J., October 28, from consumption. Of late she had written much for Good Housekeeping and other papers.

IOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Fortnightly Review for November contains Swinburne's critical article upon the works of Wilkie Collins.

BEGINNING with the coming year the North American Review will be printed on a larger and handsomer page. Among the attractions of the year is announced a "Duel Between Free Trade and Protection: a great discussion between two prime ministers, the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone and the Hon. James G. Blaine.'

London and Paris Ladies' Magazine is the title of a new fashion journal to be published monthly by E. Marlborough & Co., 50 Old Bailey, London. The first issue contains a series of lithographed plates in monotints and colors, describing the latest French and English styles in women's dress, besides literary matter of a practical character in French and English.

MAYO W. HAZELTINE has resigned his position on Once a Week to accept the managing editorship of the New York Ledger. The Ledger takes a new departure early in November, coming out as an illustrated literary journal of the style of Harper's Weekly with Democratic tendencies. Mr. Hazeltine will still retain the literary editorship of the New York Sun. "Mr. Hazeltine," says "B. B.." in The Epoch, "is one of the most accomplished scholars in the United States, and his reviews of new books are perhaps the best that are contributed to daily journalism. He has a striking appearance, is tall and slim, with a clean-shaved face and clear-cut features.

ONE of the most novel and striking features of Harper's Magasine for the coming year will be the humorous serial story by Alphonse Daudet. The publishers have made special arrangements with M. Daudet for the exclusive publication, in serial form, of this story, which will be entitled "The Colonists of Tarascon: the last adventures of the famous Tartarin." The story will be translated by Henry James, so that the English version will combine the literary charms of two of the most distinguished living authors. It will be illustrated by Rossi and Myrbach, whose brilliant sketches are so well known in connection with the previous Tartarin stories of M. Daudet.

The Youths' Companion for the ensuing year bids fair to outshine the enterprise of its previous sixty-three years' management. That there will be an abundance of entertainment goes without saying. Six serial stories and over 150 short | lished six volumes of essays by H. Clay Trumbull, ones, including those which have taken the $5000 offered in prizes, may be counted under this head. Travel and exploration will be dealt with by Joseph Thomson, Commander Cameron, Lieutenant Schwatka, and Lord Wolseley; science by Professor Tyndall, Sir Morell Mackenzie, and Dr. W. A. Hammond; natural history by John Burroughs and Prof. N. S. Shaler; education by President Angell, of the University of Michigan. President C. K. Adams, of Cornell, and President Gilman, of Johns Hopkins University; domestic interests by "Marion Harland," and public life by Senator Hoar, Congressmen T. B. Reed, and Speaker Carlisle, of the House of Representatives. The famous English painter, W. P. Frith, will give amusing anecdotes of the children who have posed for him; Captain Kennedy, of the White Star steamer Germanic, will describe some of the incidents that have occurred to him in 500 voyages across the Atlantic; P. T. Barnum will go behind the scenes of his show for the amusement of the readers; Justin McCarthy will supply Reminisciences of the famous Prime Ministers he has known, and the Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts will show "How to Invest Savings and Build Homes." Nor is this all.

Both Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Blaine will contribute articles, the former having chosen for his subject "The Characteristics of Motley, Historian and Diplomat."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MR. BRANDER MATTHEWS and Mr. G. H. Jessop are said to be preparing together a book which is to be entitled "Check and Countercheck: a tale of twenty-five hours."

MISS KATHARINE WORMELEY, the translator of the Balzac series, published by Roberts Bros., is preparing for them a translation of "Les Maitres Sonneurs," by George Sand. It will be published under the title of "The Bagpipers."

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. have in preparation Geo. W. Childs' reminiscences, a portion of which have been given in Lippincott's Magazine.

CHAPMAN & HALL have ready the first volume of a new edition of Dickens in 54 shilling volumes, each volume containing 160 pages and about twenty pictures. Fifty thousand copies will be issued.

SIDNEY S. RIDER, Providence, R. I., has in preparation for the series of Rhode Island Historical Tracts, a "History of Privateering," as connected with Rhode Island during the Revolution (1776–1783).

Longmans, Green & Co. are about to publish an authorized life of Cardinal Lavigerie, the Primate of Africa, which will contain a full statement of the means by which he proposes to check the infamous slave traffic.

THE AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION, Central Block, Chicago, announces a " Biographical Dictionary of the living local and national Poets of America," with sketches, reminiscences, and selections from their writings, compiled and edited by Thos. W. Herringshaw.

JOHN D. WATTLES, Philadelphla, has pub-on such subjects as "Aspirations and Influences," "Practical Paradoxes," etc. They were published first as editorials in Dr. Trumbull's Sunday-School Times and convey much good advice in simple and unpretending language.

REMINGTON & Co., London, will publish this month a volume entitled "Free Trade in Capital," by Egmont Hake and O. E. Wesslau, the Swedish economist. The authors endeavor to establish in their work that the extension of free trade to banking would bring about close cooperation between capital and labor.

DE WOLFE, FISKE & Co. have just ready "The Wreck of the Greyhound, or, the romantic love of the earl's daughter," by C. M. Newell, author of "The Voyage of the Fleetwing," etc.; "Cleopatra's Daughter," a story by William Armstrong, author of "Theckla;" and "The Aspen Shade," a romance, by Mabel Louise Fuller.

JOHN MURPHY & Co., Baltimore, have just ready Cardinal Gibbon's book, "Our Christian Heritage," which endeavors to show that "the fundamental truths underlying Christianity are all susceptible of being demonstrated by our unaided reason, but are made still more luminous by the light of Christianity." It has nothing to say against other Christian denominations.

THE EXCELSIOR PUBLISHING HOUSE, N. Y., will publish on the 20th F. M. Payne's "Legal Adviser" and F. M. Payne's "Business Educator." The former claims to be an epitome of the laws of the different States of the Union and those of the General Government of the United States. The latter is intended to be an encyclopædia of the knowledge necessary for the conduct of business.

THE WORTHINGTON COMPANY have just issued a new edition in attractive binding of Sir Arthur Helps' "Friends in Council." They have nearly ready "Henriette." by François Coppée, translated by G. Edward Wakefield, author of "New Zealand After Fifty Years;" also, "Magdalen's Fortunes," by G. W. Heimburg, translated by Mrs. J. W. Davis. Both books will be profusely illustrated.

N. L. STEBBINS, 521 Washington St., Boston, will publish shortly "Yacht Portraits," a series of seventy of the most prominent yachts sailing in American waters during the season of 1889, from photographs taken by N. L. Stebbins. In connection with each picture are given the principal measurements of the boat, together with the names of the owner, designer, and builder. The size of the page is 9½ x 12 inches.

JOSEPH HOFFMANN, San Francisco, Cal., has issued five neat booklets and souvenirs of California scenes, entitled "Glimpses of California," containing views of the most interesting points in the State; "The Golden Gate Park," illustrating the many pretty scenes in this popular resort; two series of views of San Francisco and its environs, which are also published in one volume bound in cloth. These souvenirs are all put up in handsomely decorated covers of torchon paper.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS add to their previous announcements a new edition (the 19th) of "Haydn's Dictionary of Dates," brought down to the fall of 1889; a new revised edition of Edward L. Anderson's treatise on "Modern Horsemanship;" the first volume of Charles Booth's "Labor and Life of the People," describing East London; "A History of Austro-Hungary from the Earliest Time to the Year 1889," by Louis Leger, translated from the French by Mrs. Birkbeck Hill, with a preface by Edward A. Freeman; "The First International Railway and the Early Colonization of New England," a history of the railway system which opened Canada to the United States, together with an account of the settlement which established the English title to New England, both subjects being presented in a study of the life and writings of John Alfred Poor, edited by Laura E. Poor; "A Handbook of Precious Stones," by M. D. Rothschild; "The Sayings of Poor Richard," a collection of the wit and wisdom of Benjamin Franklin, edited by Paul Leicester Ford, in The Knickerbocker Nuggets series; "Spring and Summer, or, blushing hours," a volume of poems by William Washburn; "The Hammer: a story of the Maccabean wars in Palestine," by the Rev. Alfred J. Church, author of "To the Lions," etc.; and "Thomas Jefferson's Views on Public Education," by John C. Henderson.

PROFESSOR PAUL HAUPT, of the Johns Hopkins University, is editing in connection with Professor Friedrich Delitzsch, of the University of Leipzig, a new periodical, Beiträge sur Assyriologie und vergleichenden semitischen Sprachwissenschaft (Contributions to Assyriology and Comparative Semitic Philology). The plan of such a series was conceived by Professor Haupt as early as 1878, but various circumstances prevented its realization. This new series will form a pendant to the quarto volumes of the Assyriological Library edited by Friedrich Delitzsch and Paul Haupt, which now includes Haupt's Akkadian and Sumerian Texts and his Babylonian Nimrod Epic, Bezold's Achaemenian Inscriptions with the cuneiform text of the smaller Achaemenian Inscriptions autographed by Professor Haupt, Strassmaier's Alphabetical List of Assyrian and Akkadian Words, Lyon's Sargon, Zimmem's Babylonian Penitential Psalms, Delitzsch's As-syrian Dictionary, Lehmann's Samassumukin, Weisbach's Second Species of the Achaemenian Inscriptions, and Bang's Old Persian Texts. Due regard will be given to the principles of comparative philology, and this will be a distinctive feature of the contributions published in the Beiträge. Naturally the Beiträge will chiefly contain the work of the German Semitic School, though articles in other languages, especially in English, French, or Latin, will not be excluded. The editors do not propose to issue the journal at fixed intervals, but from time to time, as sufficient satisfactory material is at hand. Part 1 of Vol. I. is now ready. Subscription and orders may be addressed to the Publication Agency of the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.

WE regret to hear that Mr. H. D. Burrows, the manager of the wholesale department of the Burrows Bros. Company, Cleveland, O., is down sick of a fever, and will not be able to be out for about four weeks or more.

SCRIBNER'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

JUST PUBLISHED:,

Aspects of the Earth.

A Popular Account of Some Familiar Geological Phenomena. By N. S. SHALER, Professor of Geology at Harvard. With 100 illustrations. 8vo, $4.00.

The general reader will find here an interesting and graphic account of those phenomena of the earth's surface—earthquakes, cyclones, volcanoes, rivers, forests, caverns, etc.—which most directly affect human life. The author's entertaining style, abundant information, and thorough mastery of his subject are seen at their best in this volume. The illustrations are many and artistic.

The United States;

ITS HISTORY AND CONSTITUTION. By ALEXANDER JOHNSTON. 12mo, $1.00.

Prof Johnston's work is unique in that it presents in a single volume of about 300 pages a lucid, scholarly, well-ordered narrative of the history of the United States from the earliest discoveries down to the present day. The author's analysis of the political and constitutional development of the country is terse, popular, and authoritative.

NEW BOOKS:

The Viking Age.

The Early History, Manners, and Customs of the Ancestors of the English-speaking Nations. Illustrated from the antiquities discovered in mounds, cairns, and bogs, as well as from the antiquities Sagas and Eddas. By PAUL B. DU CHAILLU. With 1400 illustrations. 2 vols., 8vo, $7.50.

"Nothing so important as this work has appeared for some time. The whole life of a great people is revealed, their arts, their customs, and their creeds."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"The clear, vivid, brilliant style of Mr. Du Chaillu lends a fascination to every topic he discusses, and the text is fairly illuminated with the copious illustrations,"—Boston Traveller.

WILLIAM WALDORF ASTORS NEW NOVEL.

Sforza: A Story of Milan.

Handsomely bound, 12mo, $1.50.

"As in his successful work, 'Valentino,' Mr. Astor chooses historical and romantic Italy for the scene of his novel. It is a tale of one of the most famous families of mediseval Italy, and gives the author the richest possible material for a dramatic plot, several well-drawn and sharply accentuated characters, and a succession of brilliantly-worded pen-pictures of the times he portrays."—Brooklyn Times.

"The movement throughout is spirited, the reproduction of bygone times and people is realistic. Mr. Astor has made excellent use of his historical material, and has written a romance which will heighten the reputation he made by 'Valentino.'"—N. Y. Tribune.

History of the United States.

By HENRY ADAMS. The First Administration of Thomas Jefferson. 12mo, 2 vols., $4.00.

"A most important and critical period is embraced in the first administration of Mr. Jefferson, and this book covers it with a clearness and interest, as well as minuteness, that assures it an immediate and high place in the standard literature of the country."—Washington Post.

READY THIS WEEK, NOVEMBER 15:

The New Priest in Conception Bay.

A Novel. By ROBERT LOWELL, author of "Antony Brade," and "A Story of Two from an Old Dutch Town." A new revised edition. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth. $1.50.

"We would qualify our praise, were there anything that claims its abatement; but either there is no material for an unfavorable criticism, or, what is very much the same thing, the author gains such hold upon his readers as to disarm the critical judgment."—North American Review.

Saint Theresa of Avila-

By Mrs. Bradley Gilman. (Famous Women Series.) 16mo, cloth, $1.00.

To the student of Christian history or of Spanish literature, Saint Theresa has an honored place; but to the general reader she is no more real then the enchanted princess of the fairy tale, or the Loreli of the Rhine. To make her a living, breathing human being, with feelings and folbles like our own, has been the most delicate part of the writer's task.

The Complete Poetical Works of Sir Edwin Arnold.

2 vols., 12mo, cloth gilt, $4.00.

This edition includes all of the poetical works previously published in eight volumes, thus condensing them into a portable and permanent form.

In a preface written for this edition, while in America, Mr. Arnold gives his approval and sanction to this embodiment of the volumes by his only authorized publishers, Roberts Brothers.

A BOOK FOR THE TIMES.

CARDINAL GIBBONS'

OUR CHRISTIAN HERITAGE.

All Denominations of Christians Interested in this Work.

ONE VOLUME, 12MO, 524 PAGES, CLOTH, 81.00 NET.

A Magnificent Portrait of the Author in his Cardinal Robes printed in the highest style of Chromatic Art, will accompany each Book.

As a writer Cardinal Gibbons has a style of his own; an indispensable instrument of every true writer—and if we may be permitted a comparison, it is more like that of the late Matthew Arnold than any other. The quality which most makes it is that described by Mr. Arnold as "lucidity."

This book is not polemical. It is not a vindication of the claims of the Catholic Church, nor has it anything to say against any Christian denomination that still retains faith in the divine mission of Jesus Christ. It is addressed to a large class of persons outside of all churches, whose belief in the specific teachings of the gospels has been weakened. The author seeks to show that the fundamental truths underlying Christianity, such as the existence, the providence, and the omiscience of God, the immortality of the soul, the existence of free will, and the essential distinction between moral good and evil, are all susceptible of being demonstrated by our unaided reason, while they are made still more luminous by the light of Christian revealation."

Lippincott Co., 1889. 3+448 p. S. (Lippincott's ser. of select novels, no. 102.) pap., 25 c. Allen Chadwick seems to have been born into fiction to illustrate the theory that a man's fate is preordained, that he is powerless to avert either the good or the evil that falls to his lot. Even the circumstances surrounding the poor youth's birth are unfavorable. When he is removed to a higher sphere the effect is very unpromising; his most laudable actions are misconstrued, his peccadilloss are magnified, and a final attempt to do a noble deed converts him into the pariah. These articles first appeared in Harper's Basar.

They are eminently sensible, and are designed to serve "as a guide to the young mother who longs to do her best for her baby, if she can only learn how." They begin with the new-born infant and accompany him, step by step, until he is finally emancipated from the nursery.

They relate to his first week of existence, and tell just what should be done for him; then go on with suggestions for feeding him, his wardrobe, early habits, bath, nurse, his outings, the nursery, toys, etc.; the nursery, government, learning to talk, at table, associations and amusements, etc. amusements, etc.

and constitution. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1889. C. 5+286 p. D. cl., $1.

The contents of the present volume by the late Prof. Alex. Johnston first appeared as the article of the Encyclopædia Britannica on the History and Constitution of the United States. The work is unique in that it presents in a single volume of about three hundred pages a lucid, scholarly, well-ordered narrative of the history of the United States from the earliest discoveries down to the present time. It is a masterly statement of the constitutional and political history of the country, comprehensive and adequate, yet wonderfully clear and compact. Bibliography. ography King, R: Ashe. Passion's slave: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1889. 4+323 p. S. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 41.) pap., 50 c.

In 1885, the author, under the pseudonym "Basil," published "The wearing of the green," an Irish love-story. The heroine of the present story, "Passion's slave," is vegetating in an English country town, when two men appear, the Squire and his friend, who both attract her, one in the hope of satisfying ambition, the other through her unregulated affections. Private theatricals hasten the dimonement. A sweet, quiet, devoted daughter of an inventor, also a slave of his ruling passion, suffers much from the heroine's spite and intrigue. Some of the side characters show careful work. A High Church and a Broad Church clergyman point many moral lessons.

novel. N. Y., Harper, 1890 [1889.] c. 4+384 p. D. cl., $1.25.

On the historic shores of Otsego Lake, a young lieutenant in the regular army engages himself to the daughter of a large grain speculator. At his instigation the officer leaves the army and puts his private fortune into grain, taking New York City as his basis of operation. A total failure in speculation breaks up friendship between the parties and Ida Vail cancels her engagement. The young man becomes a successful business man and active politician, gets in with a set devoted to a new religion, women's rights, fine china, etc., and loses his heart to a Vassar graduate. Her friend, Lill Britton, "a sort of semi-detached, unmarried mother-in-law of the malignant type," becomes the terror of his life, and by her machinations he almost commits a crime. The heroine makes her first appearance, aged six, when she shows herself warm-hearted, spoiled, and wilful. After eleven years she returns to her lather's house and tries to learn to live with her older sisters. English notions of primogeniture and proper education for young women furnish many conversations. Balls, fun, and frolic are dear to the third Miss St. Quentin, but the influence of her older sisters makes her take a serious view of life, and her love-story is very prettily told. Specially suitable for young girls.

Mr. Shaler is Professor of Geology at Harvard University, consequently an authority upon the subject of this volume. Under the title, "The stability of the earth," the whole subject of earthquakes is discussed with the greatest richness of anecdote and illustration, and a special refest richness of anecdote and illustration, and a special reference to their occurrence and probability in the United States; "The instability of the atmosphere" in a similar way treats of cyclones, hurricanes, and all the phenomena of winds and air currents. "Volcances" and "Caverns and cavern life" are two chapters full of striking facts new to the majority of readers; in "Rivers and valleys" the great river basins like those of the Mississippi and Ohio are especially discussed; and "The forests of North America" is a contribution to a subject of pressing importance. The paper on "The nature of soils" is not less important to every agriculturist. The illustrations and designs by some of the foremost American artists are of special beauty and interest.

American-life and character are especially illustrated in this novel. The plot is brief and refers altogether to the marriage of Margaret Debree. She is introduced as a young woman just turned twenty who has set herself a high ideal of duty. Her first offer comes from a young Englishman, who is her to an earldom. This she refuses apparently from conscientious motives. She afterwards marries an American, who seemingly processes all refuses apparently from conscientious motives. She afterwards marries an American, who seemingly possesses all the high traits that really belonged to the Englishman. She deteriorates in her marriage and learns to passionately love wealth and social position. The author's many philosophical asides and discussions of certain characteristics which he considers American, are among the most charming parts of the book.

"The problems which our advancing civilization is forcing upon the attention of society are of the utmost urgency and importance, and are already occupying the thoughts, in a greater or less degree, of every intelligent person in all civilized countries. But, in order that there may be intelligent and comprehensive discussion of the situation, and more especially that there may be wise remedial legislation for any economic or social evils that may exist, it is requisite that there should be a clear and full recognition of what has happened. And to simply and comprehensively tell this—to trace out and exhibit in something like regular order the causes and extent of the industrial and social changes and accompanying disturbances which have especially characterized the last fifteen or twenty years of the world's history—has been the main purpose of the author. At the same time the presentation of whatever in the way of deduction from the record of experience has seemed legitimate and likely to aid in correct conclusions, has not been disregarded."

Che Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEVPOLDT.

NOVEMBER 16, 1880.

The editor does not hold himself-responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

ANOTHER WORD ON INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT.

THE following report of a brief address by R. R. Bowker, preceding the second lecture by Miss Amelia B. Edwards in the Brooklyn Library course, is printed in these columns as a suggestion for the treatment of the international copyright question before the public:

"When our friend Miss Edwards speaks to us face to face, by word of mouth, we delight to recognize the pleasure and profit she gives us, and we desire to make return to her in the one evident and practicable way. The American people do not greatly admire the attitude, mental or physical, of the rustic who, when the great moral entertainment comes to town, smuggles himself under the canvas tent at the risk of being hauled out by the legs by a constable, to get his entertainment for nothing. But when our friends the English authors, like Miss Edwards, speak to us from across the sea, by word of pen, we make no provision of law in their behalf, the American people do smuggle into the entertainment, and there is no constable to drag them out. For thirty-five years Miss Edwards has delighted thousands, indeed hundreds of thousands, of American readers by her striking and delightful novels-as 'Barbara's History,' 'Debenham's Vow,' and 'Lord Brackenbury'-and by her still more charming books of travel-among the 'Untrodden Peaks and Unfrequented Valleys' of the Dolomite region, and in her journey of 'A Thousand Miles Up the Nile.' But it is only hereacthorized American publishers.

by the honest dealing of her authorized publishers.* without sanction by law, and through previous arrangement with periodicals, that she has had any return from America for the delight she has given us; and of late years her books have been printed broadcast without giving to the workman who did the work a penny of advantage.

"When you come to the Authors' Readings, under the auspices of the American Copyright League, which will conclude this series of 'Lectures by Authors,' I shall assume Miss Edwards' permission to have read to you some portions of an autobiographical letter which she wrote to me some years ago in answer to my query as to how she did her work. You will then learn how for two long years she concentrates herself on her book; at what outlay in painstaking, in travelling, in money-cost she sets the mise en scène of her novels; how she labors with her own hand, writing her story three several times: and how at the end she finds herself utterly exhausted by the severity of the work. There is, indeed, no workman who produces his work at such cost as the author, whether in the mechanical work with the pen, of writing, copying, and recopying; in the creative efforts of origination, or in the expenditure of nervous force as the writer joys in the joy of his people, suffers in their sorrows, and is worn with the wear and tear of their lives. You may recall that pathetic preface of 'Dombey and Son,' in which Mr. Dickens tells his readers how he wandered all one night through the streets of Paris in personal affliction over the death of Little Paul. The late Wilkie Collins told me that to most of his novels, before they reached final shape, he gave seven writings or revisions, and he illustrated the nervous exhaustion which came to him in the stress of his work by describing how as he went upstairs after his night's toil, there awaited him always on the stair, not 'the woman in white,' but a green woman with dreadful tusks, who each night bit a piece out of his shoulder-such was the result of the nervous strain. When I shared with Mr. William Black the dangers of that adventurous journey on 'the raging canal' which he took to lay the foundation of his 'House-Boat' story—and there was no Peggy or Mrs. Threepennybit along to console the two masculine inhabitants of the 'Daisy' or 'Waterbug,' as the very modest original of the palatial 'Nameless Barge' was really named—I learned how great is the outlay, how careful the note-taking-in the tiny note-books which serve as palette for the glowing landscapes of this artist with the pen in short, how much task-work is involved in his making of a novel; and he has told me that when he reached the tragic climax of his 'Macleod of Dare,' he was so involved in the turmoll of it that he telegraphed to his wife and children to come to him at once, else as he said he knew not what he might do with himself.

"If you will put on one side this cost in money. in time, in work, and in life to the author, and on the other side the delight and profit that hundreds of thousands of readers get from a book. you will find in the balance the reason and margin for international copyright. If you ask why the author is not content with the return from his home country. I should answer that no one country can suffice for adequate payment. There are no callings, it seems to me, which for the same outlay of labor, intelligence, and skill make such inadequate return as those connected with books-whether it be that of the writer of books, the maker of books, the seller of books, or even the lender of of them-as our library. If you buy a dainty bit of Brussels lace, the inventor who thinks out the new design as well as the workman whose clever fingers knot the lace shares in the returns from the product, and may obtain for his design the sanction of American law; yet the English author, who weaves from our mother-tongue the finer fabric of the brain, gets nothing from us for his work, without which the book could not be, and is expressly denied any legal protection by the terms of our copyright law.

"But there is another and equally important side to the lack of international copyright, its reflex action on American authors and American literature. It is no question of tariff, of protection or free trade, of competition with 'the pauper labor of Europe,' but it is the competition of labor which must pay its bills for food and clothing in face of products on which absolutely nothing is paid for writers' work. Some American publishers have absolutely declined of late years to read the manuscripts of American novels by new authors because the cheap price at which 'pirated' English novels are reprinted handicaps from the start any book on which the author is paid. As has often been quoted, the honest maker of brooms cannot sell in competition with the man who steals his material any more than he in turn can compete with the man who steals his brooms ready made-a climax which was actually reached at one time when the American Government confiscated books for violation of the copyright law, only to sell them at a 'cheap John' auction in violation of the very copyright which the law was supposed to protect. It is a wonder, indeed, that we have had any American literature worth the name, under the discouragements which international copyright. Yet the American authors of to-day, who are associated in the American Copyright League, are working, not for their own self-interest, for most of them have made their reputations and succeeded despite these circumstances, but for the unknown successors whom they desire to encourage in building up an American literature in the future.

"But we are told that the American people will not pay for dear books. We do not mean to give you dear books, but only to ask for a fair price which will permit a fair return to the author, and I may remind you that France, which of all countries in the world is most liberal in its copyright provisions, is the one country in which the best new books are issued in least costly form. Further, as has been said by Mr. Lowell. the President of our Authors' Copyright League, 'There is one thing better than a cheap book. and that is a book honestly come by.' American [Authors'] Copyright League, of which I have the honor to be a member of the Council and of the Executive Committee, presented to the last Congress a copyright bill which passed the Senate, but which unhappily failed to come to a vote in the House. It will present essentially the same bill to the coming Congress and ask for it public support. The bill is not such as the authors of their own free will would desire, but is a practical compromise upon which all the parties interested have agreed, and which would make a decided step forward in the direction of international copyright-after the fruitless endeavors of fifty years since Henry Clay championed international copyright in the Senate. You, ladies and gentlemen, make and are public opinion, and we ask your support in letting Congress know that the American people want international copyright. They will pass the bill if you let them know that you want it. And as you meet Miss Edwards at the reception which is to follow her lecture, give her this word to carry to her fellow-authors when she returns to England. that the American people are an honest folk, that they mean to blot out this shame from their statute-book, and that they will yet put their country on a plane with other civilized nations."

AMERICAN COPYRIGHT LEAGUE.

in turn can compete with the man who steals his brooms ready made—a climax which was actually reached at one time when the American Government confiscated books for violation of the copyright law, only to sell them at a 'cheap John' auction in violation of the very copyright which the law was supposed to protect. It is a wonder, indeed, that we have had any American literature worth the name, under the discouragements which American authors have suffered from the lack of the Council of the League was held at the editorial rooms of The Century, Thursday afternoon, November 13, for the Centu as Secretary, but on his declination to serve for a further term, a vote of thanks and regret was passed, and Mr. R. U. Johnson, of The Century, was elected Secretary. Col. Thos. W. Knox was elected Treasurer in place of Mr. Johnson, but withheld his acceptance until it could be learned whether the two offices of Secretary and Treasurer could not better be concentrated in the single hands of Mr. Johnson. The Executive Committee, which is elected by the League itself, remains as last year, Messrs, Eggleston, Green, Johnson, Knox, and Bowker.

We have not attempted to give reports of the several meetings of the Copyright Conference Committee, as these are essentially private meetings. But as more or less newspaper statement of the progress of the work has been made, we may state authoritatively, in confirmation of these reports, that the Conference Committee has decided to reintroduce the Chace Bill, with verbal amendments to bring it into more exact conformity with the existing copyright law and with one or two oversights corrected. At these Conference meetings there have been present the Committees of the American [Authors'] Copyright League and the American Publishers' Copyright League, and authorized representatives from the International Copyright League of Boston, the Typothetæ, and the International Typographical Union, as also Mr. Thorvald Solberg, late of the Library of Congress, who has assisted the committee very much, by help of his knowledge of the Library of Congress, in putting the bill in more exact verbal shape. The prospects of the bill in the coming Congress are thought to be very bright.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOOKSELL-ERS' AND STATIONERS' ASSOCIA-TION OF ONTARIO.

THE sixth annual meeting of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Association of Ontario was held in the parlor of the Queen's Hotel, Toronto, Oct. 30, at 2 P.M. The President, Mr. H. Fred. Sharpe, of St. Marys, occupied the chair; Mr. J. J. Dyas took his post as Secretary. The attendance was not large, though business of importance came up for discussion.

Mr. A. G. Watson inroduced a resolution recommending that membership in the Association be confined to retailers only, which, after friendly discussion, was dropped. Mr. N. T. Wilson, of Toronto, read a paper on the "Profits on Newspapers and Magazines," in which the old grievance of underselling was aired and which directly criticised the methods of the Toronto News Co. This paper brought to his feet Mr. A. S. Irving, Manager of the Toronto News Co. He was willing that any committee from the Association should examine the books of his company and see for themselves how infinitesimally small were the wholesaler's profits. The real difficulty against which the newsdealer had to contend, Mr. Irving claimed, was "the invidious distinction that the government made between a periodical from a foreign publisher addressed to a private citizen and one bearing the address of a newsdealer. In one case no duty was exacted, and in the other instance the full Custom rate was called for." The discussion on this subject brought out some reference to the Home Knowledge Association, which, it was claimed, supplied their subscribers with periodicals at or nearly at cost. A committee consisting of Messrs. N. T. Wilson, D. Bain, and J. A. Nelles, was appointed to go carefully into the whole question of periodicals and take such steps as were deemed best to remedy the alieged evils.

The next subject was the matter of postage and duties, and after some discussion a committee was appointed to visit the government at Ottawa, and endeavor to have the interests of the trade rightly protected.

The Association heartily congratulated the members of the Copyright Association on the successful and practical results of their work during the past year.

The present was urged as an excellent time to move in the direction of better discounts on schoolbooks from the local government, the term contracts in many cases now expiring.

After sundry business of no general importance, and a vote of thanks to the President and Secretary, and the election of the following officers: President, H. Fred. Sharpe, St. Marys; 1st Vice-President, J. A. Nelles, Guelph; 2d Vice-President, Wm. Middleton, Kingston; Sec.-Treas., J. B. McLean, Toronto; Executive Committee, A. S. Irving, D. Bain, N. T. Wilson, S. Wallace, of Toronto, and R. O. Smith, Woodstock, the meeting was brought to a close. For the facts in the above account we are indebted to the full report of The Canadian Bookseller for November.

FAC-SIMILES OF BOOKBINDINGS.

MR. BERNARD QUARITCH has now completed the eleven parts composing his "Fac-similes of Choice Examples of Historical and Artistic Bookbinding." Of this The Bookbinder says: "Of its kind it is a grand work, and, we may fairly add, without compare. The fac-similes are as perfect as high-class lithographic art can produce, and the hundred and three plates illustrate completely the history of the bookbinders' art.' In the introduction Mr. Quaritch himself justly says: "The volume now offered to the public claims rank as a book, not merely as a collection of plates. This assertion is based, not upon any vain belief in the value of the text, but upon the nature of the illustrations. They have been selected with a clear purpose from examples of the art of ornamental bookbinding, which range consecutively over three centuries of European practice, and exhibit the successive styles that have prevailed in the ornamentation of books. from the Revival of Letters to the middle of the eighteenth century." The remainder of the introductory article is devoted to a well-written account of book ornamentation, which will prove a valuable addition to the literature of the craft.

The plates are divided into twenty-two classes, as follows: I. Gothic bindings stamped in blind-tooling (seven plates); II. Modern European bindings: early examples derived from Saracenic models (four plates); III. Cameo bindings of the sixteenth century (four plates); IV. Bindings of the sixteenth century in transitional style (five plates); V. Bindings executed for Jean Grolier (three plates); VI. Bindings done by Henri Deux and Diane de Poitiers (six plates); VII. Grolieresque bindings: Italian (nine plates); VIII. Grolieresque bindings: French (five plates); IX. Grolieresque bindings: English (six plates); X. Grolieresque bindings: Flemish and German (three plates); XI. Veneto-Lyonese, stamped in the centres or corners with Grolieresque patterns (three plates); XII. French bindings by the Eve family (eight plates); XIII. Foreign imitations of Eve bindings (three plates); XIV. Bindings by Le Gascon (four plates); XV. Foreign imitations of Le Gascon (three plates); XVI. French bindings of the seventeenth century; Bourbon and Le Gasconesque (three plates); XVII. English binding in the seventeenth century (seven plates); XVIII. French binding, late seventeenth and early eighteenth century; Boyer and Du Seuil (four plates); XIX. French binding, eighteenth century; Padeloup, Derome (two plates); XX. English and Scottish bindings in the eighteenth century (eight plates); XXI. Modern French imitative bindings (two plates); XXII. Book covers of peculiar fabric (four plates)."

THE BELFORD-CLARKE FAILURE.

The Canadian Bookseller, in quoting under the heading of "A 'Cheeky' Proposition," the proposal sent out to their creditors by Belford, Clarke & Co., printed in our issue of October 19, makes the following comment:

"There are members of the Canadian trade, we opine, who will experience no difficulty in tracing the astute hand of a 'smart Aleck' in the concoction of this very clever letter.

"More, perhaps, than any other house, the Belfords, by their system of bazaar stores and reckless dealings generally, have helped to disorganize the legitimate book business of the country, and we much mistake the temper of American publishers if, by the accepting of such an offer, they give additional encouragement to these demoralizing trade methods."

OBITUARY NOTES.

WILLIAM CHARLES SADLIER, of the firm of D. & J. Sadlier & Co., the well-known Catholic publishing house, died at his residence in New York City on the 8th inst. Mr. Sadlier was born in New York City in 1859, and received his education at Mount St. Mary's College, Emmittsburg, Md. He decided to enter a mercantile life, and accordingly early associated himself with his father's publishing house. By his activity and business enterprise he became an important factor in the prosperity of the concern. Mr. Sadlier was very popular with all who knew him, and his circle of acquaintance was a large one.

HENRY F. TINKER, of the firm of Root & Tinker, died at his residence, No. 39 West 36th St., N. Y., on the 9th inst. Mr. Tinker was born at Westfield, N. Y., September 23, 1826. His business life was begun at Ripley, N. Y. From there he removed to Erie, Pa. where he was connected with an insurance agency for some years. He next moved to Depere, Wis., and carried on the lumber business till 1880, when he came to New York. For several years he had been with Root & Tinker, publishers of The Oil, Paint, and Drug Reporter. A widow, one son, Franklin H. Tinker, and two daughters, Mrs. Ingersoll Lockwood, wife of the Editor of The Book Lover, and Miss Grace Tinker, of New York, survive him. He was buried at Milburn, N. J.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

RAND, McNALLY & Co. will publish shortly H. Rider Haggard's latest story, "Allan's Wife."

MACMILLAN & Co. have just issued John Morley's monograph on Walpole, which has attracted considerable attention in England.

WE are pleased to note that Rand, McNally & Co.'s maps secured a silver medal, the highest award allotted to maps, at the Paris Exposition of 1880.

A. & C. BLACK, Edinburgh, have just issued the first volume of their new and enlarged edition of "The Collected Writings of Thomas De Ouincey," edited by Prof. Masson.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have in press a biography of Wilbur Fisk, the eminent Methodist minister, by Prof. George Prentice, of Wesleyan University, to form the second volume in their new series of American Religious Leaders.

ALEXANDER W. NORTON, of Boston, a canvasser for Bryan, Taylor & Co., of New York, fell into the area of a store in the German Savings Bank Building, corner 14th Street and Fourth Avenue, on the night of the 8th inst., and, it is feared, injured himself quite seriously.

ALBERT & SCOTT, 106 Wabash Ave., Chicago, have made arrangements with the publishers of Emphatic Diaglot to issue in separate form the Gospel of St. Luke for the study of the Sundayschool lessons for 1890. To those unfamiliar with the plan of the Diaglot, it should be said that it is an interlinear Greek-English New Testament, with an emphatic translation on the same page and numerous references and notes.

D. LOTHROP COMPANY will shortly issue a beautiful reproduction in dainty sixteenmo of one of the most famous of English classics, Sterne's "Sentimental Journey." It is illustrated with twelve full-page etchings and many text illustrations by the celebrated French artist, Maurice Leloir, the reproduction being supervised by Mr. J. B. Millet, of the Boston Photogravure Co. They have printed, bound, and put on sale for this season's trade more than two and a half million books. These touch every grade of book-work from the beautiful gift-book to the board-bound books for the mass of childish readers.

It is stated that the work of revising the German Bible is now so far advanced that the final general conference of the scholars engaged in the work will shortly take place. At this meeting, not only will the task of revising the Old Testament version be completed, but there will also be a re-revision of the New Testament, in order to bring the literary form of the whole Scriptures into harmony. All the surviving members of the committee which revised the New Testament will take part in this fresh revision. In the first half of January will assemble the great plenary conference which was announced in the preface to the "sample edition." In this conference all the members of the Old and New Testament Committees will take part, also the members of the German Language Committee, as well as representatives of Castein's Bible office, and of all the Bible societies which issue

German editions. The final suggestions and recommendations of all concerned will then be considered, and, when this has been done, the revised German version may shortly be expected to appear .- N. Y. Tribune.

THE AMERICAN ART ASSOCIATION have in preparation a memorial of the exhibition of vorks by the late French sculptor, Antoine Louis Barye, to be held by the Barye Monument Association in the American Art Galleries, for the benefit of the fund for his monument in Paris. It is by Charles de Kay, the writer on art and archæology, and will give a thorough and comprehensive review of Barye's life and works. The volume will be a sumptuous one, a medium quarto with decorated board covers suitable for rebinding if necessary. The paper will be hand-laid Holland, and the letter-press will reach about 120 pages. There will be at least 30 full-page artotypes of monuments, statues, and statuettes, printed on Holland paper in colored inks to resemble the various patinas of the bronze. At least 30 woodcuts of statues and groups by Barye, oils, and portraits of the artist himself, will be printed on India or Japanese paper and carefully inserted. These are by some of the best of our American artists and engravers. The edition is limited to 525 copies, of which 200 have already been taken up. The price is $10 per copy. As soon as 300 copies are subscribed for the price will be raised to $15, and when the 400th copy has been taken up the price will be fixed at $20. The proceeds of the sale of the book go, with the receipts of the exhibition, to the Barye Monument Fund.

The Following are Some of the Opinions of the Trade and Press:

"For the time that we have devoted to its examination, are well pleased with it."—ROBERT CLARKE & Co., Publishers and Booksellers, Cincinnati.

"You deserve well of the world till you die, and after, but the book trade is just as ungrateful as any republic, and although they may sling an occasional laurel wreath out your way, the silver buzzard and the golden eagle 'fieth not so fast nor so far,' There is but one Directory of the Book and Stationery Trade and that is Caspar's."—P. F. VAN EVEREN, New York.

"It is just splendid. The most complete book of the kind we have seen."-J. H. Kurzenknabe & Sons, Harrisburg, Pa.

"I am greatly pleased with your Directory. It is the best work of the kind ever issued and deserves a large sale."—NATURAL SCIENCE PUBLISHING Co., New York.

"It seems more complete than anything of the kind I have seen before."—J. B. MARTINDALE, Chicago.

"We like it very much, and we don't know but what it is the best thing of the kind we have ever seen,"—P. R. McCargo & Co., Boston.

"Am very grateful to you for the conscientious care and painstaking effort in preparing so valuable and so complete a work. Be kind enough to enter my name, and mail me all addenda sheets in future, and do not fail to notify me of any new project in this line you may engage in."—Gko. H. Colby, Bookseller, Lancaster, N. H.

"We have looked it over with great interest and appreciate the fact that it will be of great value to us."—W.
O. Davis & Co., Booksellers, Cincinnati.

"I think your booka most valuable one and believe it will be better appreciated as it becomes better known."—WILL H. LYONS, Newport, Ky.

"Even a cursory examination of this important directory will convince any one of the thorough manner in which it has been put together and of the value of the completed work. Mr. Caspar has produced a work which, if properly kept up from year to year, will be the standard."—The American Stationer, New York City.

"The American Stationer, New York City.

"The Appendix to 'Caspar's Directory of the American Book, News, and Stationery Trades' is a most valuable compilation, exhaustive and complete. The information it contains is absolutely unique and not to be procured from any other source. Hence it is of the first importance to every one in the trades. It is admirably arranged; the references are simple, and being grouped under special heads, makes consultation a matter of little or no difficulty. Such a work is really a great trade textbook, from which the initiated can feel the pulse of the whole book-publishing world. It is a monument of careful, painstaking and accurate labor, and is as reliable as it is extensive. . The preparation of this useful volume must have been a work of immense labor and patience, and Mr. Caspar must be congratulated on the success which he has achieved. It is a manual for publishers, booksellers, newsdeales, stationers, and libraries, indispensable to them all."—The American Bookseller.

CHRISTMAS!

THE most representative of the Christmas issues, having no special interests to represent, giving best value to both dealers and advertisers, and out first, is the Christmas issue of the Publishers' Weekly. The cover will be tasteful and taking.

As usual, special articles on leading books, the finest specimen illustrations from others, full descriptive summary of new books and stationery novelties, reference price-lists covering the Illustrated Works, Books for the Young, and other Choice Books published during 1889, etc.

Furnished at the earliest possible date, orders recorded in order of receipt. As paper is made for it, we need prompt word. Prices are put below cost of manufacture, to insure the widest circulation to advertising.

To avoid delay it is absolutely necessary that copy for imprint, together with full directions for forwarding,	THIN PAPER EDITION, should accompany the order. All packages sent by ex- press unpaid, unless other shipping directions are given.	With Dealer's Imprint.

The Book of the Season.

GREAT SENATORS OF THE UNITED STATES Forty Years Ago (1848 and 1849). with Personal Recollections and Delineations of Calhoun, Benton, Clay, Webster, General Houston, Jefferson Davis, etc. By OLIVER Robert Bonner's Sons, Publishers, $1.00.

"Great Senators" is emphatically the book of the season. The critics and reviewers give it unstinted praise. The New York Tribune concludes a two-column review of it thus:

"This book will be read with the keenest pleasure by "This book will be read with the keenest pleasure by all who are old enough to have been brought up in the traditions of half a century ago, while it can be com-mended to young men as a treasure-house of information concerning perhaps the most striking and able group of statesmen the Union has known."

The New York Times says:

"Mr. Dyer's relations with the great Senators of forty years ago was one very fortunate for the acquiring of fresh impressions. It is impossible to read his reminis-cences without being aware that the impressions he reports are genuine."

The New York Sun says:

"Among the recent contributions to American history

"Among the recent contributions to American history none is worthy of more serious attention than a volume entitled 'Great Senators,' by Oliver Dyer.

"It would be easy to fill columns with effective extracts from this volume, but we must confine ourselves to two or three examples of incisive and impartial delineation. Mr. Dyer's analysis of Webster's individuality is the most searching that we have seen—indeed, it is the only one which accounts at once for the triumphs and the shortcomings of the great parliamentary champion of the Union."

The New York Press says:

"In the book, 'Great Senators of the United States Forty Years Ago,' are told, as Dyeronly could tell, stories of Calhoun, Benton, Clay, Webster, Houston, and Jeff Davis, with personal recollections and delineations. The personal descriptions given by Dyer of these great men are photographic in precision and lifelike as touched up by the anecdotal stroke of a master."

"Great Senators" is supplied to the trade by Robert Bonner's Sons. Any one who does not find "Great Senators" at the bookstores can obtain a copy, postage paid, by sending a dollar to

WORDSWORTH'S POETICAL WORKS

With life of the poet, portrait, and other illustrations. Eight vols., 16mo, from new type, and beautifully printed, with red lines, by the Glasgow University Press. Bound in English cloth, red edges, in a cloth box, $5.00; French morocco, gilt edges, and morocco box, $9.00; full turkey morocco, and full calf, round corners, gilt edges, box to match, $15.00.

Wordsworth's value as a poet is particularly great at this present time. There is no poet who can be studied to better aevantage. In these convenient volumes, songs, sonnets, and passages of familiar beauty will be, moreover, reread with new delight by those who have found in their acquaintance with Wordsworth one of the strongest and most undying consolations and most vivid influences of their intellectual life.

SHAKESPEARE'S DRAMATIC WORKS AND POEMS.

With Life, and Index to Common Quotations from his Works, and a Full Glossary, the words having the reference to the plays or poems, thus forming a convenient index to the passages in which they occur. Carefully collated with the best texts. Eight vols., 16mo, with 40 illustrations, text beautifully printed, with red lines. English cloth and cloth box, $5.00; French morocco, gilt edges, and morocco box, $9.00; full turkey and full calf, round corners, gilt edges, box to match, $15.00.

A Limited fac-simile Edition of the Newly Discovered Book by John Bunyan, Country Rhymes for Children.

By John Bunyan (first published in 1686), with an Introduction by the Rev. Jno. Brown, of Bunyan's church, in England. It is issued in small foolscap 8vo size, printed on antique paper, and appropriately bound in contemporary binding, $1.50.

In some of the earlier lists of John Bunyan's works a book with the above title has appeared from time to time, and has puzzled bibliographers and the students of Bunyan's writings. The matter has remained a mystery and a puzzle till a few months since, when a copy was secured by the Trustees of the British Museum.

NEW ILLUSTRATED WORKS ON JAPAN AND ASIA.

THE INDUSTRIES OF JAPAN.

Together with an account of its agriculture, mining, forestry, arts, and commerce. From travels and researches undertaken at the cost of the Prussian Government. By Prof. J. J. Rein. Illustrated by egravings, lithographs, and native fabrics, many full-page engravings, colored maps. Uniform with same author's "Japan Travels and Researches." Octavo, cloth, gilt top. $10.00.

"A magnificent achievement, a shining example of patience, learning, and fine literary form. The book stands out as easily first in its special field as Fuji rises among the lesser mountains of the Japanese Islands. Indeed, in one of the manifold senses of the name of the sacred peak, this book of Prof. Rein's is Fuji; for it is peerless, and there are 'no two such,'"—N. Y. Critic.

Through the Heart of Asia—Over the Pamir to India.

By Gabriel Bonvalot. With 250 illustrations (many of them full-page engravings) by Albert Pepin. Translated from the French by C. B. Pitman. 2 vols., octavo, $10.50.

THE BOOK-WORM—2d Series.

An illustrated treasury of old-time literature. Tastefully printed in old style, on antique paper, with numerous illustrations and ornamental embellishments. Octavo, cloth, $3.00.

The BOOK-WORM is a treasury of knowledge on old-time literature, and presents its readers with stores of wisdom on subjects which are attractive to the book-lover, giving him in a readable form much out-of-the-way and little-known information on the literature of the past.

NEW HOLIDAY EDITION.

THE MARBLE FAUN.

A Romance of Monte Beni.

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

New Holiday Edition. Beautifully illustrated with fifty photogravures of Sculpture, Paintings, etc., and of localities in which the scenes of the book are laid—chiefly views in Rome. With a steel portrait of Hawthorne. In two volumes, 8vo, gilt top, with slip covers in Italian style, in cloth box, $6.00. Beautifully bound in special style of full polished calf, $12.00, net.

"The Marble Faun," the scene of which is so largely laid in Rome and its neighborhood, is especially adapted to illustration. It has even been common, during past years, for travelers in Italy to take "The Marble Faun" as a guide-book to certain portions of Rome, and every one is familiar with the little Tauchnitz editions, interleaved with more or less satisfactory photographs of the various localities, of the statues, and of the pictures, mentioned in the novel.

The Publishers have, in this volume, proceeded much on the plan of a connoisseur extending a volume of which he is particularly fond. They have spared no pains in selecting the best subjects from hundreds of views and pictures, and, in addition to the regular sources of supply, have laid many libraries and collections, public and private, under contribution for the choicest photographs which also were the best suited for photogravure reproduction.

Not content with this, they have reproduced the photogravures almost entirely from photographs much larger than the finished reproductions, in order to gain a sharpness of impression which could not have been obtained in any other way. These photogravures are printed in the tint best adapted to bring out the statue, picture, or landscape reproduced. The result is so thoroughly satisfactory that the Publishers feel quite repaid for all the time and pains which have been spent upon the work.

A glance at the list of Illustrations will show what subjects have been chosen.

THE AUTOCRAT

OF THE

BREAKFAST-TABLE.

Or Every Man bis own Boswell.

By OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

An entirely New Edition, from new plates, with engraved Title-pages from designs of Mrs. Henry Whitman. In two volumes, 16mo, gilt top, $2.50.

Limited First Edition, paper label, uncut edges, $3.00 a set

"The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table" has never yet appeared in any edition which has been quite worthy of the popularity of the book itself. A new edition, from new plates, in two 16mo volumes, is at last issued, which gives an opportunity, not only for some decorations, but for an open page, printed from large type, with wide margins, — the desiderata of the amateur of good book-making.

The greatest care has been taken in all those points that make a simple and elegant edition. The cover has been designed by Mrs. Henry Whitman. The title-pages, which are an especial feature of the edition, are engraved on steel—a return to a style once in vogue, and familiar to collectors.

It is therefore distinctly an edition for the book-lover.

KIRTSEFF. MARIE

"FROM CHILDHOOD TO DEATH."

Translated by MARY J. SERRANO, with appendix describing a visit to Mile. Bashkirtseff, by François Coppée. One 8vo vol., with portrait and illustrations, new style of binding, gilt top, etc., $2.00.
In this journal Mile. Bashkirtseff not only writes of herself with perfect frankness, but she is equally frank in speaking of the artists and men of letters who were her companions in Prais from 1878 to 1884. With such enthusiastic praise as this book has evoked, it cannot fail to attract the attention of those who read for instruction and those who read for entertainment only.

read for entertainment only.

HELEN ZIMBERN SAYS, in Blackwood's Magazine: "No one can lay down, without emotion, the pages of this diary, in which a human soul has voluntarily laid its very inmost fibres bare before us."

JOSEPHINE LAZARUS SAYS, in Scribner's Monthly: "The journal of Marie Bashkirtseff is in many ways a unique book—something never before attempted and never to be attempted again. . . . The whole book is a monument."

THE RIVERS OF GREAT BRITAIN:

RIVERS OF THE EAST COAST.

Descriptive, Historical, Pictorial. With numerous highly finished engravings. Royal 4to, 384 pages, cloth, gilt, etc., $15.00.

NEW ZEALAND AFTER FIFTY YEARS.

By Edward Wakefield. With numerous illustrations. 1 vol., 8vo, cloth, $2.00.

Mr. Wakefield has the faculty of being exhaustive and accurate without being tedious; partly from the habit of studying every subject thoroughly, and partly from the good fortune of possessing a clear, direct, and graphic style. He has the advantage, too, in describing strange lands, of being an excellent naturalist.

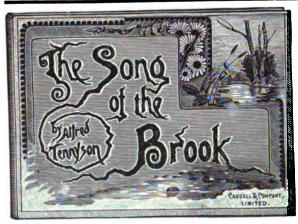

WILD FLOWERS OF THE PACIFIC COAST.

From original water-color sketches drawn from nature. By Emma Homan Thayer, author of "Wild Flowers of the Rocky Mountains," etc. The plates lithographed in highest style of the art, bound in extra silk-finished cloth, full gilt and colors, bevelled boards, etc. New style. $7.50.

A book of unusual beauty. Each plate is handsome enough to be framed by itself. It is worthy of a place upon any drawing-room table, and especially of a careful study from those who cultivate flower-painting.

MOTHER GOOSE. Set to Music.

The handsomest juvenile of the year. New edition, elegantly done in lithographic colors. Music by Effie I. Lane. Illustrations by J. Louis Webb. New and unique binding, $2.50.

By ALFRED TENNYSON.

APTER ILLUSTRATIONS BY

WEDWORTH WADSWORTH.

Beautifully reproduced in monotones in the highest style of the lithographic art. New and elegant binding. $2.50.

The popularity of Tennyson's "Song of the Brook" is as lasting as the brook itself-it "goes on forever." The artist could scarcely have selected a poem more suggestive of pictures than this popular favorite, and his pencil has caught inspiration from the text. From the design on the front cover, which is as graceful as it is novel, to the little picture on the back, it is all in keeping with the graceful flowing of the lines. The effect of the lithographic work is such as to make the reproductions appear like original drawings.

Christmas Greeting.

From "Lorna Doone." (Copyright, 1889, by Burrows Bros. Co.)

SAW three ships come sailing in, come sailing in, come sailing in. . . On Christmas day in the morning." It is an allegory, this quaint old carol, of everybody's dream. Every one's ship comes home on Christmas morning, into the fair haven of Heart's Desire. The ship which we signal sails into port from the sea of literature, and brings cargo of good thoughts and pleasant picturings.

What visions of anticipation, what delights of realization, come with these bright days of the Christmas-tide! The gifts which overflow the child's stocking, or fill the Christmas bookshelf of the elder who is again a child when "Christmas comes again," are pleasant tokens of something that is very deep down in the heart of human nature—love to our kind, delight in the happiness of others, good-will and peace among gentle men. There is no holy-day with so many legends, allegories, and associations, and they are all cheerful: the ships come in, the Christmas stars shine welcome, the reindeer of Santa Claus dash from the frigid North into the warmth of the chimney corner, dear St. Nicholas himself, under as many names as there are languages in Christman beams upon us, the Christmas tree typifies the gifts of bounteous nature, the Christmas stocking is the horn of plenty, the Christmas chimes ring out, the Christmas waits sing carols—high above is the angelic choir, sounding its roundelay. It is above all the season of gifts, for it was on this most solemn and most cheerful of days that the great Giver gave to his children the great Gift.

Gentle reader—and at Christmas time we are all gentle—here is a modest foretaste of the feast. The name of the Christmas Bookshelf tells its story. It is a bill of fare illustrated as it were with choice tid-bits of the viands set forth for your delectation by your humble servants, the makers of books. Months ago, when the smack of last Christmas's plum-pudding and mince pie was not forgotten from your palate, and when this Christmas was so far off that you did not even dream about it, authors, artists, engravers, printers were already busy at the call of the publishers who were thinking ahead for you. They are always the advance-guard of Santa Claus. Nobody works so hard to please him—and you, as do they. And how much the makers of books have done to make Christmas what it is! How much kindly feeling has been sprinkled over this world from the torch of that ghost of Christmas Present which Charles Dickens conjured in his "Christmas Carol." How much good has been done by that one Christmas verse in Thackeray's "The End of the Play."

There is a little Christmas service which is not provided for in the rubrics of the prayer-book, but is a feature of one home we know of, and which might be pleasantly introduced into others. Always on Christmas eve the same dear pages are read—the story of the shepherds, the angelic choir, and the birth at Bethlehem, from the Holy Book; that noble Christmas hymn of Alfred Domett, "In the silent midnight, centuries ago;" then the familiar passages from the "Christmas Carol;" lastly, Thackeray's "End of the Play." It is a home-habit which gives zest to the day, and brings small folk and big folk into harmony with the Christmas chimes that are to wake them on the morrow. It is always a pleasure to take down these old friends from the Christmas bookshelf and freshen acquaintance with them each year.

What a wealth of books is set forth for the Christmas feast! Here are all sorts—books for the Christmas table, in which the artists are all in all, the great standards in fine editions, dainty books in as dainty bindings, children's books in infinite variety Who can fail here to find his liking? It is indeed an embarrassment of riches. With the fairy folk in Christina Rossetti's poem, we cry to all: "Come buy, come buy."

From "The Quiet Life."

The Great English Cathedrals.

CATHEDRALS, in their original and fundamental idea, possessed much of the missionary character and were the headquarters of the bishop and his clergy, from which they went forth to evangelize the heathen inhabitants, and to which they returned for rest, refreshment, and conference. Architecturally these cathedrals were modelled after the Roman basilicas, or Halls of Justice, of which many were bestowed by imperial authority upon the Christians for purposes of worship and churchly administration. Subsequent modifications of the basilica plan were coincident with the adoption of new dogmas and ceremonies. The history of church architecture shows it to have been an embodiment of the religious life of the builders-the expression of their maturest theological, ethical, and ecclesiastical beliefs. Architects prayed before they designed, and builders worshipped while they wrought. Material things were made to act upon the soul.

These ideas are elaborated in the admirable introduction by Dr. Richard Wheatley to "The Cathedrals and Abbeys in Great Britain and Ireland," brought out in an imposing volume by Messrs. Harper & Bros. The text is skilfully woven by this well-known American Methodist preacher from the representative literature on his subject, which includes Hooker's "Ecclesiastical Polity," Milman's "History of Christianity," Freeman's "Cathedral Churches of the Old Foundation," Walcott's "English Minsters," Bonney's "Cathedral Churches of England and Wales," Ruskin's "Seven Lamps of Architecture," Venables' "Essays on Cathedrals," and various articles on architecture in the Encyclopædia Britannica. Besides thoroughly reading up his subject Dr. Wheatley has travelled and made notes for his work upon the ground. As far as possible he gives a history of each of the fortytwo church-buildings he describes, an account of its bishops from the foundation, its mode of government, revenues, and other incidental features, as well as a full architectural and popular description of the great building. these are pictured in enormous wood-engravings, 20 by 13 inches, the size of a double-page of Herper's Basar, in which many of them have been printed as supplements. There are smaller engravings of the others or of details, and we give from these the picture of the west front of Salisbury Cathedral, since reductions of the main illustrations would quite fail to do justice to them. The volume is a large folio, bound in light bown linen, with the title in depressed letters picker out in gold, and a rubricated initial and bishop's mitre, the result being most fitting and beautiful. It is a superb gift for a clerical friend of any Christian denomination, or any student of art.

The Imitation of Christ.

The problem of the authorship of the book universally known as "The Imitation of Christ" has given rise to the most interminable controversy the history of literature has ever seen, and one which even now seems as active as in the seventeeth century. The book has been translated into more languages than any other book save the Bible, and has moved the hearts of men of all nations, characters, and conditions of life. Thomas à Kempis is certified to be the author by most of the earliest dated MSS., by most of the earliest printed editions of the book, by a great mass of contemporary evidence, and by a great deal of internal evidence, some of the most internal evidence.

esting kind. The proof from internal evidence has been set on quite a fresh basis by the studies of Carl Hirsche, of Hamburg, who has discovered, from a careful examination of the Ms. of 1441 (Bibliothèque de Bourgoyne, Brussels), that the "Imitation" was written and printed for the purpose of chanting.

Thomas Hammerken, commonly known as Thomas à Kempis, was born about 1380 in the town of Kempen, lying about fifteen miles northwest of Düsseldorf. His father was a poor, hard-worked peasant, his mother kept a little school for the younger children of the town. Their two core Lobe and Thomas found their way to Deventer, thence to Zwölle and to the Convent of St. Agnes. Thomas was called Thomas from Kempen, and the school title superseded the family name. Thomas Hammerken was forgotten, Thomas à Kempis became known throughout the Christian world. Thomas entered the convent in 1399, received priest's orders in 1413, and died in 1471, about ninety years old.

The convent was poor, and most of the monks earned money to support the household by copying manuscripts. Thomas was a most laborious copyist, but also wrote a large number of original writings, which bear record of his saintly life and character. He lived during one of the stormiest periods of European and Church history. when three Popes anathematized each other from different sees and zealous churchmen were at their wits' end to devise ways and means to restore peace to a distracted Church, and to discipline the clergy into decent living. But Thomas knew nothing of all this. Mediæval Christianity showed two ideas of Christian life, the religious and the political. The Church insisted that the best imitation of Christ was to be obedient, poor, and unmarried. But Thomas was wider and more sympathetic in his ideas of true imitation. He sums up in his little book the heart religion of Christianity.

The Quiet Life.

"gift-books" to surpass in permanent value "The Quiet Life," containing certain verses by various hands, the motive set forth in a prologue and epilogue by Austin Dobson, the whole adorned with numerous drawings by Edwin A. Abbey and Alfred Parsons. English verse of the olden time has inspired the varied but congenial powers of these artists. The greater portion of the contents of this holiday publication of Messrs. Harper & Bros. has been made familiar to us during the year in the pages of Harper's Magasine. The body of the book is made up of well-known poems, some old, some not so old, including "The Garden," by Andrew Marvell; "The Wish," by Abraham Cowley; "Quince," by W. M. Praed, and "The Vicar," by the same author; Pope's "Ode to Solitude;" "To Master Anthony Stafford," by Thomas Randolph, and "The Married Man," by an unknown author.

A prologue tells the purpose of this book of poems uniform in tone, and pictures in which the artists

"Desert awhile the stage of strife
To draw the even, ordered life,
The easeful days, the dreamless nights,
The homely round of plain delights,
The calm, the unambitioned mind
Which all men seek and few men find."

The epilogue seems to suggest that the peace

Dr. Hirsche's rhythmic Latin version, published in Berlin in 1874, has now been translated and is brought out by Messrs. A. D. F. Rangolph & Co. in a volume that is a handsome piece of bookmaking. The cover of this edition is of cloth of a rich ecclesiastical purple with vellum corners and back, the lettering being stamped in gold. The title-page is rubricated, and the type-page has rough edges and very wide margins, the top being gilt. A small marginal date sets off a dozen lines or so for reading each day in the year.

The name of the translator does not appear. but he writes a preface giving some account of the work and the author, and a brief preface is also contributed by Canon Liddon of St. Paul's, London. The usual order of the books composing the "Musica Ecclesiastica" has been altered. They are now given as Thomas à Kempis left them. No passage has been smoothed over, toned down, or omitted to suit the particular tenets of any school in the Christian Church. The true principles of pureprimitive Christianity were voiced in the monk's cellin St. Agnes Convent, and the little volume which for four hundred years has helped the thinking, feeling world still contains the only solution for the problems of our complex civilization—the imitation of Christ.

It will be hard for this season's collection of the words and pictures aim to realize cannot be gift-books" to surpass in permanent value lasting for the present race of discontented men:

"Weary of human ills and woes, Weary of passion and of pain, And vaguely craving for repose."

Its four lines rudely shake us from the tranquillity into which we have been lulled by poet and artist:

"Let the dream pass, the fancy fade!
We clutch a shape, and hold a shade.
Is peace so peaceful? Nay, who knows?
There are volcanoes under snows."

There are pictures to every stanza of these poems, inviting to country lanes and byways in wood and field in the work of Alfred Parsons and showing the rustic people Edwin A. Abbey loves, in their natural innocence and humor. The artists have worked together in unfailing harmony, making even more familiar the rustic England they know so well and from which they seem always to draw fresh inspiration for work which is always a little better done than before.

The publishers have made a sumptuous book of this rich material. Heavy, toned paper, large, clear type, fine printing and elegant binding make a representative holiday volume. Its red cover with gilt sprinkling will stand out among the Christmas books, and the literary selection of this fine specimen of book-making destines it to become a valued friend in many a quiet library.

" For all who understood admired,
And some who did not understand them."

From "Lorna Doone." (Copyright, 1889, by Burrows Bros. Co.)

Lorna Doone.

"LORNA DOONE," although not the first novel that Blackmore wrote, is the one which gained him his fame. On its appearance some twenty years ago, its realism and quaint humor at once captured the popular fancy. Like Thomas Hardy, Mr. Blackmore deserted the beaten track of fiction, and sought in a remote corner of England the scene of his novel. Exmoor, West Devonshire, is not only one of the most wildly picturesque and beautiful spots in the British Isles, but is inhabited by a peculiar people, who retain today many of the odd customs and much of the quaint, rough speech of several centuries ago. The country people still talk of the terrible "Doones"—the legends of this band of outlaws being as numerous as those of Robin Hood.

Mr. Blackmore opens his story in the 17th century - a few years before the great snowstorm, which is still one of the favorite narratives of the West Devon farmer. The remoteness of Exmoor from the King and the court, its desolate surroundings, and the methods of travelling in fashion in those days, make all its incidents possible. The story is told in the amusing dialect of the time by John Ridd, a young yeoman whose father is murdered by the Doones on his way homeward from Porlock market one Saturday evening. The daring deeds of these desperate men have a fascinating interest. In spite, however, of much that verges upon tragedy, there is a most humorous side to the story.

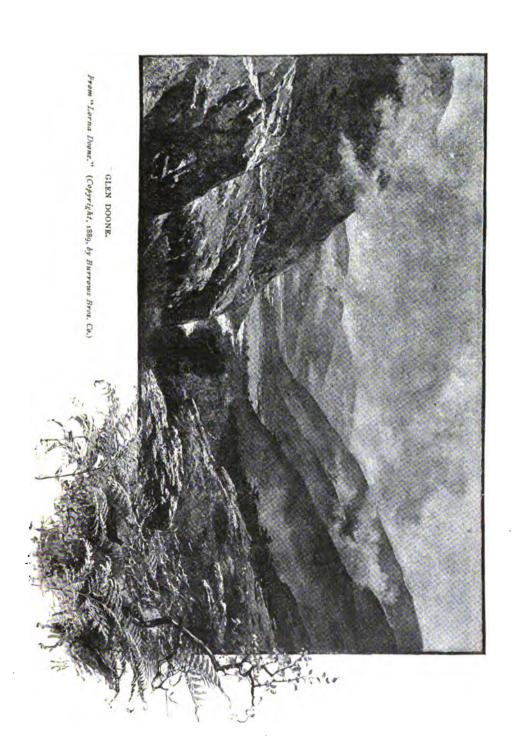

Blackmore is so appreciative of the comical side of the life of the time, and the odd morality of the natives, that one cannot fail to smile with him in his many philosophical divergences.

The Burrows Bros. Co. have selected this novel for illustration for the holiday season, and have issued it in very beautiful style, with numerous designs from the pencil of Henry Sandham, George Wharton Edwards, Harry Fenn, Charles Copeland, and Margaret McDonald Pullman. which reproduce both the characters and charming scenery of the story. The bold mountain and coast scenery, the deep valleys and bald moors of Devon and Somerset give the artists ample material. The characters are as picturesque and unconventional as their surroundings. Tom Faggus, the "justly popular highwayman," who had "never robbed a poor man, neither insulted a woman, but was very good to the Church," is as strong a figure in his way as the "Doones," whom "everybody cursed." John Ridd, the young giant who finally rescues Lorna Doone from her mountain prison, is the central figure of a pretty love-tale. All are seen in the designs of the volume, which are set in the text and cover full pages. An excellent map of the Exmoor region assists readers. The work in this new shape ought to be a favorite Christmas book. The story has already made so secure a place for itself in our literature that many will desire to have it in this attractive form.

hamthorne's "Marble Fann."

This marvellous romance of nature and art, embodying the great truths of the primitive purity of maniand of Christianity, and giving an ideal representation of the art treasures of Rome, has this year received from Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. a tasteful, durable, and appropriate setting. Hawthorne's power of calling up scenes as pict-. ures before his eyes and entering so completely into the individuality of his characters that the action of his story flows naturally and inevitably more creative force than in this story, of which the essence is a mystery, which this great artist had the courage to leave unexplained. The mutual relations of the four characters who are made to represent the whole of society afford matter for infinite meditation. Miriam's rich ill-regulated nature, the white shining purity of Hilda's nature, Kenyon's noble well-balanced mind, and Donatello, the Faun, the fresh, free, sylvan man untouched by sin or crime, are original conceptions therefrom, is shown nowhere in his works with which present to each thoughtful reader a new set of meanings, according to his individuality. insight, or experience. The study of the Faun's nature embraces the whole question of sin and crime, their origin and distinction. This Romance of Monte Beni is the story of the fall of man repeated without advocating any theory. Hawthorne's poetry, imagination, purity, and delicacy indicate a plan of redemption, striking the key-note of pure, primitive Christianity-self-sacrifice born of unselfishness. "The Marble Faun" shows that after a sin, sudden and impulsive, a man may possibly reach a higher standard of moral excellence than he would have attained had he not transgressed. Hawthorne's other great works, "The Scarlet Letter" and "The House of the Seven Gables." were wrought from such scanty material that they show the rare quality of his genius even more strikingly. In his Italian story he has rich and abundant material. Aside from its great moral lessons, "The Marble Faun" contains a history of art and finished criticisms of some of the great art-works of the world.

It is this side of the book that has brought it before a large class of readers less interested in the study of human nature and the great eternal truths embodied in its pages. For years it has been the fashion for tourists on reaching Rome to read "The Marble Faun" and compare their own ideas about the noted masterpieces of antiquity with those of America's great novelist. After a time it became customary to buy copies of the great works described and to interleave the story with these pictures, and this has become so common that dealers in Rome and Florence make it their practice to keep such photographs arranged and ready for the traveller.

The publishers of Hawthorne's works have taken a hint from this well-established custom, and have prepared an edition of the work in two volumes, adding to the text the photogravures of fifty subjects, scenes, building, paintings, statues, and the like. Great care has been taken by these experienced and fastidious publishers in the choice of these photographs, and their selection is by no means a mere repetition of the dealer's choice. No pains have been spared to obtain the best, made directly from the objects. The publishers have thus given all lovers of art and letters an edition of Hawthorne's classic of more real and permanent value than if they had resorted to the usual method of employing artists to make original illustrations to the story.

These beautiful volumes are put into a binding of jacqueminot red and white with gold ornamentation and are protected by red covers and sold in a box. The publication is fully up to the best standard of the Riverside Press, which statement conveys to the initiated the fact that it is as perfectly made a book as the present state of book publishing makes possible.

florida Ways.

From "Florida Days." (Copyright 1889, by Little, Brewn & Co.)

THE city of Saint Augustine in Florida is the oldest city in the United States, having been settled by the Spanish in 1565. It was not till 1821 that the American flag supplanted that of the Spanish, and the city became an American cityan American city, however, only in name, for no change has occurred in its aspect in this century to make it other than the picturesque, neglected, slowly decaying Spanish town it had been for three previous centuries. This un-American physiognomy is perhaps its strongest attraction. The commonplace and monotony of prosperity find no place in it. American energy and enterprise having discovered no opening there for capital-except in the keeping of hotels. Hence it remains as time and nature made it-rich in a most delightful climate, in an abundance of flowers, fruits, and foliage, and in many interesting landmarks of the past. It is a Paradise for the traveller driven southward by the keen blasts of Northern winters, and a haven of peace and rest to the nervous, overworked business man flying from his kind.

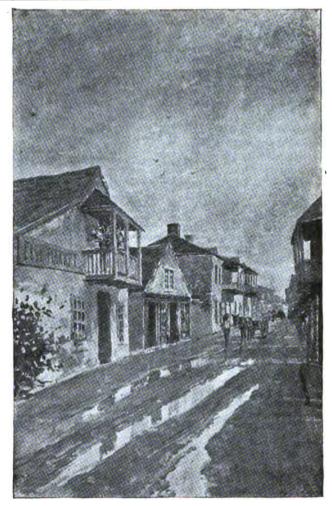

Mrs. Margaret Deland was happily tempted to go South and spend a few winter months in St. Augustine. The result of this visit is embodied in "Florida Days." One in search of information will not consult "Florida Days." It is no itinerary of travel, combining threadhare facts culled from an encyclopædia with mild personal adventures which interest no one. In place of the ordinary guide-book or diary, an exquisite collection of literary sketches of the people. the town, the sea, the sky, and the ruins is offered us, from the practised pen of a writer of exceptional gifts. The fine sense of rhythm so evident in "The Old Garden" makes itself felt in the author's descriptive passages, lending a color and music to the narrative that almost lifts it to the dignity of a poem.

The description is confined to the town of St. Augustine and to the banks of the St. John's River. The town is shown to us under just such aspects as a poet would view it - at daybreak, at noon, at night. Touched with the first gleam of light from the east, we see the coquina reef, Anastasia Island, and the old coquina lighthouse, and imagine Sir Francis Drake and his Spanish ships bearing down upon the defenceless inhabitants. By and by the brilliant sun stands directly over the old town; its streets are silent, its picturesque houses with their shady balconies are bathed in its hot noonday rays, and the air is heavy with the odors of orange and jessamine trees. Colored humanity sleeps in the shade, and a drowsy boy in an old broken down car does not object when his mule comes to a halt to bite a troublesome fly upon his shaggy side. The mysterious atmosphere of the night brings out new details for the poet's and the artist's eye to dwell upon. The sea-wall, the old moat, old Fort Marion, and other familiar points are the central figures in new pictures.

The descriptions of the woods and swamps along the St. John's River, with their strange inhabitants, afford fine material for the author's delicate wit and keen insight into human nature. The accounts of "a wash-foot Baptist meeting" and of the "Cracker" family in the woods illustrate especially Mrs. Deland's talent as a successful novel-writer. That insistent looking beneath the surface of things so characteristic of "John Ward, Preacher," is seen again in this fresh handling of an old subject. The "Cracker" as she presents him is a new psychological study.

The sweet restfulness of the book is, after all, its chief charm; as page after page is turned, our senses become steeped in the "dreamful ease" of "the lotus-eaters," and we feel indeed we are in

"A land
In which it seemed always afternoon."

The publishers, Little, Brown & Co., have given this volume a beautiful setting. All the romance of the text, is reproduced in Mr. Louis K. Harlow's graceful illustrations; besides the numerous smaller pictures scattered through the reading-matter, there are several full page designs in black and white, several printed in colors, and two graceful etchings; paper, print, and binding are rich and elegant.

The American Railway.

THE American is said to be the greatest traveller upon the face of the earth. Either his business or his pleasure takes him each year over an extent of territory that makes a journey entirely around the little British Isles a mere "summer outing" in comparison.

Railways are naturally a subject of interest to him. The history and extent of the road over which he travels, the probable risks he runs, or his immunity from danger, promise always most congenial reading. To have it proved to his sceptical mind (in figures, which never lie) that only one person in ten million is killed through accidents on railways—being a much smaller average than those who come to a fatal ending by falling out of windows—is consolatory and reassuring to a wonderful degree.

The occasional traveller who takes a trip from Boston to New York, or from New York to Philadelphia, or goes westward from any of these points to Chicago, fancies, with the natural conceit of man, that he knows something about railways. But even when the facts are placed before him, he but faintly realizes the immensity of the railway system in the United States. When told that there are one hundred and fifty thousand miles of railway, covering the length and breadth of the land, his mind fails to grasp the full significance of the figures. One hundred and fifty thousand miles of railway means three hundred thousand miles of rails, which are sufficient to make (welve steel girders for the earth's circumference. The bridges of these railways, if placed in line, would reach from New York to Liverpool, while the railways would reach more than half way to the moon. The number of persons employed in constructing, equipping, and operating these roads is said to be two millions, while the capital invested in them is computed at nine thousand millions of dollars.

A system so wide-spread in its interests, so deeply interwoven with all the events of our social and business life, so vast and so intricate, offered a topic of the richest possibilities to the magazines. The only wonder is that it was not till June of 1888 that this fertile soil was upturned. Then a series of articles was begun in Scribner's Magasine, which as they ran on proved to be a most comprehensive account of the construction, marvellous development, management, and appliances of American railways. The series attracted universal attention. Nothing like it had before been published. Not only the freshness of the subject, but the popular graphic style in which it was written gained for it many readers.

The articles comprised in this series, revised and expanded, and with many new illustrations added, are now offered in book-form by the Scribners, under the title of "The American Railway."

The work should be one of the most popular holiday volumes. Aside from its intrinsic value—for it is full of information and statistics—it possesses an element of romance that enchains the imagination of the "general" reader. The wonderful engineering feats in the deep casions and among the high mountains of the Pacific coast are as thrilling as any story Jules Verne ever told.

The articles show in logical sequence the lives of railroad men from president to firemen and trackwalkers. Each one has been written by a man eminent in the department he was asked to describe. The list of authors includes two railway presidents, two vice-presidents, a superintendent, two expert civil engineers, three editors, an ex-postmaster general, and a distinguished author and professor. As the titles of the articles best define the scope of the book, we give them as follows: "The Building of a Railway," by Thomas Curtis Clarke: "Feats of Railway Engineering," by John Bogart; "American Locomotives and Cars," by M. N. Forney; "Railway Management," by General E. P. Alexander; "Safety in Railroad Travel," by H. G. Prout; " Railway Passenger Travel," by General Horace Porter; "The Freight-car Service," by Theodore Voorhees: "How to Feed a Railway," by Benjamin Norton; "The Railway Mail Service." by Thomas L. James; "The Railway in its Business Relations." by Arthur T. Hadley; "The Prevention of Railway Strikes," by Charles Francis Adams; and "The Every-day Life of Railroad Men," by B. B. Adams, Jr. The volume has a special feature, completing it, in a series of statistical railway studies, geographically illustrated with maps and charts, showing railway development in the United States from 1830 to the present day. These important statistics have been gathered by Mr. Fletcher W. Hewes, the author of "Scribner's Statistical Atlas." Judge Thomas M. Cooley, chairman of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, furnishes the valuable introduction, treating of the relations of railway corporations to each other. A complete index makes the volume an easy one for reference.

From an artistic standpoint, likewise, praise may be liberally bestowed. The pictures are profusely scattered through the volume, and they are, with scarcely an exception, excellent. The best artists were employed to make them, and the best engravers to reproduce them. They are, besides being artistic, exceedingly characteristic—a great merit—as they really illustrate the text, making clear many points it might be difficult quite to realize without them. In respect to paper, type, binding, the work is an unusually handsome one

Northern Europe is wonderfully vivid. The motive which led to the preparation of this great work was the belief on the author's part that the generally accepted accounts of the early settlement of Britain by the Angles and Saxons were untrustworthy. The more he prosecuted his researches, the more he became convinced of the truth of his opinion that the forefathers of the English-speaking races were Scandinavian rather than Germanic in origin. The truth of Mr. Du Chaillu's conclusions must be left to experts. Whether they agree with the author or not, the value of the book is great, and Mr. Du Chaillu is a pioneer among American scholars in treating his vast subject. The task before him was to discover what were the laws, traditions, superstitions, customs, habits, and mode of life of the Norsemen. Mr. Du Chaillu's researches were carried on with characteristic ardor and thoroughness. He spent five years in Copenhagen making new and literal translations, with the aid of an accomplished Icelandic scholar, of the original Sagas there preserved, which unfolded a marvellously vivid and entertaining picture of the civilization of the North at this period. Then all the museums in the three kingdoms were studied and upwards of 1400 objects photographed which appear in the book. Mr. Du Chaillu wore out three secretaries in his unremitting labor. Charles Scribner's Sons issue the book in two luxuriously printed volumes, to which they give a sumptuous dress. The designs of the binding are noteworthy, but we have learned to expect original cover designs from this house. careful readers will follow Mr. Du Chaillu with ever-increasing fascination as he reconstructs for

At no time has there been a more general interest in all things Russian than at present. George Kennan has had as much to do with this awakening as any other writer, his daring invasion of Siberia and graphic descriptions of all he saw there, arousing a sympathy and curiosity for a people practically unknown to the ordinary reader at the beginning of the century. Russian literature, so extensively translated of late years, and so warmly admired, has placed us in touch handbooks of Russia, Poland, and Finland, of which he is the compiler. His style is animated, and his method of bringing his pictures before his readers bright and graphic.

This vast and wonderful country, stretching from Poland to Kamchatka, and from the Arctic Ocean to the "frosty Caucasus," and containing all varieties of climates, of peoples, and of degrees of civilization. is held in the iron grasp of a man who would probably exchange all his with the home life and political aspirations of this picturesque nation to a degree that renders all details concerning them eagerly welcomed.

The present volume, "Russian Pictures," is addressed to a popular audience. Like the previous volumes of the series—which have illustrated nearly all the great countries of Europe—it aims to present with pen and pencil the salient features of the Russian Empire and its inhabitants. Thomas Michell, whose name is on the title-page, seemed unusually well equipped for his work—as he had made a very thorough study of the subject in the preparation of Murray's earthly possessions for one hour of the sweet security of life his humblest subject enjoys. Ignorance, superstition, and degradation stand here side by side with the very highest culture. A barbaric splendor, a semi-savage richness of color and outline characterize its art and architecture, and an Oriental mysticism still clings to its religion. This immense nation, with its 109,000,000 of human beings, is certainly among the most interesting in the world. "Russian Pictures" not only affords a view of its many noted buildings and historic monuments, but tells us something of its inner life, its government and religion. An opening chapter sketches the development and consolidation of Russia down to the day of the reformer, Peter the Great. The journey then begins, the traveller entering the empire at Wirballen, a frontier station in Western Russia. From here he visits the chief cities from Novgorod to Tiflis, his attention being called to all their treasures of art, to the historical interests that cluster around them, or to any amusing or romantic stories connected with them or their inhabitants. Finland, Poland, and other Russian dependencies are also carefully treated.

With its fresh interest of subject, its wealth of pictures, and its neat, attractive binding, this should be a favorite holiday volume. (Thomas Nelson & Sons.)

The American Boldier.

During the last fifteen years, and especially during the last three, Americans have done more to revive and develop the early traditions of the country than had been done before through the whole period of our national life. We have revived nearly all the events connected with the origin and formation of the Federal government; we have searched the archives of the nation for authorities: we have reproduced in every possible form the events themselves. We have thus renewed American traditions, and created a custom by which they will be transmitted to our children and children's children in time to come. The effect of bringing our traditions up to date has been to awaken a fresh interest in American history, and books on this theme, which are written with adaptation to popular taste, and published in volumes within the means of the people, are sure of readers and buyers. Our own people have a keen appreciation of what is important in our national existence, and know they can best learn from the history of the men who made America what should be the aims and ideals of American citizens.

A writer who has done careful and hearty work in the direction of making his country's past real to his contemporaries, is Mr. Elbridge S. Brooks, whose "Story of the American Indian," "In Leisler's Times," and "Story of the American Sailor" are comprehensive narratives, embodying a vast deal of pertinent information. To these works, which have received commendation from leading authorities. Mr. Brooks this year adds "The Story of the American Soldier," in which he draws from the mass of material already in print the character and achievements of the fighting-man of America from the earliest times, and presents them in consecutive and connected narrative. The causes of the wars and the descriptions of the battles Mr. Brooks leaves to be studied in already existing histories, but he makes a study of the American soldier as an individual, for the enlightenment and inspiration of young and old Americans. Mr. Brooks has taken a photograph, as it were, of the fightingman of America, detached from the fuss and feathers of army routine and display.

Mr. Brooks recognizes the terrible necessity of war, and concedes that in the history of the world it has been alike civilizer, peacemaker, and uplifter, as well as the greatest exhibit of man's inhumanity to man. He also recognizes that through all the years that have witnessed the evolution of the American Republic the American soldier has been the prime factor in this evolution. "His valor has illumined history. his steadfastness has redeemed failure, and his loyalty has glorified success. It is for us as Americans to remember our debt to the heroes of Louisburg and Quebec, of Lexington and Saratoga and Yorktown, of Lundy's Lane and New Orleans, of Shiloh and Gettysburg and Appomattox. Without their efforts there would have been no nation of freemen with sons ready to defend its honor and its life, there would have been no America to need or to have a soldier." Mr. Brooks is a cultured literary man, and makes his text interesting and telling by apt quotations. Our old friends Hosea Biglow, Paul Revere, John Smith, Miles Standish, etc., are allowed to voice many of the points he makes. That he is also an experienced and honest book-maker is shown in the various carefully compiled lists and indexes that make this a useful volume of historical reference. There is a chronological table of the achievements of the American soldier, from 1622 to 1889; a schedule of the organization of the army; lists of the names of Secretaries of War and commanders of the armies of the United States since we became a nation; a list of the principal engagements of every important war in which American soldiers have fought; a bibliography of the best one hundred books on the American soldier, and a full, well-made index. The book is published by the D. Lothrop Co., who have been generous in matters of illustration, type, and binding. Patriotic young men will all enjoy this record of bravery and work in war and peace, beginning on the ramparts of the Indian Mound-Builders, and ending with the Centennial pageant of New York in 1880.

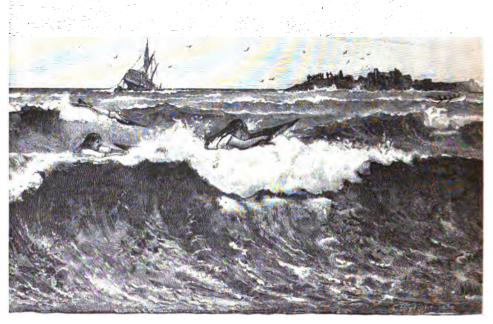

CHARGE OF STANNARD'S BRIGADE AT GETTYSBURG.

The Wreck of the Grephound.

DR. C. M. NEWELL, an old-time whaleman, who two years ago gave us in "The Voyage of the Fleetwing" innumerable facts about whales and whale-fights, has prepared a new romance, introducing some of our old friends and giving us instructive descriptions of the East India merchant service a generation back. The hero, Captain Lawrence, is the adopted brother of Nellie Lawrence, of Fleetwing fame. This ship, the Greyhound, an English merchant vessel, succeeds in running down the most dreaded pirate of the Indian seas, its commander falling by the hand of the pious old black whaleman. Uncle Joe Bailey. Captain Lawrence is almost killed by a blow given by the pirate king-after his head had literally been severed from his body-and is taken in charge by the Admiral of the English fleet, stationed in Indian waters, and carefully nursed through a long convalescence by his trusted shipmates. The Admiral's niece, Lady Lucie Seymour, "daughter of a hundred earls," loses her heart to the gallant American skipper at first sight, and meets with no opposition except from the wife of the dead pirate, a Spanish donna. This ular books.

lady also loves the Captain, stupefies him with the aroma of flowers, steals him at night, and carries him away in her own ship. When almost overcome by enemies this lady warrior concludes to blow up her own ship, but her heart prompts her to give Captain Lawrence a chance to swim away. She goes down among her warriors, leaving a tender memory in the Captain's heart, which prompts him to christen his second daughter Aloata. The Greyhound is wrecked in a storm while Captain Lawrence is a prisoner, but he is released in time to rescue the Earl of St. Clare and his lady-love, Lady Lucia, from her seaswept cabins. The descriptions are exciting. The most romantic girl will be satisfied with the love-scenes, and the most seasoned tar with the sea-fight and wreck. At the end, the Captain is knighted for bravery and help to English ships. and the closing chapters give pictures of English prosperity enlivened by visits from old American friends. "The Wreck of the Greyhound" is, of course, published by De Wolfe, Fiske & Co., of Boston, who have issued all Dr. Newell's pop-

RESCUED ON SURFBOARDS.

From "In a Fair Country." (Copyright, 1889, by Lee & Shepard.)

In a Fair Conntrn.

The new volume in shining cloth of gold prepared by Miss Irene E. Jerome, and issued by Messrs. Lee & Shepard, for the holiday season is known as "In a Fair Country." It is a larger work than "One Year's Sketch-Book," "Nature's Hallelujah," or "A Bunch of Violets," that is, it is thicker, containing many more pages of text, and also a larger number of plates. In its general appearance and artistic arrangement, however, it is very similar to these deservedly popular gift-books.

A happy inspiration prompted Miss Jerome this year to take several of Thomas Wentworth Higginson's outdoor essays as a basis for illustration. They abound in delightful descriptions of the life of the fields and woods that this artist has shown so marked a talent in depicting. This rich suggestion she has very successfully realized. The essays embodied in the volume are "April Days," " My Outdoor Study," " Water-Lilies," "The Life of Birds," "The Procession of the Flowers," and "Snow." Fiftyfive full-page plates of wood-engraved designs adorn the text. The first paper is illustrated with many charming evidences of the early New England spring-apple orchards in bloom, sprays of the trailing arbutus and blue anemone, sketches of "birds and the ash-leaved maple," "a little platoon of hepaticus," and "blue-birds and apple-boughs." Then follow in harmony with Mr. Higginson's poetical narrative exquisite landscapes—" miles of silence, still waters and green shores," a magic vista of lake and mountain. Many designs of flowers—the white corydalis, the pink lady-slipper, and the yellow daisy, harebells and cowslips—pages of water-lilies, and winter scenes of deep snow, animated with the tiny snow-bird, complete the series of pictures.

The "fair country" is in the neighborhood of the Concord River, made famous by Thoreau and Emerson. The many scenic surprises of the winding stream, the lofty hills and fertile valleys of "beautiful Camden" have found in Miss Jerome an enthusiastic student. The many admirers of her former works will rejoice in this. The old poetry and refined fancy pervade every design—no one picture being simply a picture, that is, a slavish sketch of tree or sky or field, but a whole poem in itself. The essays are a great acquisition. They have a special literary charm, written as they are by one of our foremost writers, apart from being accurate descriptions of Nature and her feathered inhabitants.

Illnstrated Poems.

MANY charming remembrances of the season may be looked for among the illustrated editions of favorite poems that in rich and tasteful bindings adorn the booksellers' shelves. Wordsworth, Tennyson, that brilliant Irishman, Samuel Lover, and a few others of lesser note, have had selections from their wealth of writings used as the basis of very beautiful gift-books.

Those who love Wordsworth-and they are many-love him with an unquestioning devotion that admits of no criticism. Everything from his pen is delightful, and is reserved for many repeated readings in quiet hours. He is at his best in his descriptions of nature, his uneventful, studious life lending itself to reflection and observation. "Melodies from Nature" (Lothrop) is a collection of his most characteristic poems The selection was made by Mrs. in this line. Blackall, and illustrated by Hiram Barnes. Some of the most famous bits of English scenery in the delightful Lake Country that his pen has immortalized, or in the shadow of the Westmoreland Hills, to which his daily life has given a special interest, are reproduced in the designs.

Tennyson's poem, "The Miller's Daughter," which so happily pictures a faithful, tranquil, domestic love, and in which are enshrined those two lovely lyrics, "Love that hath us in his net" and "It is the miller's daughter," is presented in a new setting. In a dainty, tasteful binding of dark blue and silver are enclosed the designs of Harry Fenn, Garrett, J. Appleton Brown, and other famous artists, illustrating this poem. The pictures reflect the poetry of the narrative, and are notably well engraved and printed. Although but a small, unpretending octavo, this is one of the best-made and one of the most artistic books of the season. (Lippincott.)

"The Low-Back'd Car," by Samuel Lover, should have a popular success. William Ma-

grath's illustrations reproduce the Irish sentiment of the song with much humor. Lover was a versatile genius, who did many things well. He achieved renown as a novelist, as a dramatist, as a poet, and as an artist. In no one of these lines does his fame promise to live longer than as the song-writer of Ireland. The charms of "Sweet Peggy," as he wrote of her, and as Mr. Magrath has materialized her, are handsomely set forth. (Lippincott.)

Mrs. M. B. M. Toland, who has had a number of her narrative poems illustrated, offers a new one for consideration this year-" Legend Laymone." The scene of this poem is laid in California, in the early days of the Franciscan missions. The many opportunities it offers for illustration have been taken advantage of. page pictures, printed with unusual care and clearness, are shown from designs by Mowbray, Church, Maud Humphrey, Hamilton Gibson, and others. Some novel decorations in the text, from designs modelled in clay by John J. Boyle, are a special feature. This volume and the other Christmas books of the Lippincott Co. are not only exquisitely gotten up in all their details of paper, print, etc., but appear in bindings which deserve special praise for the charming simplicity and elegance of their designs.

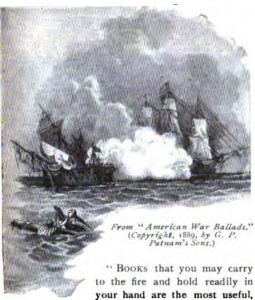

A pretty quarto, "The Wooing of Grand-mother Grey," by Kate Tannatt Woods, is a graceful idyl of old New England life and character. The poem is the narrative of Grandmother Grey, in the dialect of other days, telling of her courtship and marriage. The pictures have a flavor of Christmas, and of the frost and snow of winter holidays. They are from designs by Charles Copeland, and are characteristic of the story, from the opening picture of Grandmother Grey sitting in her arm-chair by the blazing logs in the open fireplace. Some Wainty Books.

after all," asserted gruff Samuel Johnson, more than a hundred years ago, and no one has yet shown a disposition to contradict him. When to the handy shape of a book are added the accessories of good paper and print and a tasteful binding, how much must the reader's pleasure be enhanced in communing with his favorite author. All true book-lovers love a dainty book—not a luxurious book, "too bright and good for human nature's daily food," or the occasional seclusion of an old coat-pocket—but one so deftly and compactly made that the eye delights to look upon it, while the hand may caress it tenderly, without fear of spoiling it.

Charming new editions of works that are being counted among the classics are notable features of the season.

Oliver Wendell Holmes' "Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table" (Houghton) is entirely worthy of the new form in which it is issued. This masterpiece is a historical volume in American literature. The new edition, printed from new plates, is in two sixteenmo tasteful volumes. The author's cheery philosophy and crystalline wit take on a new charm in their new surroundings. The simple elegance of the binding design and the graceful decorative borders of the new title-pages are to be credited to Mrs. Henry Whitman.

Older friends even than "The Autocrat" are Ik Marvel's "Reveries of a Bachelor" and "Dream Life." The Cameo Edition, as the present issue is named, takes its title from the decoration on the front cover, a white cameo head set in a pink medallion. To forty years back may be traced the advent of "The Reveries of a Bachelor." Its sentiment, its warmth and tenderness won it a lasting place with cultivated readers. By an odd coincidence Donald Grant Mitchell is identified with the beginning of Harper's Monthly, in somewhat the same manner as Dr. Holmes is with the Atlantic. The first "Reverie" was reprinted from the Southern Literary Messenger, for which it was written, in one of the early numbers of the first volumes of Harper's, through the request of the then editor. Mr. Henry I. Raymond. When the papers appeared in book-form. Charles Scribner's Sons became Mr. Mitchell's publishers, and have continued to be to the present, through many prosperous years for author and publishers. "Dream Life," which followed a year or two after "The Reveries," continued the dreamy, poetical, introspective pictures of the former work. Added to the author's exceptionally beautiful style is an exceptionally refined and correct English that it is a "liberal education" to study. Mr. Percy Moran furnishes a delicately etched frontispiece to each volume.

The new volumes in the Knickerbocker Nuggets Series (Putnam) cover a diversified field. "American War Ballads and Lyrics" (2 vols.), edited by George Cary Eggleston, comprises a selection of the most noteworthy ballad poetry produced during the Colonial period, the Indian Wars, the Revolution, the War of 1812-14, and the Mexican and the Civil Wars. "Songs of Fairy Land" is an attractive selection of verses compiled by Edward T. Mason, with many graceful illustrations from designs by Maud Humphrey. They include also: "Tales by Heinrich Zschokke," "The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin," and "The Boyhood and Youth of Goethe." in two volumes, which comprise the first thirteen books of his "Autobiography," and "The Garden," edited by Walter Howe.

From "Ballads of Fairyland." (Copyright, 1889, by G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

The Nuggets obtained such a wide sale that they are followed by a series called Literary Gems—tiny books of about four inches in length, containing tales, essays, poems, and other literary productions which have stood the tests of time. Already in pretty flexible morocco bindings, adorned each with a new photogravure, have been issued Arnold's "Sweetness and Light," Curtis' "Our Best Society," Drake's "Culprit Fay," Poe's "Gold Bug," Goldsmith's "Good-Natured Man," and Brown's "Rab and His Friends."

The Westall Series (Stokes) of classics has a special claim to attention under this grouping, as it is one upon which great care has been bestowed in the manufacture. The volumes are 16mo, in various bindings. The series so far embraces "The Poems of Oliver Goldsmith," Thomson's "Seasons," and "The Vicar of Wakefield." The Riverside Aldine Series is another tasteful literary series of choice books. Thoreau's "Walden" and Hawthorne's "Gray Champion, and other stories," are brought out in it this season in specially tasteful form and style.

Several new and exceedingly pretty volumes of poetry are delightful specimens of book-making. Any one of them is a most desirable gift. The Vignette Edition of Owen Meredith's "Lucile' (Stokes) is rich in graceful little sketches from the pencil of Frank N. Gregory. The strong human interest in this poetic romance has gathered to it readers by the thousands. The charming form in which it now appears is not the least of its attractions. Other editions of poems, in smooth bindings and with dainty pages, are "Interludes, Lyrics, and Idyls," from the works of Tennyson, and "Ballads, Lyrics, and Sonnets," from Longfellow. Each volume embraces a selection of the most popular and best known of the poet's shorter poems.

"Winter evenings-the world shut out, the gentle Shakespeare enters." To make his acquaintance anew, or to learn for the first time to know and love him, suggests delightful occupation for the days and nights of pleasantness and ease the Christmas holidays are expected to bring. Dainty red-line editions of his works in pretty, dainty boxes are among the most charming of presents. Two publishers offer new handyvolume sets of Shakespeare, tiny volumes of about five inches in length. The Bedford Edition (Warne), named from the location of the large London establishment of F. Warne & Co. on Bedford St., Strand, is comprised in twelve vol-Shakespeare's "Dramatic Works and Poems," with a life by J. Talford Blair (Armstrong) comes in eight volumes. Both editions are excellent in print and paper, and come bound in various styles.

A new red-line edition of William Words-worth's "Poetical Works" (Armstrong), similar in size and style to the Shakespeare by the same publisher, will rejoice the hearts of the admirers of this poet. All of his tender, graceful verses are comprised in the eight little volumes of this new edition.

Library Editions of Standard Fiction.

In selecting books for Christmas presents, one is apt to overlook the wide field in standard fiction from which a choice may be made. Even the scientist or the theologian has his favorite novel, and few members of an ordinary household but adore Dickens, Thackeray, George Eliot, or some other of the great and famous writers of novels. This year a number of sets of novels in excellent type and substantial bindings claim attention.

To be made the possessor of a complete set of Thackeray with Thackeray's own inimitable illustrations would seem to fill any one's cup of happiness full to overflowing. And yet this is one of the possibilities which may be dreamt of, as it is an acquisition within the limits of a not very plethoric purse. The new Illustrated Library Edition (Houghton), just completed, is one of the best for the price asked. The paper and print are excellent, the edges are uncut, the binding is simple but tasteful, and on every pageappear the old comical pictures belonging to the early English editions. The edition is unique, too, in the following features: it gathers in many shorter literary sketches of Thackeray never before offered in book-form, and gives a series of biographical and bibliographical introductions to each volume, rich in rare personal information regarding the evolution of the various novels. To know Becky Sharp, the Marquis of Steyne, George Warrington, Colonel Newcome, Major Pendennis, and Henry Esmond is to know the most famous characters in fiction, and to have laid a most excellent foundation for future reading.

Dr. Samuel Warren, although he never wrote but one novel, has impressed himself upon contemporary English literature almost as strongly as Thackeray. While many readers are familiar with the strange legal firm of "Quirk, Gammon & Snap" and with the odd name of "Tittlebat Titmouse," many do not know that these are the leading characters in "Ten Thousand a Year," a strong English novel, dealing with the power possessed by money in ruling English society, and rich in many interesting legal points, brilliantly illustrated from the author's own experience as a barrister. Since the first publication of this work in 1841, a good library edition has been asked for. The new edition that Little, Brown & Co. have put upon the market fully fills this want. It is in four 12mo volumes and possesses an etched portrait of the author and his valuable legal notes.

Walter Besant's novels (Harper) have been honored with a new edition. They belong to an excellent class of fiction. The author's witty style gives a keen relish to his strong pictures of English life on sea and on land, in the country and in the great cities.

This, with the edition of the novels of Walter Besant and James Rice, written in collaboration, that Dodd, Mead & Co. publish, will form a complete set of a line of fiction that has few equals in the freshness and originality of its separate works, and in the intense human interest which characterizes every plot.

The growing desire for literary translations of some of the classics in French fiction—so strongly evinced in the eager demand for Miss Wormeley's translation of Balzac-has found fruit in new editions of the principal works of Victor Hugo, Dumas, and George Sand. This is a significant group, representing as many different classes of fiction and the leading French writers of the present century. "Consuelo" is one of George Sand's most celebrated works. It is a wonderful combination of truth and fiction, of art and pas-

(4 v.). The former includes "Marguerite de Valois," "La Dame de Monsoreau," and "The Forty-Five." Many historical portraits illustrate this set, while "The Count of Monte Cristo" is illustrated with eight photogravures from the original designs by Edmund H. Garrett. These fascinating romances are, in their present shape, given unabridged, not one of the thrilling incidents of the original narrative being omitted; the translations have also been carefully compared with the original works. Victor Hugo's "Nôtre-Dame de Paris," in one octavo volume (Estes), is true to the original text. gives this work its first value. It is nevertheless a delightful romance of Paris in the 15th century.

Another French romance that has a reputation as a classic is Count Alfred De Vigny's "Cinq-Mars." For many years it has been out of print, but now appears again in a very beautiful new edition in two volumes, adorned with etchings and many text illustrations. (Little, Brown & Co.) The excellent translation made by William Hazlitt of this brilliant story of a conspiracy under Louis XIII. has been used. This is the source, it should be remembered, from whence Bulwer gleaned the greater part of the material for his celebrated play of "Richelieu."

"War and Peace," the most valuable of Tolsto's novels, claims attention in a new dress. Crowell has issued it in a new four-volume edition. The translation by Nathan Haskell Dole is new and has been made directly from the Russian. From a wonderfully painted view of Napoleon's campaign in Russia, the writer draws a vigorous moral upon the horrors of war. It is, then, as one may judge, a novel both of a historic and a philosophic interest.

Art-Works-Etchings and Photograpures.

ETCHING and photogravure, photo-etching and photo-aquarelle, have so largely taken the place of wood engraving as a means of illustration, that many of the more artistic, as well as the more expensive works, fail to find representation among our specimen illustrations. Not only does the impossibility, with our limited time and means, stand in the way of any fairly adequate representation of such works, but the size of the plates—almost invariably running beyond a quarto—prevents any thought of including them within the compass of our modest pages.

The larger and more notable works of this class published this season and gathered together here are well worthy of consideration. The individuality of the artist, his subject, the claims of special schools, epochs, or countries, and one's own studies or caprices, enter so much into the selection of art-works that no one can with absolute certainty make a satisfactory choice for another. Our part is simply that of guide, our occupation ending when we have described the individual characteristics of volumes.

Etching as practised by great artists is as distinct an art as painting and sculpture. The inspiration of the subject as well as the perfection with which its mechanical details are carried out, count in estimating its value. "Etchings" (Dodd, Mead & Co.) offers twenty-five examples of the work of the foremost modern etchers, the majority of whom are painters-all having worked from conceptions of their own, in place of making a slavish copy of another's ideas. Such great French names as Detaille and Lepage figure among the contributors-Italy and America being represented by names equally well-known and famous. Another folio of equal value is "Famous Etchers" (Estes & Lauriat). Noted European and American etchers to the number of twenty display their skill in handling the needle. The spirit and variety of the collection is quite notable.

Out of a collection of nearly fifty etchings owned by the publishers (Stokes) ten have been issued in book-form for the holidays under the title of "Selected Etchings." Again we have purely original art in the designs and in the etchings. This is a very representative national series, as the artists are all Americans, either by birth or adoption, as Church, St. John Harper, Stephen J. Ferris, Stephen Parrish, Van Elten. Lucile," "A Lily Pond," and "The Return of the Wanderer," three most popular etchings, show somewhat the character of the selection. Ripley Hitchcock describes the plates in charming text.

Photogravure is one of the best of modern the most elegant in its appearan processes when rightly applied. It reproduces, claiming the attention of buyers.

in an almost perfect manner, the original outlines, shadows, and high-lights. "Modern American Art" (Nims & Knight) is a specimen of photogravure of unusual excellence. Paintings and statuary by Carroll Beckwith, W. M. Chase, George Inness and others of familiar name are very beautifully reproduced. The biographical form of the text-written by Ripley Hitchhcock-and the limits of the collection make the work a most interesting study. The wonderful success of American artists in Paris is reflected in "Goupil's Paris Salon of 1889" (Estes & Lauriat), a work in photogravure giving specimens of the prize paintings of this year's Salon. Our own artists gained many prizes, their work consequently occupying a prominent part of the volume. In strength, originality, and poetic conception the collection is so remarkable as to attract special attention. The critical and descriptive text supplied by George Lafenestre, Conservator of the Louvre, is translated by Henry Bacon. "Selected Paintings from the Paris Exhibition. 1889" (Gebbie & Co.), is an American reproduction, done in photogravure by the Gebbie-Husson process, in the same line. "Salon Celebrities" (Estes & Lauriat) is a selection of ten of the favorite pictures exhibited at the Paris Salon. The photogravures were executed by Goupil & Co. The best paintings of modern English painters are exhibited through photo-etchings in "Recent English Art" (Estes & Lauriat). "Life and Nature" is a series of photogravures from original studies, by George B. Wood, and "Gems of Art" includes twelve photogravures from paintings of Bougereau, Meissonier, Corot. and others. These latter works are quarto size. and are issued by Nims & Knight.

"Fac-similes of Aquarelles by American Artists" (Stokes) is, we think, the first important work of this description ever published here. It reproduces in extra large folio form, and with remarkable perfection, a series of watercolor studies by prominent artists. The brilliancy and transparency so characteristic of water-colors is admirably retained in the facsimiles. The subjects are delicate and poetical, and suited to the style of water-colors. "A Spring Pasture," by W. Hamilton Gibson, and "Dandelion Time" are particularly lovely. An important essay, by Ripley Hitchcock, on "Water-Color Painting in America" forms the text and is beautifully printed, having set in it portraits in black and white of the artists and vignette sketches by them. The work is one of the most novel in its illustrations and one of the most elegant in its appearance of the many Lonisa Man Alcott.

THE biography of Louisa M. Alcott, edited by her life-long friend, Ednah D. Cheney, from her autobiographical papers, has been added to the uniform edition of her works published by Messrs, Roberts Bros. These papers cover the years from 1843, when Miss Alcott was ten years old, to the last winter of her busy life, 1887-8. and Mrs. Cheney has prefaced them by an introduction drawn from the papers of Mr. Alcott and his wife. Few women writers have been so universally beloved and so generally admired as Miss Alcott. From her father, Bronson Alcott, the sage of Concord, who was buried on the day of her death, she inherited her bright intellect, quick perception, and clear reasoning, while she derived from her mother, to whom the family mainly owed its support until the second daughter became breadwinner, the practical qualities lacking in her father-the sweet womanly tenderness and devotion, the loving sympathy for every human being, and the keen sense of humor which has made her writings so cheery, sunny, and helpful to two generations of young people and almost in equal measure to their fathers and mothers. Miss Alcott, the second daughter in a family whose actual life was almost a romance, was born in 1832. She was an active, enthusiastic child, who was always getting into scrapes through her frankness and lack of policy, but always making friends by her warm-heartedness and generosity. She devoured books and began writing as her chief amusement when little more than eight years old.

The uncommon powers of mind and heart that the lives of all good men and women, distinguished her were not accidental, but the accumulated result of the lives of generations of strong men and women. She was well born, and she passed her life surrounded by great thinkers. and was the special pet of men like Emerson. Thoreau, and Theodore Parker. Her journals are full of pictures of the life of her day in the little, classic Concord where she worked so hard to earn a few comforts for the family to whom she was so tenderly devoted. For years Miss Alcott was obliged to turn out quick work of a selling kind to keep the pot boiling, but she never made herself any false ideas about the merit of these earlier literary efforts, and as soon as feasible turned her talent to its best uses. All her previous training and experience were needed to fit her for the production of her masterpiece. "Little Women." One of the greatest charms of this healthy story for healthy girls is its perfect truth to New England life, and yet the sweet story touches the universal human heart so deeply that it has been translated into as many languages as "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

To have endeared one's self to two generations of children, and to have moulded their minds by wise counsel in attractive form, has insured to Miss Alcott the lasting gratitude of all who have the welfare of young people at heart. Her publishers have ready a uniform edition of her books in twenty-six volumes, and it would be hard to suggest a better foundation for a girl's library than these stories of the pleasures and heartaches, dreams and ambitions and great possibilities of the lives of all good men and women.

Sheridan's Rivals.

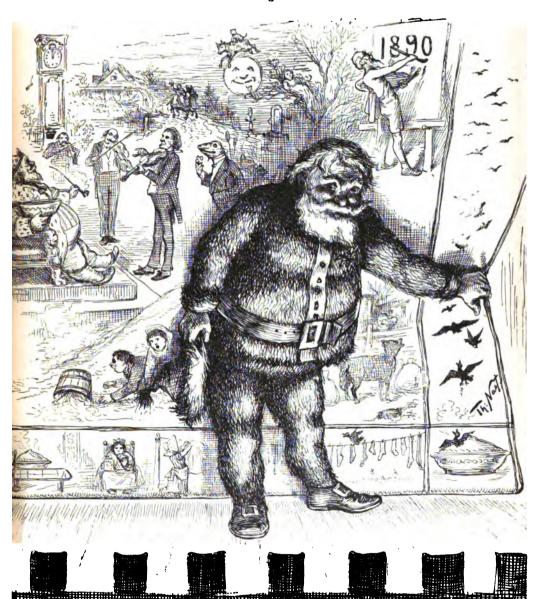

WHAT delightful reminiscences cluster around the name of "The Rivals." What nights of laughter are recalled as we listened to the brilliant scintillations of wit, such only as Sheridan could write, that flowed from the lips of Mrs. John Drew, Joseph Jefferson, the late John Gilbert, and recently W. J. Florence, in their personifications of its chief characters. Voluble Mrs. Malaprop, with her "nice derangement of epitaphs," the valiant Bob Acres, the vain and guileless squire, with his odd oaths and immortal axiom-"dams have had their day "-Sir Anthony Absolute, the choleric, warm-hearted old father of a past generation, and gallant Sir Lucius O'Trigger with his Irish ease and assurance, all have a place in the memory as fixed and indelible as any of Shakespeare's immortal conceptions.

An illustrated edition of Sheridan's sparkling play is one of the events of the season. Mr. Frank M. Gregory, late Secretary of the Salmagundi · Club, and the successful illustrator of the edition of Goethe's "Faust," brought out last year, has prepared an exquisite series of illustrations for this popular play. The leading designs are five full-page pictures, originally done in water-colors and reproduced in fac-simile by the photo-aquarelle process. They are beautifully made, and have all the clearness of color and artistic finish of the originals. They represent "Bob Acres" in the duelling scene, "Captain Absolute's Lodgings," "Sir Anthony Absolute and Mrs. Malaprop," "Sir Lucius O'Trigger dictating the challenge," and "Mrs. Malaprop and Lydia." In addition to the colored plates there are nearly fifty sketches in black and white portraying the numerous amusing situations of the play:

As few plays produced of late years in the United States have been found to possess the drawing power of Sheridan's "Rivals," we think it safe to predict for this artistic souvenir of chef-d'œuvre a holiday run of many consecutions. White & Allen are the publishers.

THE preceding pages describe and illustrate in detail several of the most notable of the holiday books. The following is a more complete descriptive summary, covering the general field, and noting the new books and some of the standards of the several publishers, arranged in their alphabetical order. To them we are indebted for the many illustrations which adorn these pages and suggest more fully the books of the year.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY offer an illustrated gift-book in "Golden Thoughts in Pea and Pencil," consisting of selected thoughts from favorite authors, and illustrations tastefully chosen to brighten the pages. Miss Helen P. Strong, whose "Garment of Praise" proved a success last season, has this year prepared "Rays of Light," a little monotint volume that shows the old taste and the benefit of experience; and the Society also makes some pretty booklets.

A. C. Armstrong & Son have ready a pretty new Cabinet Red-Line Edition of "Wordsworth's Poetical Works" which cannot fail to please the most fastidious admirers of this poet and to the attractions of which we have devoted space elsewhere. It is uniform with their edition of "Shakespeare's Dramatic Works," which have made welcome Christmas gifts in former years. A true book-lover, if you own such among your friends, will be made perfectly happy by the second series of "The Book-Worm," an illustrated treas-ury of old-time literature, or by the new volume in the Book-Lovers' Library telling "How to Catalogue a Library," a subject on which there are as many opinions as on the bringing up of children. Ainger's edition of "Charles Lamb's Works" is now completed with the issue of "The Tales from Shakespeare," by Charles and Mary Lamb, and thus a complete edition of this genial author's works is really brought within the means of many of his admirers. Besides these volumes, specially adapted for holiday gifts, this house has a long line of religious works that should be examined in choosing joy-giving keepsakes for fa-, vorite pastors, Sunday-school teachers, and lovers of books of standard literary taste.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR Co. publish a sturdy volume that will delight the heart of any good housekeeper in town or country. "Blakelee's Industrial Cyclopedia" not only treats fully of the use and care of tools, and shows how to make and mend an endless variety of useful articles, but also points out how to do thousands of things not requiring tools, such as mixing paints, managing teams, caring for farm stock and poultry, storing hay, grain, and vegetables, harvesting a corn crop, caring for furs, leather, lamps, and glass articles, butter and cheese making, pork packing, canning, preserving, and the like, without end. The housewife has a department of her own, and the boys and girls are also fully cared for in all their multiform, every-day interests. There is a copious index to all these stores of information and upwards of two hundred illustrations make the directions clear.

A. S. BARNES & Co. call attention to their "Three Germanies," by ex-United States Minister Theodore S. Fay, which would make a valuable gift to a friend's library. This work makes a good and readable history of Germany to the present day. During the fourteen years of the author's residence abroad Germany changed from a confederation of little states to one of the great empires of Europe, and Mr. Fay has described the details of this political transformation very happily. The work is in two handsome wolumes. Mrs. Lamb's "History of New York City" is always a gift of enduring walue.

Burrows Bros. have made a beautiful giftbook of Blackmore's "Lorna Doone," a full description of which is given in our front pages.

ROBERT CARTER & BROS., although they publish no "gift-book" of the kind designated by quotation marks, have on their list a line of publications that are most suitable to go to in choosing gifts for clergymen and religious teachers. Matthew Henry's" Bible Commentary," although it has entered its second century, is still pronounced by Dr. Cuyler, Dr. W. M. Taylor, and the great preacher Spurgeon to hold its own among all the younger expositors. This work can be had in three, in five, or in nine volumes at a great reduction on former prices. Many of Spurgeon's helpful thoughts are collected in volumes issued by this house; and many biographies of preachers and missionaries would make inspiring presents to young earnest-minded theological students and friends.

CASSELL & Co.'s "Magazine of Art for 1889" forms the ninth volume of the new enlarged series, and contains about five hundred beautiful illustrations, including litho and tint plates and photogravures, the American art notes for the year, and many special papers devoted to the progress of American art and industries. Tennyson's "Song of the Brook" has been many times illustrated, but never perhaps with more satisfactory results than in the volume now made with reproductions in monotones of drawings by Wedworth Wadsworth. Each stanza has an ornamental initial of ingenious design, and following it is a full-page illustration. It is not often that one finds lithography used to such good advantage as it is in this volume, which is handsomely bound in a cover of rich but undemonstrative beauty.

young Russian artist who died in Paris in 1884 at the age of twenty-three, which has attracted the admiring attention of the foremost critics of Europe, has just been issued in handsome shape. The translation has been made by Mrs. Mary J. Serrano. A portrait of Mile. Bashkirtseff and "New Zealand After Fifty Years," by Edward Wakefield, has the merit of being full of information and highly interesting. The author, a relative of Edward Gibbon Wakefield, the founder of the colony, possesses a thorough knowledge of his subject, and writes clearly and in good style. Numerous illustrations make it a handsome giftbook, particularly interesting to Englishmen. A handsome volume is also made of "The Rivers of Great Britain" in their historical and pictorial aspects. The journal of Marie Bashkirtseff, a reproductions from her paintings, now owned by the Luxembourg Gallery, accompany this edition. All the well-known art-books of this house are once more made ready for a new holiday season.

THE CENTURY Co. have no distinctively Christmas gift-book, but have in the now completed "Life of William Lloyd Garrison" a history of the anti-slavery movement in America that will be a coveted addition to the shelves of a historian. It is the most important biography issued for many years. The first two volumes were published in 1885 and the concluding two are up to their high standard in illustrations, press-work, binding, and all that goes to make a standard library book. A valuable gift for any friend would be a subscription to the Century Magasine for 1890, of which the bound volumes for 1889 show the vast amount of reading this beautiful periodical furnishes every year.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have not prepared a regular gift-book this season, but have ready some foreign novels, in sets that will delight literary friends. The new translation of Tolstol's "War and Peace" is noted at length elsewhere. "Vic-tor Hugo's Novels," in an eight-volume Library Edition, to be sold only in sets, contains all the illustrations of the more expensive edition. "The Cambridge Book of Poetry and Song," edited by Charlotte F. Bates, is ready in a new and revised edition, with new matter and all the old attractions of illustration and binding; and all the extensive list of "Crowell's Poets" are again ready in the Woodbine, the Sparrow, and in the flexible seal leather editions. A dainty little volume, specially suitable for friends recently visited by death or other sorrows, is "Ad Lucem," containing brief selections in prose and verse from St. Augustine, St. Chrysostom, Jeremy Taylor, Luther, Wordsworth, Clough, Longfellow, and others, for the consolation of the "afflicted or distressed in mind, body, or estate."

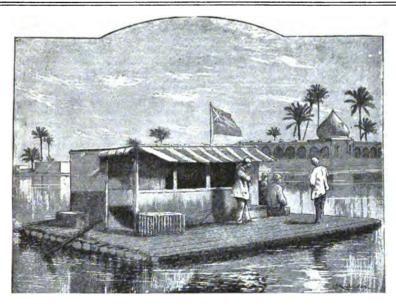

DE WOLFE, FISKE & Co. now have on their list the handsome illustrated works of W. H. H. Murray, and welcome gifts may be made of his "Daylight Land," "Adirondack Tales," "How Deacon Tubman Kept Christmas," "Adirondack Adventures," and "Deacons." Mrs. Sally Pratt McLean's books, always popular and always fresh and pleasing, are also now published by this firm. "The Wreck of the Greyhound," by Dr. C. M. Newell, author of "The Voyage of the Fletwing" and "The Isle of Palms," is fully described in our front pages. Particular attention is called to "Ancestral Tablets," a collection of diagrams for pedigrees, so arranged that eight generations of ancestors may be recorded in a connected and simple form.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have not thrown their energies as heavily as usual into their arrangements for fine art books, but make a tempting show of works of standard value and lasting interest. Their one strictly artistic work is a reprint of Halévy's "Abbé Constantin," with illustrations by Madeleine Lemaire, which have been carefully reproduced from the edition de luxe published in Paris, a beautiful work which the house may well be proud to put upon the market. Any student of the history of New York will be eager to get "The Diary of Philip Hone," edited by Bayard Tuckerman, written by one of the few men of his time who had leisure to keep a diary and who has made posterity his debtor by the valuable record of the political and social life of New York, from 1828 to 1851, a mine of information to the student of history and of exquisite delight to those who here listen to the small-talk of their grandmothers. Just as valuable to the student of English history is the volume of the "Letters of the Duke of Wellington to Miss J.," covering the years of 1834-1851. At the time this strange correspondence opened, the Iron Duke was sixtyfive years old. Miss J. was of a deeply devotional nature, and felt called upon to do a great work, and in looking around for a field for her energies "The Manremembered the hero of Waterloo. ners and Customs of the Ancient Egyptians," by Sir J. Gardner Wilkinson, in three volumes and with many illustrations, will be welcome in their current excellent edition. Several works of fiction deserve mention from the celebrity of their authors or the elegance of the edition. "Consuelo," the great work of George Sand's young life, in the fine edition it has now been put into, is noticed elsewhere in this issue. "Feet of Clay," by Miss Amelia E. Barr, and "Taken Alive, and other stories," by the late E. P. Roe, are both books that can be added to friends' sets of these popular writers. Specially adapted for Christmas reading are "Emmanuel," a story of the Messiah, by William Forbes Cooley, and "Palestine," a story of exploration, by Major Conder. Another book of exploration is "The Life of John Davis," the initial volume by Clements R. Markham in a series of Great Explorers and Explorations, which gives the life of this brave navigator of the end of the sixteenth century.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have a gift-book of artistic quality and absolute charm in "Little a portfolio of seven colored designs or studies of various nationalities, by Mrs. F. Brun-There are a little German girl, a Japanese, a tearful, naughty little school-girl, an Italian girl with her tambourine, a little Norwegian nursing her cat, a pretty, coquettish French girl, and a sleepy girl in her night-gown on the way to bed with her candle in one hand and her sleepy puppy in the other. In each the expression is admirably individualized, the costumes are marvels of grace, the posing is life-like, and the coloring is altogether effective and harmonious. The portfolio is an imitation of polished wood with the title in large ornamental lettering on what appears to be one of several sheets of paper, behind which two piquant little faces look out, and it is tied with ries," by Mary D. Brine, is a pathetic story in verse illustrated by Walter Paget with full-page drawings and dainty vignettes in monotint, to which no higher compliment can be paid than to say it is as beautiful as the author's first book, "Grandma's Attic Treasures." A very handsome dition de luxe is on hand of "The Cathedrals of England and Wales," by Charles Whibley, with preface by Bishop Potter and sixteen full-page plates reproduced in color from the original water-color drawings, and upwards of forty vignettes in monotint, a beautiful gift for a favorite pastor or Sunday-school superintendent.

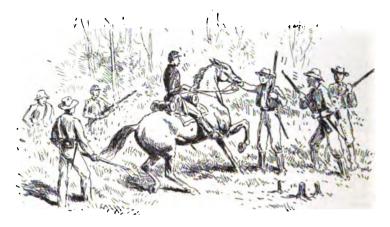

ESTES & LAURIAT have spent a fortune in getting ready some remarkable art-works with illustrations in etching, photogravure, and tint, a de-Etchers," "Recent English Art." "Salon Celebrities," and "Goupil's Paris Salon of '89" are certainly books that any house may be proud to turn out in one year, and the publishers show turn out in one year, and the publishers show tangible faith in the growing appreciation and culture of art in this country. Victor Hugo's "Nôtre-Dame de Paris" is also ready in handsome shape, as mentioned elsewhere. "Endymion," "Lalla Rookh," and "Fairy Lilian" have donned holiday garments that will dazzle and charm the most exacting book-collector. "The Earl's Return," which has only been for the prosperous thus far, has this year been prepared for modest means and correct taste; and for maidens "standing with reluctant feet" between childhood and womanhood nothing can be found more pleasing than two pretty books prepared by Mary E. Waller in "Giotto's Sheep," a story of Florence, the city of painting and sculpture, and "The Rosebush of Hildesheim," a cathedral story of the old German city, both of which, embellished with photo-etching, are pretty gift-books. "The Red Mountain of Alaska," by Willis Boyd Allen, is an exciting narrative of a trip through this most interesting but little known country with accurate description of the same, vividly portrayed by choice original illustrations by F. T. Merrill and others.

FORDS, HOWARD & HULBERT have a book that would seem just the thing for an old soldier to give his son to make him realize what his father went through to save him a country and a home. It is entitled "Bullet and Shell," and is written by George F. Williams, war correspondent with the Army of the Potomac, the Army of the Shenandoah, and the Army of the Cumberland. It is illustrated with engravings and sketches of actual scenes by Edwin Forbes, an old pictorial war correspondent. The book has been out some time, but deserves special attention as one of the best of the many histories of the Civil War.

FOWLER & WELLS have sold 75,000 copies of "Heads and Faces," and ought to sell as many more when the real value of this manual of character reading is fully appreciated. The book contains 250 portraits with description of the peculiarities of character that show in the different head formations and expressions. Many people class phrenological works with dream-books and books on palmistry, etc., but phrenology has now become a science, and the knowledge of hu-thirty-nine photogravure illustrations by Albert Lynch, is also made into an attractive Christmas gift-book. A very amusing book, for a student of electricity particularly, is "Babylon Electrified," by A. Bleunard, translated from the French by Frank Linstow White and profusely illustrated with original engravings by Montader. The Marquis de Belloy's "Christopher Columbus" and Longfellow's "Nuremberg" are also brought out as luxuriously illustrated works. An edition of "The Imitation of Christ" with photogravure illustrations chiefly from old masters in the Louvre will make an appropriate Christmas gift.

man nature to be gained from its study may be put to practical use in social and business life. This book is so well known that to say anything new in its praise presupposes a "lump" not yet shown on the portraits that have been admitted to its pages.

Funk & Wagnalls have several books sure to interest a large circle of Christmas shoppers whose tastes and interests are cultivated, but whose purses are not quite up to the modern holiday luxuries. "The Life-Work of the Author of Uncle Tom's Cabin," by Florence Thayer McCray, is written with zeal and animation, and is printed on heavy calendered paper and embellished with steel portrait and numerous other illustrations. Of the older publications of this house specially acceptable gifts can be made to friends of artistic tastes of the souvenir biography of "Adelaide Neilson," with eight photographs by Sarony of this exquisitely beautiful actress in her various great rôles, and "My Musical Memories," by Rev. H. R. Haweis, a treasury of musical criticism, with special reference to the Wagner and Liszt period. "The Hoyt-Ward Cyclopedia of Quotation" would be of great value to any writing friend.

Gebbie & Co. have many works that will be attractive to people whose tastes have been shaped and widened by foreign travel, and who admire celebrated art-works. "Selected Paintings from the Paris Exhibition, 1889," is a collection of choice specimens of paintings reproduced in photogravure; a new translation of Dumas' "Lady with the Camellias," with

HARPER & Bros. again have ready a sump tuous combination of the peculiar gifts of Edwin A. Abbey and Alfred Parsons, whose work on the "Old Songs" of last year will make their admirers eager to see their latest efforts. Seven English poems, singing of the delights of home and peace, are collected in "The Quiet Life," a full description of which is given elsewhere. A book of merit for all time and specially adapted as a Christmas gift is the imposing volume of "Cathedrals and Abbeys of Great Britain and Ireland," also fully noticed on other pages. Will Carleton is always sure of a popular hearing, and his new volume of "City Legends" will be a welcome gift to many possessors of "Farm Ballads" and
"City Ballads." The legends have been arranged into seven groups, which he calls chains. One of the links in these chains, called "Uncle Nate's Funeral," shows Mr. Carleton's special talent of touching the heart with unaffected simplicity and unadorned truth. The old man's peculiar notions about his funeral end with the quaint lines:

"I want my friend the minister—the best of preacherfolks,
With him I've argued, prayed and wept, and swapped a thousand jokes—
To talk a sermon to the friends, and make it sweet, but strong;

And recollect, I don't believe in speeches overlong.
And tell him, notwithstanding all his eloquence and

And tell him, notwithstanding all his eloquence and worth, 'Twon't be the first time I have slept while he was holding forth.

I'd like two texts; and one shall be by Bible covers pressed,

And one from outside that shall read, 'He did his level best.'"

The book contains nineteen illustrations, drawn by such well-known artists as W. A. Rogers, H. M. Wilder, W. St. John Harper, Gilbert Gaul, W. T. Smedley, Alfred Kappes, Mrs. J. C. Shepherd, and H. A. Ogden. A book of letterpress by Blanchard Jerrold, a nephew of Douglas Jerrold, beautified with Doré illustrations, is published as "London, a pilgrimage;" and F. A. Bridgman has written as well as illustrated an interesting volume on "Winters in Algeria." Thomas Nast, otherwise almost wholly identified with the hard feelings of partisan politics, has done much clever drawing on the cheerful subject of Christmas, and many of his well-known Christmas cartoons and some new work have been put into attractive covers as "Christmas Drawings for the Human Race." Without regard to race or creed this book can be presented to any friend who wants to feel the warmth and gladness of holiday time. Not strictly a holiday book, but a delightful present to a student of American history, is George Bancroft's "Life of Martin Van Buren," in two volumes, which has been a long time in getting before a public that will no doubt welcome it cordially. Many tastes can be satisfied in the Harper provision for the season of 1889. The Harper periodicals, the Magazine, Weekly, Bazar, and Young People, are welcome friends all the year round, and a receipted subscription is a very good thing for the Christmas stocking.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have a new holiday edition of Hawthorne's great art novel, "The Marble Faun," to the beauty of which we have tried to do approximate justice in our front pages. The greatest care has been taken in all those points that make a simple and elegant edition, in getting up from new plates "The Auto-crat of the Breakfast-Table," which is distinctively an edition for the book-lover, as has already been pointed out in the preceding pages of this issue. A very valuable gift to the library of one's dearest friend would be the Illustrated Library Edition of the "Complete Works of Thackeray," in twenty-two volumes, described elsewhere. Two charming volumes have been prepared by some discriminating but unnamed compiler, which have been christened "Interludes, Lyrics, and Idyls," from Tennyson; and "Ballads, Lyrics, and Sonnets," from Longfellow. but these are also mentioned elsewhere. The poem of "Gudrun," a German mediæval epic, has been translated by Mary Pickering Nichols, and brought out with decorations taken from German books of the 16th century. The book also has a colored fac-simile of a page of the original Ms. of the poem. This is one of the most important early literary works of the German race. It is attributed to a date a little subsequent to that of the "Nibelungen Lied." The scene of the poem is laid principally on the shores of the North Sea, and includes Ireland and Normandy, as well as Holland, Denmark, and Friesland. It is founded on the old themes of love and war. This firm also now issue "Tuscan Cities," by W. D. Howells, the series of papers first published in The Century, where they found many delightful readers. illustrations are artistic, from drawings and etchings by Joseph Pennell, who was abroad specially to make them for this book. The text gives details of many famous Italian cities and many amusing personal experiences. Of books not strictly gotten up for the gift season, but among the most attractive of reading-matter, this house has its usual generous supply. "Our Cats, and All About Them," is by Weir Harrison, one of the best animal painters in England, who has given fifty years' thoughtful observation to the habits and ways of the cat, and made a book that will recommend itself to all cat-lovers as well as to naturalists; the 175th thousand of Bellamy's "Looking Backward" is available for all sorts of friends; there are several new stories by Bret Harte, Mrs. Wiggin, Mrs. Foote, etc., and all the standard American authors in sets. A year's subscription to the Atlantic Monthly is about as acceptable a present as can be given a friend's family. Its attractions for 1800 include "Sidney," a serial story by Margaret Deland, author of "John Ward, Preacher;" John Fiske's historical papers will be continued, and there will be short stories by Henry James, Miss Jewett, Joel Chandler Harris, Octave Thanet, and others. To read the Atlantic carefully is in itself a liberal education.

HURST & Co. have a long line of standard books in desirable editions, including such foreign authors as Guizot, Victor Hugo, Taine, Schiller, Geikie, Hamerton, Rawlinson, Macaulay, etc.; and among our own countrymen such names as Prescott, Irving, Emerson, Headley, Morley, etc. To many friends these volumes would be more precious than so-called Christmas books.

WILLIAM R. JENKINS, the importer and publisher of French books, offers a new, cheap, and handsomely illustrated edition of "Nôtre-Dame de Paris," in two volumes, with all the illustrations of the édition de luxe of this masterpiece Victor Hugo's except the aquarelles. His "Les Poètes Français du xixème Siècle" makes an excellent gift-book for lovers of French poetry.

LEE & SHEPARD'S leading work, "In a Fair Country," by Miss Irene E. Jerome, is fully described in the front pages. This beautiful work is quite equal to the other Jerome books—"Nature's Hallelujah," "One Year's Sketch-Book," and "A Bunch of Violets." It is much thicker than the books of former years, having nearly one hundred pages of text from the delightful "Out-Door Papers" of Thomas Wentworth Higginson, and showing also a proportional increase in the charming plates which reproduce the many pen-pictures of nature found in the text. The pretty quarto, "The Wooing of Grandmother Grey," by Kate Tannatt Woods, is illustrated and noticed in the group of "Illustrated Po-ems." The spirit of Christmas especially pervades both the verses and the designs of this volume. This firm's popular series of hymns and poems are claimants as usual for public favor in new and seasonable attire. Eight hymns, under the title of "Royal Favorites," are bound uniquely in imitation leather backs and corners, with decorative designs in colors on front and back covers, the sides being padded. The "Satin Florals" comprises six hymns and ballads, in new and beautiful satin bindings and colors. The richness of this series is especially notable. The covers are genuine satin, the designs being graceful and artistic. The whole series appears in the ivorine style of binding, and in the "Moorish." The former is in cream white with gold and silver decorations, the latter in rich leather. Amanda M. Douglas' novels offer a rich field of selection for Christmas gifts for young or old. Her latest work is "Osborne of Arrochar," a story of Maryland plantation life.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. have a lovely edition of Guy de Maupassant's "Pierre et Jean," translated by Albert Smith under the title of "The Two Brothers." Ernest Duez and Albert Lynch are the two artists who have illustrated the work. The former contributes a very beautiful series of water-colors, which include head and tail pieces to the chapters, which interpret the maritime side of the story; the latter, in eighteen page compositions, represents the characters, the situations into which the narrative brings them, etc. Three of this firm's tastefully bound and illustrated poems are described under "Illustrated Poems"—their names are "The Low-Back'd Car," "Legend Laymone," and "The Miller's Daughter." Their edition of Dr. Brown's "Rab and His Friends," with Garrett and Simon's characteristic illustrations, is one of the most attractive forms of this pathetic sketch. The little quarto makes a most acceptable present.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have published a hand-some Library Edition of "Dumas' Novels," which numbers twenty volumes and includes his most famous works. This edition has been fully described in our front pages. The "Romances of Victor Hugo" in twelve volumes and Samuel Warren's "Ten Thousand a Year" in three volumes are also described under the heading of "Standard Fiction." De Vigny's "Cinq Mars," now nearly fifty years old, with which we have all struggled in learning French verbs, tenses, and genders, is published in Hazlitt's translation, with full-page etchings and innumerable smaller illustrations, and offers a pleasing contrast to the dingy French edition of our memory, in its various bindings of cloth, half calf, levant mo-rocco, etc. "Florida Days," by Margaret De-land, illustrated by Louis K. Harlow, makes a charming holiday-book, to which we have also striven to do justice in preceding pages. "Walton and Cotton's Compleat Angler," dear to the hearts of sportsmen and bibliophiles, again is put into a luxurious dress, and an introduction by James Russell Lowell, written specially for this edition, is the leading feature of this two-volume issue of this time honored standard. Of value for cold and hot weather, for rain and sunshine, is the handsome Library Edition of "The Thoughts of Marcus Aurelius," beautifully printed at the Riverside Press; and students of history would be delighted to receive a copy of Watson's "Swedish Revolution under Gustavus Vasa."

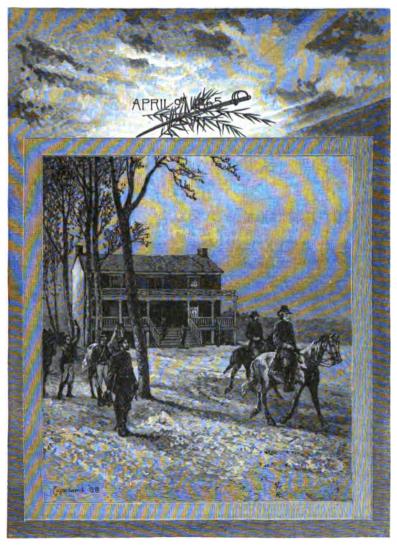

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. have a handsome Christmas gift for some young couple in "The Book of Wedding-Days," compiled and arranged on the plan of a "birthday-book" by K. E. J. Reid, May Ross, and Mabel Bamfield. The book has ninety-six illustrated borders, a frontispiece, and title-page by Walter Crane, which among other pretty thoughts prove conclusively that marriage on Monday is for health, on Tuesday for wealth, on Wednesday best day of all, on Thursday for losses, on Friday for crosses, and on Saturday no luck at all. The book is dedicated to H. R. H. the Princess of Wales, and was originally prepared in memory of the silver wedding-day of the coming rulers of England. It is bound in white vegetable vellum with red ornamentation, and makes a showy book. If providing for lovers of history several important works can be found in the holiday preparations of this house. "Russia in Central Asia in 1889," by Hon Geo. N. Curzon, M.P., is a thoughtful treatment of a subject attracting daily increasing attention; "Cardinal Lavigerie and the African Slave Trade," edited by Richard F. Clarke, presents a blood-curdling picture of ignorance and vice that call loudly to all civilized nations for redress; Robinson's "History of Phœnicia" is brought out sumptuously with two colored maps, eleven plates, and one hundred and twenty-two wood-cuts in the text; and "The Life of Lord John Russell," by Spencer Walpole, is a history of the England of his day, prepared at the request of Lady Russell, very handsomely issued in two large volumes. The northern part of Africa has been exhaustively explored by Joseph Thomson, who records his experiences and discoveries in "Travels in the Atlas and in Southern Morocco," a book which the N. Y. Times says "it is a duty as well as a pleasure to recommend."

THE D. LOTHROP Co. continue year by year to show untiring enterprise and generosity in the quantity and quality of the goods they make ready for the Christmas market. They have a reproduction in dainty sixteenmo of Sterne's "Senti-mental Journey," illustrated with twelve full-page etchings and many text illustrations by the celbrated French artist. Maurice Leloir, which have been supervised in manufacture by J. B. Bullet, of the Boston Photogravure Co. "Melodies from Nature," by Wordsworth, are given a characteristic setting in photogravures from scenes around the home of the poet, and in original designs by Hiram Barnes. Mr. F. O. Small's paintings of Oriental life and fancies, which have attracted much attention, are guarantee of the good work he has put into his illustrations to "The Secret Way: a lost tale of Miletus," Bulwer's beautiful song of love in the romantic East; and Mary Cecil Spaulding has made a charming Florida souvenir of Elizabeth Sturt Phelps' "A Lost Winter," a memory in verse of "The Kingdom of Home," poems of health.
"The Kingdom of Home," poems of home for home-lovers, selected by Arthur Gilman, fully illustrated and elaborately bound, makes a pretty gift; and the great success of last year, Warwick Brookes' "Pencil Pictures of Child Life" is still sure of attention among the more ambitious newcomers. Laura J. Bridgman has illustrated Dr. Brown's immortal "Rab and His Friends." Her nice work is sure of new admirers in the book on "Old Concord," by Margaret Sidney, which will always be a welcome gift to the lovers of Emerson, Thoreau, Hawthorne, and the Alcotts. A new book deserving special mention is "The Story of the American Soldier," by E. S. Brooks, which is fully noticed elsewhere in this issue.

DAVID McKAY has issued a companion volume to Joel Cook's "A Holiday Tour in Europe," which is called "An Eastern Tour at Home," a tour limited to that near-by region embraced in the Eastern States of our own country between Pennsylvania and Maine, including portions of the States of New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire—a region as important in all ways to every-day Americans as any country across the ocean ever can be. A new illustrated edition of Mr. Cook's first effort is also ready to be pushed ahead by the fresh comer. The very neat American Classic Series is sure to find a resting-place in libraries. Thus far it includes the novels of Charles Brockden Brown, the first American novelist, two volumes of essays by Emerson, Hawthorne's "Mosses from an Old Manse" and "Twice-Told Tales," and Bayard Taylor's "Views Afoot." Another name wholly American on the list of this house is that of Walt Whitman, whose terse, brilliant thoughts have been reviewed by Elizabeth Porter Gould, who has made a clever selection that has been neatly bound into a pretty little volume sure to please those who feel the deep earnestness of this strong American poet.

MACMILLAN & Co. have prepared a magnificent art-work, which they furnish at most modest prices, when all the difficulties of plan and man-

Kemble, Harry Fenn, Kenyon Cox, Wyatt Eaton, etc., etc., and giving much instructive information on the subject of a kind of art-work of which the talented author has made so pleasing a specialty. The remainder of the books furnished for this season by this house are not what are now technically termed holiday books, but they are volumes to gladden the hearts of lovers of old, well-loved authors, and standard, well-made books. "The authors, and standard, well-made books. Select Essays of Dr. Johnson," edited by George Birkbeck Hill, with six etchings by Herbert Railton, are published in two volumes in the Temple Library, as are also "The Poems and Plays of Oliver Goldsmith," edited by Austin Dobson, with Railton and Jellicoe etchings, which may fairly rank as an édition de luxe. "The Poetical Works of William Wordsworth," edited by Willlam Knight, are published in eight volumes; "The Life of William Wordsworth," by William Knight, is gotten out in three volumes, and special attention is called to "The Complete Poetical Works of William Wordsworth," in one volume, edited by John Morley, who has prefixed an essay upon the great Lake poet, that the fastidious London Spectator says is " fresher and more vigorous" than almost anything he has written. "Tennyson's Works" are also ready in a onevolume edition, for which the Laureate has revised the text. A new and revised edition is also ready of "Amiel's Journal," translated by the celebrated author of "Robert Elsmere."

G. & C. MERRIAM & Co. are among the happy publishers who are sure of year by year selling the same book, and those who get the copies sold are to be envied. "Webster's Unabridged Dictionary" is about as satisfactory a present as can be thought of for man or woman. It is a library of information and keeps up to date with the lightning progress of the day. It is a solid foundation for any library, and no house where there are children growing up and asking questions can afford to be without it.

THE METHODIST BOOK CONCERN (Hunt & Eaton) have many new and desirable books that are most suitable for clerical friends of almost any Christian denomination, and also for painstaking and studious Sunday-school teachers who know the value of good books of reference.

the value of good books of reference. "Studies in Theology," by Bishop R. S. Foster, divided into three volumes under the separate headings of "Prolegomena," treating of the philosophic basis of theology and the rational principles of religious faith; "Theism," dealing with cosmic theism, or the theism of nature; and "Evidences of Christianity" is specially mentioned as a most exhaustive work of its kind. The house has also an edition of "The Pilgrim's Progress," with illustrations by Frederick Barnard and others, engraved by the Dalziel Brothers, which makes a suitable Christmas gift-book.

THOMAS NELSON & Sons have made ready a new volume in the Pen and Pencil Series, this time devoted to "Russian Pictures," a full description of which is given in our foregoing pages. Pretty, inexpensive gift-books are "Silver Linings Behind Earth's Clouds," by E. A. Lemprière Knight, with landscape designs in colors and monochrome, and "The Storm's Gift," by the author of "The Rolling Stone." An excellent addition for the library of a Sunday-school teacher can be made by buying him "The Footsteps of St. Paul in Rome," by S. Russell Forbes, a good supplement to the larger lives of St. Paul, which pays special attention to the archæological questions involved in the journeyings of the great apostle. It is seldom any Christmas present gives a young or old member of the Protestant Episcopal Church keener pleasure than a really pretty set of "Prayers and Hyma-als," and it is hard to conceive of a greater variety of choice in such combinations than is offered by this house. They range in price from 45 c. to $15, and in style from a paper cover to a binding that is in itself a work of art, and exhaust all the possibilities of cloth, sealskin, calf, morocco, and every combination of slip and patent case, with or without handles. If possible, an even greater variety is afforded in the untold and unnumbered editions of their world-renowned "Oxford Bibles," which can be had from 60 c, to $60, and are the marvels of the age in Bible publishing. There is also a line of little, compact, and clearly-printed "New Testament and Psalms" combination that should be examined in selecting a little keepsake for a theological student. Year by year some new kind of paper or some new design in binding is invented by the manufacturers of these Bibles and Prayer-Books, making them more and more attractive as books and ornaments even to the most worldly Christian. Their intrinsic value and wealth of information have been recommended by the most eminent English and American scholars and clergymen, and an "Oxford Teachers' Bible" is really equivalent to a good-sized religious library.

NIMS & KNIGHT have devoted thought and capital to their holiday publications and offer several volumes of which they are justly proud. "Modern American Art" is a large volume, 11 x 141/4, giving thirty photogravures of paintings and statuary by American artists, with text by Ripley Hitchcock, and others, noticed fully elsewhere. The text comprises critical articles on Winslow Homer, Olin L. Warner, William Hamilton Gibson, Stained-Glass Windows, and The Beauty of Paint, all remarkably well written and interleaved with the work of such artists as Wyatt Eaton, George T. Brewster, H. Bolton Jones, J. Alden Weir, M. F. De Haas, and many others. The volume is simply bound in green cloth with gilt volume is simply bound in green cioin with gitt border. A delicately pretty souvenir is "Life and Nature," ten photogravures from original studies by George B. Wood; and any architect would welcome "Studies in Architecture at Home and Abroad," by D. C. Arnold, giving twenty photogelatine plates of noted buildings and interiors, twelve from French buildings, six situated in New York City, and the church at Edgware, England. Edward Staats De Grote Tompkins has written and illustrated another book. "Through David's Realm," dealing with

"Those holy fields
Over whose acres walked those blessed feet
Which, fourteen hundred years ago, were nail'd,
For our advantage, on the bitter cross."

He says that he has laid before the reader "an account, which shall be nothing learned, nothing ultra-serlous, but calm, dispassionate, interspersed, perhaps, by the changes of an experience in a country where the solemn and the gay are somewhat incongruously blended." The illustrations are very numerous and pleasantly break up a very well-printed text. The old war-song of "Tramp! Tramp!" written and composed by George F. Root, has been brought out this year by this Troy firm in a pretty ivorine binding, with illustrations by Copeland, continuing the interesting series formerly published by Ticknor & Co.

PORTER & COATES have provided new editions in suitable holiday bindings of their two series of Bayard Classics, which contain Rochefoucauld's "Maxims and Moral Reflections;" "Chesterfield's Letters, Sentences, and Maxims;" "The Story of Chevalier Bayard;" "The Table-Talk of Napoleon the Great;" Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia; " "Abdallah; " "My Uncle Toby;" and "The History of Caliph Vathek." The Windsor Edition of Shakespeare, in eight volumes, and the Library Edition of Knight's "Half-Hours with Best Authors," in six volumes, also are friends that have been "proved." This house also continues The Bells Series, favorite poems in charming bindings, that always come in handy as presents to some lady friend who looks in unexpectedly while family distributions are in progress.

JAMES POTT & Co. are the agents in America for "Bagster's Teachers' Bible," of which they now have eleven different editions in suitable and durable bindings. It would be difficult to suggest a more comprehensive and compact mass of information relative to the Bible than that furnished in the Aids appended to this Teachers' Bible. This house has also a long line of Prayer-Books and hymnals in very tasteful dress. Christmas-time would seem naturally to suggest. Bibles and prayers, but comparatively few Christians decide upon a Bible or a Prayer-Book when deciding to give a handsome book to a specially dear friend, and they little know how much easier for them would be selection and how satisfying to their friends would be a "Bagster Bible." Standard works for presentation are also Geikie's "Hours with the Bible" and "Holy Land and the Bible."

L. PRANG & Co. have once more put L. K. Harlow's talents into requisition and turned out some attractive art souvenirs showing his steadily improving taste and technique. Of these "A Summer Day," a poem by Margaret Deland, of "John Ward, Preacher" fame; "Sunlight and "John Ward, Preacher" fame; "Sunlight and Shadow" and "Twilight Fancies," two poems by Mrs. Lyman H. Weeks; "Midnight Chimes," a poem by Julia C. A. Dorr; "Golden Sunsets;" "Notes from Mendelssohn;" "Mayflower Memories of Old Plymouth," by Mrs. Hemans; "Christmas Autographs;" "Wayside Autographs;" "Evangeline Autographs," and "Haunts of the Poets" a delightful series of "Haunts of the Poets," a delightful series of booklets, are all illustrated in monochrome and pen-drawing by this untiring artist. name signed to much good work this season is F. Schuyler Mathews, and we recommend for examination his "A Sea Idyl," "White Mountain Vistas," and "Ye Booke of Goode Lucke," in which latter Mr. Harlow and Mr. Mathews combine their handiwork. "The Yule-Log." by Celia Thaxter, "Christmas Morn," by M. J. Jacques, and "Christmas Tide," by E. Annie S. Page, are three poems richly illustrated in monochrome by the late Miss L. B. Humphrey. In more ambitious size and style are "Flower Fancies," by Alice Ward Bailey, profusely illustrated in colors by Lucie J. Bailey, E. C. Morse, O. E. Whitney, E. T. Fisher, F. Bridges, C. Ryan, and F. S. Mathews, bound in surah sateen, with original floral cover design by the latter artist; "The Night Cometh," a poem by Albert Stratson, with six full-page photogravures after char-coal drawings by W. Goodrich Beal, numerous vignettes in pen-work, and emblematic cover with moiré ribbon and metal ornaments; and last year's favorite "Baby's Lullaby Book," lullaby songs by Charles Stuart Pratt, with water-colors by W. L. Tabor, and music by G. W. Chadwick, which has been reduced in price and remains one of the most artistic publications of its kind.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have in Literary Gems a series of productions which are fully described in our front pages, under the heading of "Some Dainty Books," and in the same place are mentioned the new Knickerbocker Nuggets, are mentioned the new Knizerootzer Nuggets,
"The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin,"
"The Boyhood of Goethe," "American War Ballads," "The Garden," "Sesame and Lilies," "Songs of Fairy Land," compiled by Edward
T. Mason, and "Tales by Heinrich Zschokke."
"A Selection of Horace Walpole's Letters," with the introduction and notes by Charles Duke Yonge, and many portraits and fac-similes, has been issued in a two-volume limited letterpress edition, which would delight the heart of Sir Walter Scott, who commended Horace Walpole as "the best letter-writer in the English language." The French Pyrenees form one of the loveliest gardens in Europe, and a perfect place for a summer holiday, and yet few travellers seem to visit this section. "A Midsummer Drive Through the Pyrenees," an unhistoric history, by Edwin Asa Dix, must give travellers a longing to see the hanging-gardens of France, and would be a good book for a friend intending to see something of Europe outside of the well-worn roads of Italy and Switzerland. As thoroughly American as the former is foreign is a little collection of "Great Words from Great Americans," and the citizen who owns the little collection will have a gem. "Epithalamium," Mrs. Mary Mathews Barnes' wedding hymn, has been illustrated by Dora Wheeler, and put into a bridal dress of white and gold. The old Greek word recalls the old Greek custom of the bridesmaids escorting the bride to her chamber, playing soft music on various instruments, and singing to her of her great happiness, and Miss Wheeler has given body to the romantic words.

A. D. F. RANDOLPH & Co. have several works that would make most fitting gifts for persons of serious literary tastes. The new translation of "The Imitation of Christ" is one of the notable books of the year and is fully noticed in our front pages. Mrs. Margaret J. Preston's "Handful of Monographs" has been issued in a large-paper copy in ornamental binding, and will be specially attractive to cultivated readers. New editions of the admirable collection of "Latter-Day Ballads," of the "Biography of Samuel Wilberforce," of "Fifty Years of English Song," and of Dean Stanley's "Westminster Abbey" and "Memorials of Canterbury," have also been made ready, and may be sure of holding their own with this year's favorites. The name of Harriet McEwen Kimball is well known to readers of religious poetry and a complete collection has now been issued of her pretty thoughts; Mr. D. B. Duffield, in "The Stray Songs of Life," has collected his verses, and they are issued in taste-ful form; and Miss Rose Porter has prepared a companion volume to her "Summer Driftwood" and "Winter Fire," which she has named "Dritt-ings from Mid-Ocean." Two exquisite stories full of Christian faith, hope, and charity are "How They Kept the Faith," by an anonymous Southern author, and "Fishin' Jimmy," by Mr. Slosson. The former is a tale of the Huguenous of Languedoc, and the latter a prose poem of a simple-hearted, devout old man, a lover of nature and nature's God, who teaches great truths to those who come in contact with him. It goes without saying that every book with the Randolph imprint is printed and bound as it should be, with that careful attention to detail for which this veteran house is justly noted.

FLEMING H. REVELL is the publisher of the only complete edition in America of "The Poetical Works of Frances Ridley Havergal," which they furnish in one volume in many styles of binding. Few writers possess Miss Havergal's talent for looking at the bright side of things, and her happy gift of counselling patience and submission in a hopeful, restful manner. She seems imbued with the Christian spirit of "peace on earth, good-will toward men;" and even those human souls who cannot accept her faith feel that they are "made whole" by the gentle humanity of her thoughts and advice. Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" is also published by this house in three different editions, all illustrated, and parents and teachers should feel it their duty to make this great allegory something besides a name to the children for whom they buy books as holiday gifts. Although not issued as a juvenile, this old comfort of our grandmothers can be read aloud in the important bedtime exercises and become a dearly-loved book to both parent and child.

The World's Benefactors Series now includes Henry M. Stanley, John Bright, and David Livingstone, excellently written popular biographies; and "The Popular Missionary Biographies" already embrace some of the staunchest workers in the mission field, women and men. Jamieson, Fausset, and Brown's "Popular Portable Commentary" offers at a very low price a thorough commentary on the whole Bible.

ROBERTS BROS. offer in Mrs. Ednah D. Cheney's "Louisa M. Alcott" one of the most interesting books published this year. Miss Alcott's charming letters and the details of her beautiful self-sacrificing life make this volume one that every reader of "Little Women" will covet. Her own experience, made use of to a large extent in her stories, was as novel as anything she found in her imagination. In the diary which she begun as a mere child, and which is published by Mrs. Cheney, with few abridgments, the story of her early struggles and sorrows is fully told. It is another testimony to the saying that "truth is stranger than fiction." The work is more fully described in the front pages. Two books of last season, "A Summer Voyage on the River Sa-ône" and "In His Name," are works of such permanent value that they should be remem-bered in providing seasonable remembrances for the household. The volume on the Saône is one of the most captivating of Hamerton's narratives of summer tours, and is especially adapted to the sporting member of the family. The holiday edition of Mr. Hale's "In His Name" makes this artistic story most appropriate for the joyful Christmas times.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS have two valuable works by Miss Amelia B. Edwards to which her present visit to America once more attracts admiring attention. "Untrodden Peaks and Unfrequented Valleys," first published in 1873, was the first book Miss Edwards wrote about Egypt, to which she has since devoted her rich stores of learning and her magic pen, and these sketches of her journeyings in the wonderful rock region of the Dolomite country are full of humorous episodes of adventure as well as interesting scientific facts; and "A Thousand Miles Up the Nile," written in 1876, gives the latest revelations of the spade up to that date, and sets before us the identifications, readings, and interpretations of scholars in a narrative which in spite of its heavy subject, is full of fun and eminently readable. Any one who has the good fortune to hear Miss Edwards' lectures will certainly want to know more of the subject to which intrinsic interest and her warm enthusiasm lend such charm, and they can find in these volumes more than they can carry away from many lectures. As in former years, the Routledges make a specialty of artistically illustrated French fction, notably of the fascinating works of Daudet. All the successes of former years are on hand, and during this year have been joined by "Jack, illustrated by Myrbach, and "Artists' Wives," This house illustrated by Rossi, Bieler, etc. also introduced Maupassant into this country and made of his "Afloat" a very pretty book. English erudition and French fancy are put into taking shape by this house.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have issued "The Viking Age," by Paul Du Chaillu, a luxuriously printed and profusely illustrated account of our Norse ancestors which has been described at length elsewhere. For the first time also a most important and interesting subject has received adequate treatment in "The American Railway," in which experts explain the construction, development, management, and appliances of 150,000 miles of road. This volume is also noticed elsewhere. The general reader, unacquainted with natural science, can find in "Aspects of the Earth," by Prof. N. S. Shaler, an interesting and graphic account of earthquakes, cyclones, volcanoes, rivers, forests, caverns, etc., embellished with many and artistic illustrations; and "Among Cannibals," by Carl Lumholtz, will also give general readers an account of four years' travel in Australia, where the author spent his time in learning the customs, habits of life, and manner of thinking of these Australian aborigines who will soon become extinct. A work which poor artists can only dream of and which dilettanti will probably be favored with is the "Cyclopedia of Music and Musicians," edited by J. D. Champlin, Jr., of which the second volume is now ready. This work contains portraits, autographs, medals, monuments, fac-similes of famous compositions, etc., scattered through critical and descriptive text, and is almost a perfect encyclopædia of music. The Cameo Edition of "Reveries of a Bachelor" and "Dream Life" is described elsewhere in this issue, and their veteran author has a new book this year called "English Lands, Letters, and Kings." "A Collection of the Letters of Dickens, 1833-1870," is brought out uniform with the handsome edition of "Thackeray's Letters" published last season. A cheap edition has been made of "Memories of Fifty Years," by Lester Wallack, with an introduction by Laurence Hutton. Students of history can be made happy with "The History of the United States," by Henry Adams, which is written in admirable style and has been favorably noticed by the most fastidious critics.

SCRIBNER & WELFORD have made their usual careful selection of literary treasures for the cultivated buyers of "books that are books." To begin with, they have a limited edition of "The Book: its printers, illustrators, and binders, from Gutenberg to the present time," by Henri Bouchot, of the National Library, Paris, which includes a treatise on the art of collecting and describing early printed books, and a Latin-English and English-Latin typographical index of the earliest printing places, a most valuable work for book collectors and antiquarians. Important biographical and historical works are
The First of the Bourbons," by Catherine Charlotte, Lady Jackson, the new editions of "The Life and Times of Savonarola" and of Symonds' "Life of Benvenuto Cellini," and "Caroline Schlegel and Her Friends," by Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick, and "Fanny Burney and Her Friends." A very interesting work on curious industries is called "Days with Industrials," giving details of the work of raising quinine, canaries, rice, and of the industries connected with pearls, amber, Burton Ale and Dublin Stout, petroleum, electric telegraphs, railway whistles, diamonds real and artificial, postage stamps, etc. Works of imagination are represented by Charles Lamb's "Prince Dorus," with illustrations in fac-simile (hand-colored); "Lyrics from the Dramatists of the Elizabethan Age," edited by A. H. Bullen; "Poems and Translations," by W. J. Linton; and "The Select Essays of Thomas De Quincey," edited and annotated by Prof. David Masson. Besides these standard works, which we can only mention thus baldly, this house has its imprint on some of the most erudite religious works brought to this country.

Frederick A. Stokes & Bro. offer a number of beautiful art-works for the holidays. in etchings, in fac-simile of water-colors, in engraving and other methods of reproduction. Their collection of "Selected Etchings" and "Etchings, Places" will be found noticed under a special heading of "Art-Works-Etchings and Photogravures," and their other leading work, "Fac-similes of Aquarelles by American Artists, will be found there likewise. Next to these comes in importance "Venice," made up of a number of fac-similes of colored Venetian photographs of St. Mark's Cathedral, the Doge's palace, the Bridge of Sighs, and other spots in the "City by the Sea," noted in history and literature, and accompanied by selections from the valuable work of the same name by Charles Yriarte. This volume is handsomely bound in cloth, but is offered also in two parts in paper and as two separate books in the Gondola Series under the titles of "Gondola and Palace" and "The Queen of the Adriatic." Each part contains four of the colored plates of the larger work, and is in an elaborate paper cover, being a fac-simile of a colored photograph, surrounded by a border representing a Florentine frame of white and gold. The sixth series of "The Good Things of Life" represents the best cartoons and jokes of the past year that have appeared in the well-known society paper. This series has a deserved popularity, every volume is so rich in laughter and entertainment. The present volume seems even better than its predecessors, it is so bright and sparkling. Almost the same words could be said for "Fun from Life," a smaller and thinner volume, which takes its material from the same source. A new series that bids for popularity this year is the Patriotic Songs Series, which includes prettily illustrated editions of the three following national songs-"America! My Country, 'tis of Thee," "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," and "The Star-Spangled Banner." These make attractive souvenirs, and appear in double covers of illuminated metals and colors, tied with gilt cord. The three songs bound together in one volume, cloth, take the name of "National Songs of America."

Mamma: Well, did you tell God how naughty you have been?

WARD, LOCK & Co. have ready a special edi-tion of "Our National Cathedrals" complete in three volumes, which contain besides the 150 illustrations in the text the beautiful series of steelengravings executed for "Winkle's Cathedrals," and give a succinct account of the modern transformations, improvements and injuries which have taken place in the Cathedrals of England, Ireland, and Wales. "The World's Inhabitants." by G. T. Bettamy, is a popular description of the races, peoples, animals, and plants now inhabiting the globe, and "The Conquerors of the World" is the history of the European races, by the same author. A very valuable book for the amateur tool-user is the first volume of "Amateur Work." a cyclopædia of constructive and decorative art and manual labor, copiously illustrated. house also has a cheap edition of the best-known novels of Turgenieff and new editions of "Shelley's Poems" and "Wordsworth's Poems." Their Minerva Library now includes some fine

F. WARNE & Co. offer this year the Bedford Shakespeare, a charming eight volume edition described elsewhere in detail. Very handsome gifts are their Imperial Standard Poets, including Milton, Wordsworth, Burns, Hood, Hemans, Byron, Moore, Shakespeare, and many more that "live not for an age, but for all time."

WHITE & ALLEN have in "Sheridan's Rivals" a volume that is, in artistic and literary merit, one of the notable gift-books of the holiday season. Their New Ballad Series corresponds in general appearance with the Favorite Folk-Ballads Series of last season, although somewhat more elaborate and more ambitious in style, the illustrations having been made by members of the Salmagundi Club. The ballads illustrated are "Old Uncle Ned," the artist being G. W. Brenneman; "Sally in our Alley," illustrated by Joseph Lauber; "The Blue Bells of Scotland," illustrated by Frank M. Gregory, and "Shandon Bells," illustrated by Joseph Lauber. As "Dear Old Songs" a fine edition on larger paper is issued of these four ballads bound in one volume. It is in every respect a very elegant gift-book. The well-known author of "Beacon-Lights" and other nautical souvenirs, Miss Elizabeth N. Little, has prepared a new oblong, fat volume of selections and illustrations taken from life on the sea. It is named "Off the Weather-Bow on Life's Voyage."

The Worthington Co. have secured for America an edition of the supplementary new volumes of the Villon Society's version of "The Book of the Thousand Nights and One Night." The Arabic text of two favorite stories in the collection, "Alaeddin, or, the wonderful lamp," and "Zeyn Al Asnam and the King of the Genii," has at last been discovered in MSS. recently purchased by the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris. Much disappointment was caused by the omission of these stories from the original nine volumes, and in compliance with many requests Mr. Payne has translated the tales, and they now appear in a three-volume supplement. There are also an diction de luxe of Macaulay's "Lays of Ancient Rome," Main's "Treasury of English Sonnets," and Daudet's "Wives of Men of Genius." Their Banner Library has received additions of European and American classics and bright modern novels.

E. & J. B. Young & Co. have many chrome and color-books this season. Texts, illustrations, and manufacture are of the best. Mrs. Molesworth, Rev. J. G. Wood, Prof. Schreiber, Manwille Fenn, and other writers of this calibre are among the providers of text, and Mrs. Sunter, Kate Greenaway, E. M. Jessop, Gordon Browne, and other artists of this plane of merit will illustrate what they provide. Mr. Jessop has once more taken a hand at "The Jackdaw of Rheims," and furnished it with many new illustrations, and he also has tried his practised pencil this season on "Netley Abbey."

THE PORT'S CORNER.

Books for Young People.

From "Christmas Stories and Poems for Little Ones." (Copyright, 1889, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

From "Harper's Young People," (Copyright, 1889, by Harper & Bros.)

Books for Donng People.

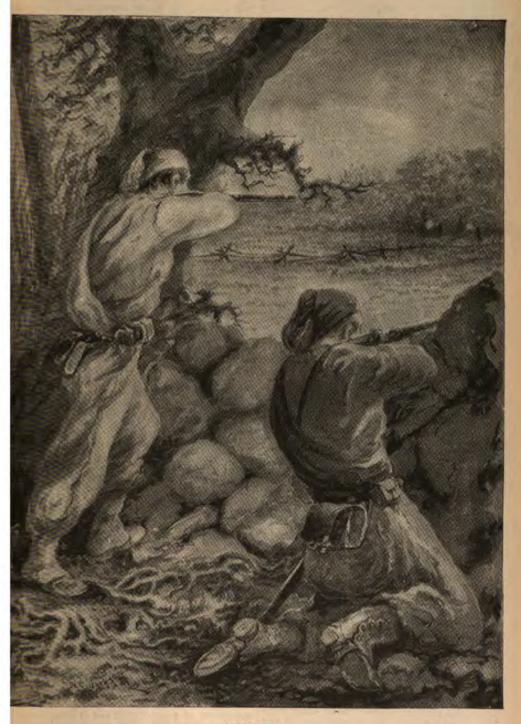

UNDER this heading is given, in alphabetical order of their publishers, a descriptive summary of all the new books offered as specially suitable for young people.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY provide an appropriate Christmas book for young readers in "The Bible in Picture and Story," in which Mrs. L. S. Houghton gives a complete résumé of Scripture history, from Genesis to Revelation, in entertaining style, quite within the grasp of her youthful public. The book is profusely illustrated, and the youngest children will delight in the pictures and readily learn the stories they typify. "Vermont Hall," by Mrs. John Ripley, tells an interesting temperance story; the Picture and Story Series contains six stories put up in a box; and the Star Library is intended as a gift to Sunday-schools, giving one hundred little storybooks, put up in a chestnut case, which would be a welcome addition to the shelves.

D. APPLETON & Co. have in Edward Eggleston's " Household History of the United States and its People" and " A First Book of American History" two books that make history delightful to young readers by introducing them to men who were actors in it, men who are the great landmarks of the country's story. A child is above all interested in persons. In the "First Book" Dr. Eggleston describes Columbus, Cab ot, Hudson, John Smith, Miles Standish, William Penn, etc., in a way that makes them real for all time. "The Household History," written first, is more elaborate and for older readers. but both are charming books brought out in charming shape. The talents and skill of some of the most eminent illustrators in America have been brought into requisition to lend a charm to these American histories. Although not strictly Christmas books they will make excellent additions to your boys' libraries.

chosen to give to Sunday-school libraries and individual scholars who have earned a reward for good attendance, good behavior, and, above all, for "learning the text." "Yours and Mine." by Miss Warner, teaches that selfishness leads to misery; "Little Radiance," by Jennie Chappell, "Never and Forever," by Grace Stebbing, "It Might Have Been," by Miss Holt, "Laurel Crowns" and "Golden Silence," by Miss Marshall, and "Lilian's Hope," by Miss Shaw, all teach practical, common-sense lessons that girls especially can make useful in their daily home and school lives. The Golden Butterfty Series, in twenty volumes, Round the Fire Series, in ten volumes, and the four volumes thus far issued in the Rock Cove Series are all good purchases for any Christian denomination.

CASSELL & Co. publish a whole raft of pretty juveniles, which will give as much pleasure for as little money as the most exacting on both points can expect. A full list of these latest juveniles is given elsewhere. There is a new edition of "Mother Goose," the great success of last year, with music by Effie I. Lane and illustrations by I. Louis Webb beautifully printed in lithographic colors. "Boys and Girls of Marbledale." by Mary D. Brine, "Legends for Lionel in Pen and Pencil." by Walter Crane, and "Flora's Feast," a masque of flowers penned and pictured by the same artist, make attractive and really artistic books. Specially for girls is "The Palace Beautiful," by L. T. Meade; and vounger children will delight in "Gleeful Days for Our Little Darlings," "Summer Play for Our Little Pets.' "Ups and Downs of a Don-key's Life," "Heroes of Every Day Life," etc., etc.

THE CENTURY Co. have brought out a volume of short stories, by Joel Chandler Harris, of which the first, "Daddy Jake, the Runaway," was first published as a three-part serial in St. Nicholas. the story of a slave, who runs away because he was hit by an overseer, and who is searched for by two of his master's little children, who meet with some childish adventures and hear some quaint stories. A few of the stories are printed for the first time, and some were originally published in the Atlanta Constitution, Many of them introduce animals amongst which our old friend, "Brer Rabbit," holds his own and adds to his ever-increasing popularity. All the fun is thoroughly understood and made more funny by the illustrations of E. W. Kemble. A subscription to St. Nicholas for next year, or a bound volume of that magazine for last year always make a most acceptable Christmas gift.

THE CONGREGATIONAL S. S. AND PUBLISHIM SOCIETY offer in their Pilgrim Prize Series six prettily made and illustrated volumes, of a literary quality quite above the average of this class of books. "Rose and Thorn," by Katherine Lee Bates, received the highest prize, and "A Titled Maiden," by Caroline Atwater Mason, took the second prize. "The Hermit of Livry," by M. R. Housekeeper, "A Knot of Blue," by Lottie E. Street, "My Lady Nell," by Emily Weaver, and "How He Made His Fortune," by Julia A. W. De Witt, are all, says Amanda B. Harris, "an acquisition of positive good and of stimulus and help to a higher life." The series is eminently desirable for Sunday-schools. Each book contains a complete story, and there is a remarkable variety of plot, character, and purpose in the series. The books are sold separately or as a set in a box. The tone of the volumes is wholly unsectarian.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have several instructive and most entertaining books, covering a variety of subjects, from which boys and girls can get useful information about men, things, and events. In "The Walks Abroad of Two Young Naturalists," a translation by David Sharp of Charles Beaugrand's French work, zoölogy is treated in narrative form, and all readers can learn with the physician's son and nephew the scientific facts about almost every known animal in their walks by the seashore, in different lands, and their visits to museums. Sarah K. Bolton has added "Famous Men of Science" to her well-known biographies, and includes Galileo, Newton, Linnæus, Cuvier, William and Caroline Herschel, Alexander von Humboldt, Sir Humphry Davy, Audubon, Morse, Sir Charles Lyell, Joseph Henry, Agassiz, Darwin, and Buckland: and Lydia Hoyt Farmer has prepared "A Short History of the French Revolution for Young People," making wise use of the works of Mignet, Michelet, Thiers, Lamartine, Taine, Louis Blanc, Henri Martin, Van Laun, and Carlyle, and facilitating the use of her excellent material by a first-class index. Boys can learn the history of the late Civil War in "Jed: a boy's adventures in the army of '61-'65," a story telling of two boys coaxed to enlist as drummer-boys in the regular army in 1855, who went into the ranks in 1861, and had many adventures on battlefield and in prison, brightened by many scenes of merry camp life. "Talks About a Fine Art," by Elizabeth Glover, is a delightful book for girls, in form of a dialogue, which teaches how even girls with no talent for arts and sciences may all acquire the fine "Rolf and art of being lovely in their homes.

His Friends," by J A K, illustrates the lessons that a healthy boy needs sympathy and encouragement as well as good, firm discipline, and that ability to learn is not found only under a white skin. For healthy boys and girls the Crowell publications offer a good selection.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have another volume by Willis J. Abbot, of "Blue Jacket" fame, this time devoted to "The Battlefields of '61," giving a narrative of the military operations of the war for the Union from its outbreak to the end of the Peninsular campaign, with many illustrations by W. C. Jackson; and "What Might Have Been Expected," by Frank R. Stockton, a delightful book for young people, full of the brightest humor of the inimitable author of "Rudder Grange." As in the latter years, there is an Elsie book on these publishers' list, this year telling of "Elsie and the Raymonds." In the course of this story twins are brought into the Elsie surroundings, so that there promises to be material for many more Elsie narratives while these newcomers in the Elsie world are fitting themselves for an independent existence. Many girls have spent happy hours crying over the Elsie books.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have their usual lavish provision of fine art color-books for children. The Juvenile Gem Series is a set of little beauties in six volumes christened respectively "Pets and Playmates," "A Great Pet," "Robby Robin," "Rock-a-Bye," "Snow-Flakes," and "Wee Pussies;" "Hobby-Horse" is a companion volume to "Snow Baby" of last year; "Funny Friends" gives humorous stories and verses of animals with original illustrations in color by G. H. Thompson; "Round the Hearth," by Harriet M. Bennett, contains fifty-two pages of color and monotint in the style of that exquisite favorite, "All Around the Clock;" "Childhood Valley," by John Lawson, has forty pages of illustration; and "I'll Tell You a Story" is by Lizzie Mack. "Granny's Story Box" is a pretty collection of bedtime tales with many illustrations by Marie Seymour Lucas, beautifully printed in gay colors, and "Christmas Rhymes and New Year's Chimes," by Mary D. Brine, are verses with the sort of jingles to make them echo in little brains.

ESTES & LAURIAT always provide lavishly for the instruction and entertainment of the young people. Youngsters all over the land are awaiting a new volume in the Zigzag Series. Hezekiah Butterworth in the eleventh volume of his series takes "Zigzag Journeys in the British Isles," visiting the haunts of Moore and Goldsmith in Ireland, the lake district in England, and the scenes of King Arthur's legends. The ostensible purpose of these journeys is to prove that the American Hampdens are descended from the historic English house of Hampden, and that the English statesman, John Hampden, visited America in 1623. "Three Vassar Girls in Turkey and Russia" gives the report of these indefatigable travellers and tells of the exciting scenes and events of the late Turko-Russian war in an interesting manner. Fred A. Ober tells in life for children which, under the title "Feathers, Furs, and Fins," has been made up from sketches by Miss Cheney, Miss Kate Tannatt Woods, Mrs. Sanford, and others. The book is profusely illustrated and the little sketches are full of interest. In "Queen Hildegarde" Laura E. Richards, author of "Four Feet, Two Feet, and No Feet," has written a new book for girls in their early teens which can be safely given to them, and which will prove a delightful and bracing tonic at the peculiar age for which it is intended. "Oliver Optic's Annual for 1890" is just as good as it has been for seven years, and this well-known periodical needs no further comment.

HARPER & BROS. have their usual supply of books for the young, which make the hard facts of history and geography palatable, and also of those that feed their imaginations and their lowe of fun and humor. This year the hard-worked Bronsons and Frank Bassett have again been allowed no rest, and Knox's "Boy Travellers in Mexico" have learned and are prepared to teach facts about Northern and Central Mexico, Campeachy, Yucatan, Central America, and the Nicaragua Canal. A profusion of pictures brighters the text, which describes the chief points of interest in the lands of the Aztecs, their social and the "Knockabout Club in Spain" of a most delightful tour through this historic country, giving quite a word-panorama of Seville, the Guadalquivir, the palaces of the Moors, the Alhambra, Madrid, the bull-fights, as well as innumerable illustrations to elucidate the bright text. Children who love animals and do not tire to read of their manners, their intelligence, and their pranks will be entertained by the volume of stories of animal political history and resources, their manners and customs, and the stirring adventures that befall our old friends in these new scenes. The fact that Thomas W. Knox has taken the prize at the World's Fair in Paris as a writer of boys' stories adds to the interest of his new volume. Charles Carleton Coffin's "Redeeming the Republic" treats of the third period of the War of the Rebellion, beginning with the opening of the year 1864.

From "The Walks Abroad of Two Young Naturalists," (Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.)

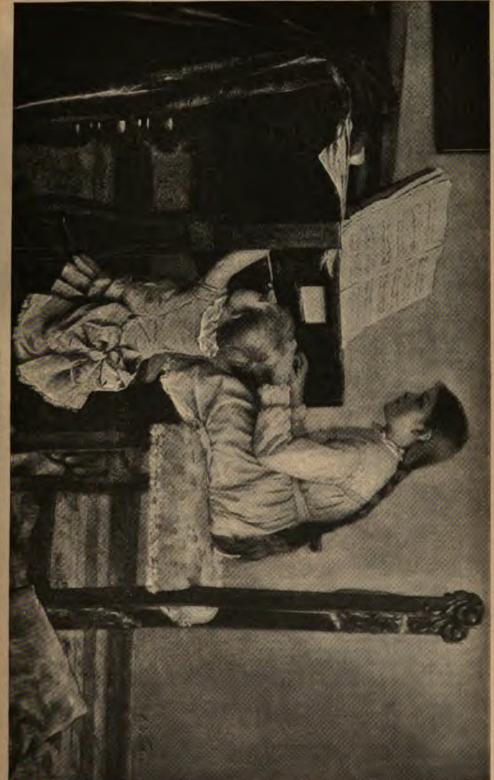

to which period his former "Drum-Beat of the Nation" and "Marching to Victory" have brought his delighted readers, and in it he deals an even justice to the bravery of the Confederate soldier. "City Boys in the Woods," by H. P. Wells, is the outcome of a suggestion that a story truthfully portraying the actual life of a hunter and trapper would be timely. The city boys go into the Maine wilderness fully equipped by their fathers, who trust experience will cure them of a desire for a trapper's life. One day they lose all their belongings, and are in despair, when they come upon the camp of an old hunter, who gives them shelter and practical instruction in the arts of trapping and hunting, and their many dangers and technicalities. "The Princess Liliwinkins, and other stories," by Henrietta Christian Wright, contains seven fairy-tales; and "Cap-tain Polly," by Sophie Swett, is a very taking story of a party of children left to the care of mild Aunt Katherine and trusted servants on the coast of Maine. As ever, Harper's Young People merits all that has ever been said about it, but adjectives have really been exhausted on the subject of this wonderful periodical.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have a bright story for girls and boys in Mrs. Wiggin's "Summer in a Cañon." Mrs. Wiggin's style is fresh in the remembrance of those who were fortunate enough to read her "Story of Patsy" and "The Bird's Christmas Carol." In her new volume she has taken a larger canvas on which to do justice to her favorite topic, the innate goodness of all created beings. A prosperous company of friends in Southern California conclude to spend their summer holiday in camp, and this story tells of their little plans and trials, and of their many cheerful hours in each other's society. This house also has a new story intended specially for girls, written by Sarah Orne Jewett, and christened "Betty Leicester." The heroine is a girl of fifteen whose father, a naturalist, goes to Alaska on an exploring expedition and leaves her to the care of his maiden relatives in a Canadian country town. Betty is a sweet-natured, quick-tempered girl, who proves a streak of sunlight in the gloomy lives of many of the inhabitants of Tideshead. It is prettily bound in white and scarlet.

HUBBARD Bros. have a new book for boys as exciting as Munchausen in the "Hairbreadth Es-Escapes of Major Mendax," by F. Blake Crofton, with spirited illustrations by Bennett. Major Mendax travels through the world enough to encounter Indians, cannibals, wild beasts, serpents, geysers, etc., and his startling adventures and daring deeds make lively reading.

LEE & SHEPARD bring out a new volume in The Blue and the Gray Series, which, when complete, will cover many of the events of the late war. "Within the Enemy's Lines," takes up the narrative on board the yacht Bellevite at the point where "Taken by the Enemy" leaves off, the same characters again appear, and there is an account of a second and more daring attempt on the part of the southerners to capture the Bellevite. "Oliver Optic" is as usual graphic in style and rich in thrilling incidents by land and sea. Ingersoll Lockwood's story for very young readers—"Little Baron Trump and His Wonderful Dog Bulger" is of the Munchausen order of literature—the adventures of Baron Trump being of the most marvellous sort. At an early age he makes a journey to the Southern Seas with his dog Bulger, and meets a remarkable people called the "Wind-eaters," with whom he has some most astonishing experiences. G. Wharton Edwards furnishes a number of odd, quaint pictures, quite imbued with the spirit of the story. The "Weezy" family promises to be numerous. Already we have had "Little Miss Weezy, and "Little Miss Weezy's Brother," and this year "Little Miss Weezy's Sister" is introduced. Penn Shirley has the art of writing these little books, which children find infinitely amusing. The little ones will find as many droll sayings in the new claimant for public favor as in the other members of the family. "The Heroes of the Crusades," by Amanda M. Douglas, part imaginative and part fact, is just the book for an intelligent boy. Peter the Hermit, Tancred, Richard the Lion Heart, and other pictuesque figures of the Crusades, are the centre of many dashing adventures.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co.'s principal juveniles are from the pen of the favorite author of the young people who prefers to be known only as "Uncle Lawrence." Both his stories, "In Search of a Son" and "The Story of a Mountain," are full of information hung on a slight thread of plot. The scenes and characters of each are French. In the first a popular rendering is given of the facts of physical science and chemistry. In the latter story young readers have an opportunity of learning all there is to be told about mountains, "The Girls' Own Outdoor Book," edited by Charles Peters, who got up the "Girls' Own Indoor Book" last year, is one of those practical works of reference and information in which bright, clever girls revel. It gives them ample directions on matters relating to outdoor occupation and recreation, such as botany. gardening, photography, shopping and marketing, fowl raising, Christian work, music, visiting, etc. One of the prettiest quartos in the market is "Christmas Stories and Poems" for the very little ones. The pictures and reading-matter both show a high degree of excellence.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. bave brought out the most captivating thing of its kind which has appeared for a long time. la the holiday race it will be hard for any new child's book to ed ahead of "The Blue Fairy-Book," edited by Andrew Lang. and beautified with innumerable illustrations by H. J. Ford and G. P. Jacomb-Hood. It is a lovely collection of fairy stories appealing to the imagination and natural instincts of healthy children, and these pretty fancies are confined in a blue and gold binding that strikes the eye on every Christmas counter. book will make Andrew Lang a favorite with children, and like all really good literature for children it will afford untokl pleasure to the older people, who know so well what a rare and special gift it is to be able to thoroughly amuse and interest the clear-seeing, unsophisticated little minds of the "coming race." They also have some fairy tales written by Andrew Lang called "Prince Prigio," which are illustrated by Gordon Browne.

THE D. LOTHROP Co. do a vast trade in juveniles, and take lawful pride in the high standard of their innumerable publications. It presents an almost not-to-be-realized picture of activity to mention that during the year this concern has handled two million and a half books, of which the bulk were juveniles. It is hard to determine what to recommend specially where all is good and pretty. "Our Town," by Margaret Sidney, is a story of modern American home life, wrkten for the encouragement of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, as is likewise "Chrissy's Endeavor," by Mrs. I. B. Alden

"Pansy"); "Sweetbrier," by Mrs. Sherwood, is full of advice upon good manners and of criti-cisms of social life; "One Voyage," by Julius A. Palmer, Ir., has a fine plot with profound mystery, quite an addition to ocean literature; "Three Little Maids," by Mary Bathurst Deane, illustrated by F. O. Small, has been strongly recommended by Miss Charlotte M. Yonge as a new and fresh story of life from "little girlhood" to "grown-up girlhood;" "Plucky Smalls," by Mary Bradford Crowninshield, tells the career of a bright little street urchin in the United States Navv: "Around the World Stories," by Olive Risley Seward, is full of the memories of curious things and odd places she saw in her journey around the world with her famous father; "Our Asiatic Cousins," by Mrs. Leonowens, is descriptive of life in the out-of-the-way parts of the mysterious East; "A Colonial Boy," by Nellie Blessing Eyster, tells of days of daring, hardship, and adventure, a century ago; "The Adventures of David Vane and David Crane," by J. T. Trowbridge, and "The Loss of the Swansea," by W. L. Alden, are both up to the best work of these experienced amusers of exacting youth. In stories of science and travel this house offers "Lotus Bay," by Laura D. Nichols, describing the wonders of the seashore; "All Among the Lighthouses," by Mary Bradford Crowninshield, and also her book on "The Lighthouse Children Abroad," and "The Second Year of the Look-About Club," by Mary E. Bamford, illustrated by Hiram Barnes. The long array of annuals bearing the Lothrop imprint have been praised year by year and are besides as well known to the public as to the bookseller. Wide-Awake, volume BB,

The Pansy, Our Little Men and Women, Babyland, Lothrop's Illustrated Annual of Prose and Poetry, and Baby's Annual are all gotten ready for 1889, and by virtue of inward merit and outside charm must find their way onto the tables and outside of the stockings of all who own former volumes, and many, many who may only have the supply for 1889.

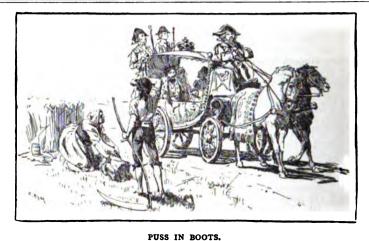

McLoughlin Brothers have a book of "Plays and Games for Little Folks" that contains sports of all sorts, singing games, puzzles, tricks, and lots of fireside fun. These ways of entertaining active little minds and troublesome little arms and legs have been collected and invented by Josephine Pollard, and are made clear with over sixty illustrations in color by F. Schuyler Mathews. It is a book to present to small mothers of large families, and they will think of the giver lovingly on every rainy Saturday.

MACMILLAN & Co. have two stories sure to be popular by those two favorite writers for children, Miss Charlotte M. Yonge and Mrs. Molesworth. Miss Yonge's story is entitled "A Reputed Changeling," and is full of dramatic incident told with literary excellence; and Mrs. Molesworth's "The Rectory Children," is illustrated by Walter Crane.

THE METHODIST BOOK CONCERN (Hunt & Eaton) have a long list of books suitable for Sunday-school libraries and also for gift-books among young people. "The Drummer-Boy of the Rappahannock," by Edward A. Rand; "Shoulder Arms," by John Preston True; "Some Friends of Mine," by Eleanor A. Hunter;

"Counting the Cost," the story of a summer at Chautauqua, by Cornelia Adele Teal; "A Damsel of the Eighteenth Century," by Mary H. Norris; and "Jonas Haggerly," by J. Jackson Wray, are all entertaining books. A particularly instructive and pleasant narrative is made of "School-Boy Life in Merrie England," in which Henry Frederick Reddall gives pen-pictures of the great public schools of England.

THOMAS NELSON & Sons keep up their record as lavish and intelligent providers of juvenile literature. Boys are always delighted with R. M. Ballantyne, who has this year a new volume called "Blown to Bits, or, the lonely man of Rakata," a tale of the Malay Archipelago, in which he describes the volcanic eruption of 1883, the tremendous devastation which resulted, and the peculiar beauty of the part of the world in which it occurred. A great deal of useful information and much safe pleasure can also be given to boys by getting them "Among the Turks," by Verney Lovett Cameron, of the Royal Navy, and "Crag, Glacier, and Avalanche." by Achilles Daunt, both well illustrated and calculated to make the blood stir in winter evenings. "The Achievements of Youth," by the Rev. Robert Steel, is full of good advice, kindly and attractively put. Handsome editions of "Robinson Crusoe" and "The Swiss Family Robinson" are once more ready, and are certainly as fascinating books as have been written, and ought not to be passed by for the latest and newest. A volume of "Favorite Bible Stories for the Young" is packed with illustrations, and a cute little giftbook for some aspiring little damsel that has learned to keep her hands clean, is "You, May Pick the Daisies," illustrated in monotint. the younger members who still literally taste their literature the Bow Wow Series is effective with its highly colored dogs, pussies, birds, boats, etc.

PORTER & COATES' name immediately suggests Harry Castlemon. Horatio Alger, and Edward S. Ellis, story-tellers dear to the heart of healthy, active boys whom no amount of coaxing can induce to join a Chautauqua course or to care for the many books now published to make learning slip into their little brain-boxes disguised as fiction approved by librarians and teachers. "Luke Walton," by Horatio Alger, is the story of a Chicago newsboy whom a merchant trusts over night with a five dollar bill, and who by honesty and activity later on makes a fortune in the commission basiness: "Storm Mountain" is a story of the American Revolution, of which the scene is chiefly in Pennsylvania and Virginia; and "True to His Colors" is a sea-story by the author of the Gumboat Series. Specially intended for girls are Mrs. Lillie's tale called "Esther's Fortune," which consisted in a wonderful voice, and "Stella Rae," by Harriet E. Burch, both suitable for everyday girls between twelve and fifteen, when girls must have a little love mixed in to make a story palatable. "The Leather Stocking Tales" are also published by this firm, but sold only in sets, a royal present for an active boy's library.

JAMES POTT & Co. have a good assortment of children's books, of which we briefly mention as entirely new "A Snow Flower," by Hester Day. "Captured by Cannibals," by J. Hatton, and "Wild Life in the Land of the Giants," by Gordon Stables, the latter two exciting but quite harmles books for adventurous boys.

THE PRESBYTERIAN BOARD OF PUBLICATION, Phila., bave their usual supply of wholesome literature for young people. Among the many books of this year, last year, and former years, it is hard to select, and we merely give a few titles of the very newest: "A Hungry Little Lamb:" "The Flaw in the Iron; "Mr. John and His Boys;" "Under the Pruning - Knife;" "Whatso-ever;" "The Fate of the Innocents," etc., etc. Names convey little idea in this class of literature, but any one cas be sure of well-selected Christian books who trusts to the imprint of this house.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have ready a few new volumes in the Story of the Nations Series, among which the newest are Helen Zimmern's "Hamsa Towns" and Alfred Church's "Early Britain." Miss Zimmern claims to tell for the first time in English the history of the Hanseatic League, a trading alliance made first between merchants and then by towns of North Germany during the fourteenth century for their mutual protection on sea and land against pirates and robbers. Miss Zimmern has the advantage of an interesting subject, which she treats in a clear and spirited manner. This forms the twenty-fifth volume of the series, which already gives a pretty full picture of the world's history. The twenty-sixth is "The Story of Early Britain," by Alfred J. Church, a subject to which this scientific historian and artistic writer does full justice; as he also does in "To the Lions," a story of the persecution of the early Christians under Roman rule in the beginning of the second century. "The Story of Boston," by Arthur Gilman, calls us to a study of men strong for independence, and to the development of a typical American civilization. A book calculated to pass time in the nursery and teach important lessons is "The Nursery Lesson-Book," a guide for mothers in teaching young children. The author has the kindergarten idea, but applies it without a mass of formulæ. The book is admirably adapted to its purpose.

FLEMING H. REVELL issues a large assortment of attractive juveniles boxed in sets, fully illustrated, and well bound, ranging in prices from 12½c. This house also has several little books that will make suitable and pretty Sunday-school prizes. Of these we briefly mention "The Story of Jesus for Little Children," by Mrs. G. E. Morton, and several volumes of "Bible Pictures and Stories," by James Weston. Two sprightly toy-books, illustrated in color, are "The Enchanted Shirt," by Col. Hay, and "The Little Gingerbreadman," by "G. H. P.," both little gems of idea and color. Any Sunday-school looking for little books to hang upon their tree will be surprised to see what nice things this publisher provides for very little money.

ROBERTS BROS. list of books for the young keeps up to the high standard of previous years. In suitableness and in general interest they stand out among the freshest and best juveniles of the season. "The Kingdom of Coins" is a some excellent work. "Sparrow, the Tramp" tale for children of all ages. The gray-haired children will probably find as much amusement in it as the sunny-tressed ones. It tells of a queer place inhabited by Pennies and Pounds, and of a little boy Tommy who visited it under the charge of Mr. Midas. The author, Mr. J. Bradley Gilman, is very witty, and often soars far above the comprehension of youthful minds. Frank T. Merrill is the illustrator, and displays some excellent work. "Sparrow the Tramp."

was one of the books most in demand during the past holiday season. It came from a new writer, Miss Lily F. Wesselhoeft, who follows it up this year with a little volume in the same line, called "Flipwing, the Spy." Here the animals all talk to each other and criticise the doings of their owners. "Flipwing" is a bat, who flies in and out of the house, and relates the conversation of the family to his intimates. The main purpose of the story is to teach kindness to the less attractive members of the animal kingdom.
"Their Canoe Trip," by Mary P. W. Smith, and "Kibboo Ganey," by Walter Wentworth, are particularly for boys, as they both deal with adventures. The first book relates the actual experience of two Roxbury boys in a canoe trip on the Piscataquog, Merrimac, and Concord Rivers. The second has also two boy heroes, who go with their uncle and a colored servant "Nap" to the Soudan, to make some researches relative to a copper mine. The colored man turns out to be Kibboo Ganey," an African king, and there is no end of exciting fights with wild animals and with the natives. Mr. Merrill is also the illustrator of this volume—his pictures being full of life. The little girls are provided for in two volumes of short stories by Miss Alcott and Susan Coolidge. "Lulu's Library," volume 3, embraces, besides some new stories not hitherto collected, some interesting reminiscences of Louisa M. Alcott's childhood, which her young friends will enjoy reading. "Just Sixteen" contains a number of short stories, such as young girls think only Susan Coolidge can write, depicting the joys and sorrows of maidenhood in its im experience with life outside of the school-room "Lil," too, was written for girls, though bonk Lil's five brothers, figure so much in it that is interest includes readers of both sexes. "Lil" by the author of "Miss Toosey's Mission," and other pathetic tales, and has a sad and touching The little girl who is its central figure plot. early becomes a helpless invalid. The lesses of courage and patient endurance her sad life teaches are deftly woven in with many bright episodes of child life. "Grandma's Rhyms and Chimes for Children" and "In My Nursers by Laura E. Richards, are two profusely and very beautifully illustrated quartos for the lime ones of the nursery. They both offer new pic-ures and many new jingling rhymes.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS have their usual bewildering supply of children's books, all goods better, and best, according to the child for which they are chosen with discrimination. "Captain, by Mme. O. de Nanteuil, translated from the French by Laura Ensor, recounts the adventures of a dog who accompanied a sailor lad is perilous voyages, and is embellished with 76 of Myrbach's pretty illustrations. "The Book of Games," by Kate Greenaway, has illustrations printed in color by Edmund Evans; "The Diverting History of John Gilpin" has illustrations by H. Rosa, printed in tint; and there are new editions of "The Life and Adventures of Robin Hood," and "The Pied Piper of Hamelin" both with carefully executed colored pictures. A most valuable present for a boy with inventive genius is a book by Charles Kent about "The Modern Seven Wonders of the World," which the hanging gardens of Semiramis, the Colossus of Rhodes, and the five others we found it so hard to memorize a generation ago, are replaced by the steam-engine, the electric telegraph, the photograph, the sewing-machine, the spectroscope, the electric light, and the telephone. Other books full of amusement and instruction are "Stories of Persons and Places in America." by Helen A. Smith: "Stories of Persons and Places in Europe." by E. L. Benedict: "Earthquakes" by Boscowitz, and "Heroes of American Discovery," by M. D'Anvers, with portraits of early navigators. "Foggerty's Fairy" is a collection by W. S. Gilbert, of "Pinafore" fame, of Christmas tales, contributed to London journals, on which many of his comic opera texts were founded; "The Cruise of the Wasp" is a romance of the North Atlantic by Henry Firth, and "More Magic" is a new book on conjuring by Professor Hoffman. There are many others of which the titles are in our list elsewhere.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS are lucky in the possession of a new volume of travels written by Frank R. Stockton for young people. "Personally Conducted" is an account of a brief tour through the principal cities of Italy, and a short sojourn at Paris and London. Mr. Stockton is the guide, and "personally conducted" by him the young traveller is taken to the various points of interest in these places, and has told him in Mr. Stockton's pleasant, realistic way the legends and historical stories connected with them. With the many beautiful pictures furnished by Joseph Pennell, Alfred Parsons, and others, the book makes a very handsome show. Miss Henrietta Christian Wright has prepared another volume this year devoted to "Children's Stories in English Literature," which is almost better than her stories of "Great Scientists," "American Progress," and "American History." "The Adventures of Captain Mago," by Leon Cahun, describes a Phœnician expedition one thousand years before Christ, and with words and pictures illustrates innumerable strange and perilous adventures. Several of the young people's favorites of former years are again ready to rival the later comers, and those that will make a close running, in spite of one year's ageing, are "Otto of the Silver Hand," by Howard Pyle; "Two Little Confederates," by Thomas Nelson Page; "The American Girl's Handy-Book," and "The American Boy's Handy-Book."

SCRIENER & WELFORD still have found some new volumes to add to their long line of "Henty Books." These include "With Lee in Virginia," a story of the American Civil War; "By Pike and Dyke," a tale of the rise of the Dutch Republic; "One of the 28th," a story of Waterloo; and "Tales of Daring and Danger." All the favorite "Fenn Books" and "Collingwood Books" are once more made ready. Among the newest books prepared for boys for this season are "Grettir, the Outlaw," a story of Iceland by S. Baring-Gould; "Highways and High Seas," by Cyril Harley, with illustrations by F. F. Moore. Intended for girls are "Girl Neighbors," by Sarah Tytler; "Under False Colors" and "Miss Willowburn's Offer," by Sarah Doudney; "Hetty Gray" and "Giannetta," by Rosa Mulholland; "Down the Snow Stairs" and "Margery Merton's Girlhood," by Alice Corkran; "White Lilac," by Amy Walton; and "Cousin Geoffrey and I," by Caroline Austin.

FREDERICK A. STOKES & BRO. revel in colorbooks. They issue a number of exquisite quartos of original designs, that must surely delight the favored ones for whom they are designed. "One, Two, Three, Four," is made up of large full-color pages, executed in fac-simile of watercolor designs of little children of the ages, respectively, of one, two, three, and four years. These charming little heads are the work of Maud Humphrey. Alternate pages display verses by Helen Gray Cone, and these are printed in monotint. "Babes of the Nations" is also from the fertile pencil of Maud Humphrey, who is particularly happy in depicting children. Here we have in appropriate costume, most artistically colored, a little child of Russia, of Holland. Scotland, France, Italy, England, Spain, Africa. Germany, the United States, Sweden, and Canada. With each plate are pages of verses by Edith M. Thomas in delicate monotints. "Babes of the Nations" is divided into two thinner books which are named, "Tiny Folk of Sunny Days" and "Tiny Folk of Wintry Days." The children and verses are divided equally in these volumes—the children of northern climates forming the "Tiny Folk of Wintry Days," those of the southern countries coming under the denomination of "Tiny Folk of Sunny Days." "Bessie Books" are so firmly fixed in the affections of reading girls that a continuation of them has been asked for, so Joanna H. Mathews, their popular author, has begun a series of sequels to them, the first appearing under the name of "Maggie Bradford's Club." This club is the "Cheeryble Sisters' Club," and is organized that the girls may learn to work for others and do good deeds of charity and loving kindness. Its purpose is so earnest that it will be found very readable by bright, clever girls.

MARCUS WARD & Co. have made some very pretty juveniles which are hard to describe, but make a good show on Christmas counters. "Where Lilles Live and Waters Wind Away" is a book of pictures by field and stream, with happy children at play, pictured by Edith S. Berkeley from descriptions given in verses by F. W. Bott-dillon; "The Robbers of Squeak" tells of the adventures of a band of mouse marauders and their conversion to a better mode of life; "Three Old Friends" is the collective title given the dearold nursery legends of "Three Blind Mice;" "Three Little Kittens" and "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," which have been put into gold and color gorgeousness by Edward Caldwell, who has studied the demands of infants whose eye have been developed by kindergarten training. This same artist has also "restored" "The Fox and the Goose "for the æsthetic eyes of 1889, and "A Ballroom Comedy" consists of the late C. S. Calverly's laughable "A B C" rhymes, beautified with illustrations by May Oulton.

F. WARNE & Co. have laid themselves out to please the young this season and offer many old favorites and new-comers, all in most tempting holiday clothes. Their Children's Classics embrace dear old boys like Grimm and Andersen; and the still older favorites, "Robinson Crusoe" and "The Swiss Family Robinson." Marryat's and Captain Mayne Reid's delightful books are also on their list, and various books of adventure by less known writers. There are also several very charming art-books of which we can only say, look for "Follies, Foibles, and Fancies of Fish, Flesh, and Fowl," with illustrations by the son of Birket Foster; "Young America's Painting-Book;" and "Old Mother Goose's Rhymes and Tales," and you will see some very pretty things.

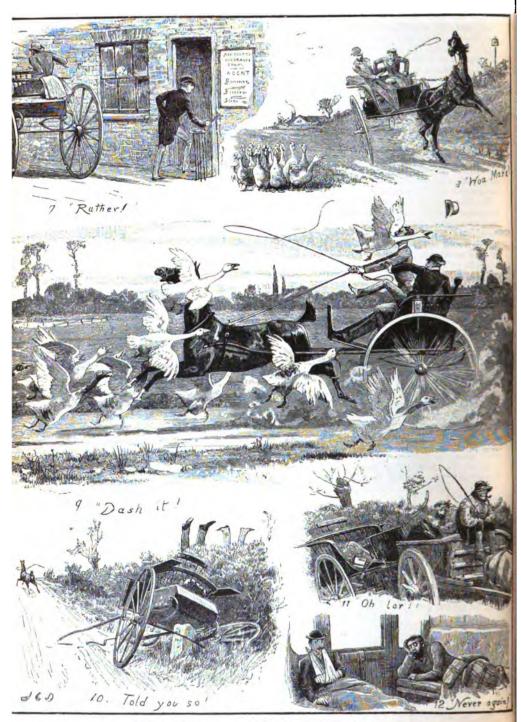

WHITE & ALLEN'S special offering to the little ones consists of two new and artistic renderings of the favorite old fairy tales of "Cinderella" "The Sleeping Beauty in the Wood." George W. Brenneman, of the Salmagundi Club, is the artist who has made the designs for these stories. reproducing the familiar scenes and characters so dear to every childish heart. They are both illustrated with water-color designs, reproduced in fac-simile by the photo-aquarelle process, and by many black and white sketches printed in various delicate tints. They are delightful specimens of art juveniles and color printing, and are certain to please the nursery inmates as well as their sympathetic mammas. An older class of girls can be made happy with two excellent tales on this firm's list: "Witch Winnie," by Elizabeth W. Champney, is the story of a "King's Daughter," one of "the to seek and to save ten" who made it their special work to care for little lost princes: "Deb and the Duchess," by L. T. Meade, is full of the odd sayings and doings of two unusually clever children. There is a pathetic side of the tale which is very gracefully handled. It is from the same pen which wrote "Daddy's Boy," one of the most charming books of last year. Two more stories of Captain Mayne Reid, never heretofore issued in this country, are now sent out in tale of Texas in the days when it was an independent republic, the former of the river Wye, in Herefordshire, England. Many incidents and exciting episodes characterize both stories. They are for either boys or girls, but for much more mature readers than those for whom "Witch Winnie" and "Deb and the Duchess" were writ-

THOMAS WHITTAKER has ready his usual long list of books for young people, of which we can only mention a few in briefest manner. "In All Our Doings," by Grace Stebbing, is a book about the lessons of the collects; L. T. Meade, always a favorite, has written "The Little Princess of Tower Hill" and "Nobody's Neighbors." story well worth reading is Mrs. Molesworth's "The Third Miss St. Quentin;" and Hesba Stretton furnishes volumes of "Short Stories" and

"Popular Tales." Several of the most popular books of this publisher are now to be known as Whittaker's Home Series, retailing at $1.50 each.

THE WORTHINGTON Co. have again secured a piece of work by the artist-author, Mary A. Lathbury, whose "Seven Little Maids," "Ring-Around-a-Rosy," "Meadow-Sweet," etc., have been great publishing successes. "April Skies" displays twelve little heads with bonny eyes of brown and blue, some dazzling with happiness, some clouded with little rain-bedewed heartaches, all healthy and natural, and just like everybody's real children. Little verses sing of baby's feelings "after sleep," "in wonderland," "in the meadow," as "a little knight," "in dreamland," etc., etc., and the pretty word and color fancies of the artist have been confined in a large-sized book, to which thick paper and a cloudy binding with five little heads give a fetching holiday air. For "Worthington's Annual, 1890," it is hard to find a new adjective. It is fit to take its place with all the former volumes, and offers its usual lavish supply of interesting and amusing reading for young readers. "The Girls' Own Book" of last season has received a worthy companion in "The Boys' Own Book," a series of entertaining stories and pictures for little men, bound in a gay cover on which seven lusty boys are trying their strength by pulling a tug-of-war; "Playmates" is still another collection of verse and story with cover adorned with children, dolls, and dogs; and the "Young Folks' Annual" makes a bold competitor for honors with the "Worthington's Annual" in its generous assortment of stories, poems, pictures, etc., to tempt the eyes and fingers of every age. "Sinbad, the Sailor," and "Alaeddin, or, the wonderful lamp," have put on an up-to-date, expert-manufactured costume, which would have bewitched the eyes of little readers fifty years ago, and will appear "nice" even to the darlings of 1889, totally spoiled and blass' as they have been made by the fond foolishness of papas and publishers.

E. & J. B. Young have a long line of books, published by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, which are well selected and neatly gotten up. Sunday for 1890 makes as attractive an appearance as in years past. An excellent series is The Child's Pictorial Series, containing stories by Mrs. Molesworth, Katherine S. Macquoid, Rev. J. G. Wood, Harrison Weir, and W. J. Morgan; and there are many other volumes, both for girls and boys.

THE PRIZE BABIES' WALKING-MATCH.

Specialties.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. this year make a specialty of "cut-out" or "shaped" books, which range in price from ten to fifty cents, and cannot fail to meet with wonderful success. Between their artistically shaped covers they will hold from eight to ten pages of perfectly printed monotint color and type. Fred Hines and Walter Paget, who have already done so much fine work for this house, have improved, if possible, on their former efforts of taste and execution. Most of the work published by the Duttons is printed in Nister's printing establishment at Nuremberg. These pretty things look like sails, birds, pussies, shells, ship riggings, etc. "Nister's Calendar" for 1890 is also sure of enormous sale.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have once more made ready their popular calendars for 1890, and offer "The American Poet's Calendar," and "Calendar Books," selections from the writings of Emerson, Hawthorne, Holmes, Longfellow, Lowell, and Whittier, each book put up in a parchment paper cover and sold separately, and also furnished all six together in a neat box for sending away to friends over sea and land. The new attraction for this year is "The Rainbow Calendar," by Miss Kate Sanborn, made up of selections for light and gloomy moments, and furnished with an allowance of blank paper for every day, so that it may serve the purposes of a diary also.

W. R. JENKINS makes a specialty of French, German, and English calendars for 1890, made up of quotations from well-known writers of these languages. The English calendars are made up from the Bible, Shakespeare, Dickens. Thackeray, and Tennyson.

LEE & SHEPARD, the pioneers of calendars and Christmas-books, have a goodly array for this year. The sepiatint calendar for 1890 is called "All Around the Year!" and is gotten up on ivory card-board, with rings, chain, and tassel: "Hurrah for the New Year!" is the boudoir calendar for 1890 and looks festive with ribbon bows, silver chains, and rings; "One Merrie Christmas Time" and "A Happy New Year to You" have on all the adornments it is considered good taste to wear at one time; and "Our Baby's Book," the mother's record of events in baby's life, is just the thing to give a young and happy mother of the finest child in the world, in which she may record all the details so interesting to the immediate surroundings of "baby" and so very wearing to the sisters, cousins, and aunts of every other perfect baby.

NIMS & KNIGHT have advanced the date on all their well-known calendars and have added some new ones to their steadily growing list. Their block calendars are the Tennyson, George Eliot. Dickens, and Thackeray. Each has a new design for the mount, printed in colors. A new wrinkle this year is the brass fastener by which the block is secured to the mount. "A Kalendar from Jap Town," designed by J. Pauline Sumter, contains eighteen pictures of Japanese life, size $4\frac{1}{2}$ x $5\frac{3}{4}$, and with silver rings and chains and cords and tassels makes a show of oriental richness; the "Calendar of the Birds," by the same artist, is just as pretty in its own sphere of song and color; and no one ought to think he has as nice a calendar as he can buy until he has made sure of seeing the goods provided by this young and hard-working house.

L. PRANG & Co. merit a careful examination of their extensive line of Christmas and New Year cards, satin art prints, Christmas and New Year novelties, calendars, etc. They have made a specialty of American art, as is shown by the names of Elihu Vedder, F. S. Church, Miss L. B. Humphrey, Miss Dora Wheeler, Miss Rosina Emmet, Miss Ida Waugh, Louis K. Harlow, etc. A leading feature this year is an unusual number of calendars for the pocket, the desk, and the mantel-piece, among which are two new folders by Miss L. B. Humphrey, the last work of this gifted and lamented artist. Three new Christmas pictures, sure to be as popular as the bewitching "Prize Babies." are "The Prize Babies' Walking-Match," by Miss Ida Waugh; "The Dash for Liberty," by A. F. Tait, lively, fluffy chicks escaping from a basket; and "Five-O'clock Tea," by C. D. Weldon. This enterprising house also offers a set of six etchings, by W. Goodrich Beal, showing views about Cape Ann, Massachusetts.

FLEMING H. REVELL have prepared a number of souvenirs in chromo-lithograph, monotint, and etchings. A pretty device is a booklet and easel combined. In this shape the publisher has "My Cabin Window, or, across the Atlantic," where the window when opened reveals a little book of twenty-four pages with poems from Longfellow, Scott, Shelley, Holmes, and others, covering an imaginary trip from Liverpool to New York; and "The House Boat, or, up the river," in which appear choice poems by Wordsworth, Hemans, Pope, Kingsley, and other favorites, and pictures showing picturesque river scenery. This house has a variety of etched booklets which are pretty but of which the bare titles convey no idea.

Fleming H. Revell has also a complete and perfect series of Biblical maps, at a moderate price, containing everything that can be desired by the most critical Biblical scholar, for Sunday-school, Bible class, seminary, college, or study. It is a series of thirty maps and plans, mounted on self-acting spring rollers, 54 x 46 inches in size and set in a handsome cabinet case, to hang on the wall. The distinctive title of this publication is "The Biblical Wall Atlas," by T. Ruddiman Johnson. The author's name is a sufficient guarantee that the maps contain the results of the latest geographical research, including the recent surveys of the "Palestine Exploration Expedition," together with every benefit of the most accurate modern scholarship. The maps combine legibility and a convenient size. The publisher is confident that the large outlay necessary to produce such an important series will meet with a just appreciation from the large and steadily increasing body of Biblical scholars.

FREDERICK A. STOKES & BRO. reinforces his army of calendars with a strong little detachment of new but by no means raw recruits. It is impossible to make their individualities and idiosyncrasies clear in the short interview granted in this place; they must be seen and admired on the battleground of the Christmas counter. Ask for "The Landscape Calendar," and you will see water-color drawings of bits of American scenery, with nickel fastener and ribbon bows; for the "Calendar of Nations," and twelve children of different nations, designed by Maud Humphrey, will be shown you; and you may expect pleasant sights also if you mention "Calendar of the Seasons," "A Year of Good Wishes," "Hark, Hark My Soul," etc., etc.

WHITE & ALLEN issue two new calendars gotten up with that fine finish of detail for which the house is distinguished. "The Little People's Calendar," by Julius Schledorn, is as dainty as good taste and generous outlay can make it; and "The Life of Christ Calendar of 1890" is composed of twelve pages, giving a series of designs appropriate to each month by G. W. Brenneman, which illustrate famous events in the life of the Saviour. Everything coming from this house is sure to be as perfect of its kind as it can be made.

JUST ISSUED:

AN EASTERN TOUR AT HOME.

By JOEL COOK. Large 12mo, tastefully bound in cloth, with gilt top, $1.00.

Of this book Mr. W. V. McKean, Editor-in-Chief of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, says: "He has the faculty of seeing in familiar scenes and places notable features and aspects usually overlooked by other writers, and of giving to his descriptions the sparkle of sprightliness, freshness, and life, in company with marked graphic power. . . The tour is limited to that near-by region embraced in the Eastern States of our own country, between Pennsylvania and Maine, including portions of the States of New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire as well—a region much more important in all ways to every-day Americans than any Oriental country can be."

ALSO A NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF

By JOEL COOK. Large 12mo, handsomely bound in cloth, with gilt top, $1.00.

The continued demand for this volume is the best proof of its value. Few books of its size contain so much that s of interest, and there are still fewer whose authors have the faculty of being at the same time thoroughly interesting and instructive.

"It shows keen observation, appreciation of the beautiful in nature and art, and is written in a graphic, easy style, which will attract and hold the attention of readers."—Boston Transcript.

"Those who have visited the same scenes will enjoy his descriptions, and those who propose making the tour should fortify themselves with his narrative, which is worth a dozen of the standard handbooks for the traveller."— Philadelphia Bulletin.

THE CENTURY COMPANY.

33 East 17th Street, New York.

DADDY JAKE, the Runaway, and Short Stories Told After Dark. By "UNCLE REMUS," JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS. Illustrated by Kemble. Square boards, $1.50.

A new book of "Uncle Remus" stories, full of the surprising adventures of "Brer Rabbit" and his friends. Just the book for young folk. "Daddy Jake, the Runaway," which forms the basis of the collection, was originally published as a three-part serial in St. Nicholas. Some of the stories are here printed for the first time, while others were originally published in the Atlanta Constitution and other newspapers. The orders from the trade indicate that this will be one of the most popular children's book of the season. Advance orders necessitated the printing of 8000 copies.

TWO RUNAWAYS, and Other Stories. By HARRY ST WELL EDWARDS. Illustrated by Kemble. Cloth, $1.50. By HARRY STILL-

WELL EDWARDS. Illustrated by Kemble. Cloth, $1.50.

The stories of one of the most popular of our magazine writers are bre for the first time brought together in permanent form. Besides the ow which gives the title to the collection, the volume includes "Sister Todaster's Heart," "Bider Brown's Backside," "'Minc' — A Plot," "Torb Strategy," "De Valley an' de Shadder," and others not less widely know.
The volume is attractively bound and contains a number of full-page distrations

THE ROMANCE OF DOLLARD. By Mary Hartwell Catherwood. Illustrated. Cloth. $1.25.

A novel of Canadian life. The exploit which forms the basis of the story is said by Francis Parkman, the historian (in a preface which he has written for the book), to be "one of the most notable feats of arms in American annals." Richly illustrated by Henry Sandham.

"The most remarkable American story of the year."—Journal of Commerce, N. Y.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON. The Story of His Life. Told by His Children. Vols. III. and IV., cloth, gilt top, uncut, $3.00 each. The set (4 vols.), $12.00.

The publishers take pleasure in announcing the completion of this elaborate and important work, of which the first two volumes were issued in 1885. It is a history of the antislavery movement in America, told in the most interesting way. The London Daily News considers it "among the most important, if not itself the most important biography ever issued in America." The last two volumes are published in the same attractive manner as to illustrations, presswork, etc., which characterized the first.

LITTLE MAIDS.

A portfolio of seven colored designs or studies of various nationalities. The printing is exquisite and must be seen to be appreciated. The portfolio (an imitation of polished wood and tied with heavy ribbon) is itself also a work of art. Portfolio, 12 x 14½ inches, in box, $5.00.

art. Fortono, 12x 142 inches, in box, $5.00.

"Nothing in the way of a holiday publication for or pertaining to children has ever to our knowledge been produced in this country quite equal in artistic quality and absolute charm to Mrs. F. Brundage's exquisite portfolio of seven colored plates called 'Little Maids.'... It is safe to say that to every one who is fond of children—and who is not?—this portfolio will be an object of outright covetousness. To see it is to fall in love with it, and it is one of those rare productions of the sort of which one could not possibly tire. '— Reacom

Pilgvim Pvize Sevies. $9 versus $1,000.

A HINT to Sunday-school Superintendents, Librarians, Teachers, and all others interested in young people and what young people read.

THE PILGRIM PRIZE SERIES of Sunday-School Library Books, published September 1, 1889, by the Congregational Sunday-School and Publishing Society, is one of the best sets of Juveniles ever issued. The titles and authors of the six volumes are as follows:

ROSE AND THORN. Katherine Lee Bates.

A TITLED MAIDEN. Caroline Atwater Mason.

THE HERMIT OF LIVRY. M. R. Housekeeper.

A KNOT OF BLUE. Lottie E. Street.

MY LADY BELL. Emily Weaver.

HOW HE MADE HIS FORTUNE. Julia A. W. De Witt.

Each book contains a complete story, and there is a remarkable variety of plot, character, and purpose in the Series. All are worthy from a literary point of view, and some of them may be characterized as of unusual merit in that direction.

Numerous and spirited illustrations by Frank T. Merrill and Caroline S. King add to the attractiveness of the volumes.

The $1000 which the Society paid for two of the above manuscripts seems to have been well invested, for not only were two unusual books thus secured, but others were brought by the prix offer to the attention of the Society, among which four were deemed worthy to stand with the two prize books, the six constituting the

PILGRIM PRIZE SERIES.

The publishers of this Series confidently present it to the public, and feel that they are justified is claiming for it an unusual patronage. The books combine Christian helpfulness with literary ability, and each story is so interesting that it cannot fail to appeal with success to the most indifferent reader.

The books are sold at $1.50 per volume or $9.00 for the set. A suitable discount will be made u libraries.

PRESS COMMENTS.

"An acquisition of positive good, of stimulus and help to a higher life, and, as a whole, of a literary quality quite above the average of this class of books. Those by Miss Bates and Mrs. Mason (which received the two prizes) are in some respects distinctly new types in Sundayschool literature, and prove what has long waited for proof—that a book may have all the elements of a good story and as a story be most beguiling, may be so delightfully written as to charm the most cultivated taste, and yet (that one must be compelled to say 'and yet!') be so thoroughly permeated and 'working' with the leaven of Christian truth, so vital with faith, and so divinely inspiring, that no reader can fail of feeling its spiritual significance and receiving some impulse in the direction of a finer manhood or womanhood."—AMANDA B, HARRIS, in Literary World.

- "No one can turn the leaves of these volumes without being conscious of the great advance which has been made in Sunday-school literature within the last few years. . The six books before us are each and all worthy of special commendation."—Boston Transcript.
- "We can recommend the series as eminently desirable for Sunday-schools."—Christian Union.
- "Every Sunday-school library should include this series."—Congregationalist.
- "Rose and Thorn. A strong, sweet picture of bot and girl life, written with fine literary skill, with a deep insight into human nature, and with the keenest appreciation of the feelings of young people."—Advance.
- "A TITLED MAIDEN. It is noteworthy for lifelike local coloring, a spirited narrative style, and a strong and sensible religious tone."—Congregationalist.

THE BEST TEACHERS' BIBLE MADE.

The great success of this book has been won on its merits, and we invite comparison as to Completeness of Helps, Clearness of Type, Strength of Binding, and Paper.

The vast amount of Biblical information contained in the "OXFORD" Teachers' Bible is so compactly and systematically arranged that the Sunday-school teacher or student will find it invaluable in the preparation of a lesson or in Bible study. It is believed that nothing has been left undone in presenting, as far as possible, A PER-FECT TEACHERS' BIBLE.

The Helps to the Study of the Bible,

Being all the additional matter that is contained in the "Oxford" Bible for Teachers, have been carefully revised and enlarged from time to time by Dr. Stubbs, Bishop of Chester; Dr. Edwin Palmer, Archdeacon of Oxford; Dr. Angus, and other eminent scholars. The Scientific Information was prepared under the supervision of Professors Rolleston, Westward, Lawson, and Earle—names of the highest authority in their several departments.

fessors Rolleston, Westward, Lawson, and Earle—names of the highest authority in their several departments.

Bishop JOHN H. VINCENT, of the Methodist Episcopal Church: "All things taken into consideration, it is one of the most perfect editions of the Sacred Scriptures I have ever seen. I wish that we could place a copy in the hands of every Sunday-school superintendent and teacher in America."

SUNDAY-SCHOOL TIMES, Philadelphia: "We have no reason to change our expressed opinion that the "Oxford' Teachers' Bible is the most serviceable for the use of the ordinary Sunday-school teacher."

This invaluable and incomparable book is the most wonderful digest, both in compactness and completeness, of Biblical information, compiled by the best scholarship of the age, that has been offered to the general reader."

E. H. CAPEN, President of Tufts College: "In my judgment, the 'Oxford' Bible, in its different varieties and styles, surpasses all others in accuracy, clearness of type, fulness of marginal notes and references, where such are used—in a word, in every requisite of a perfect English Bible."

Rev. ALVAH HOVEY, D.D., L.D., President of Newton Centre Theological Seminary (Sept., 1889): "I do not know of so much valuable matter elsewhere in so small a compass, and can heartily recommend the edition."

"The very best. I have carduly examined the volume; and can unreservedly recommend it."

"A noble edition, remarkably full and accurate, giving a wonderful amount of information under the various heads."

ENDAMENTALISMENTA

Anson D. F. Randolph & Co., New York.

A FEW NEW AND IMPORTANT PUBLICATIONS.

The very favorable reception given to UNKNOWN SWITZERLAND, translated from the French of Tissot, has led the publishers to bring out an American stereotyped edition (12mo, cloth, $1.50) of this fascinating volume. Also a limited number, with 13 photo illustrations of Swiss scenes and characters, in a unique binding.

Mrs. Margaret J. Preston's HANDFUL OF MON-OGBAPHS, Continental and English, has now been issued in a large-paper copy, in ornamental binding, $3.50. The author's poetic insight and graphic style are well known, and this edition will be especially attractive to cultivated readers.

The new translation of THE IMITATION OF CHRIST has already been spoken of by a reviewer as "one of the notable books of the year." The book was not originally written in prose, but in a rhythm more or less exact. This fact has long been known to scholars The present edition is the first attempt made in any living language to give a rhythmical form and a proper rendering to the Latin as Thomas Kempis left it. Canon Liddon well says, in his introduction to this translation. "that the mind is led by the poetical arrangement to dwell with a new intelligence and intensity upon clauses and words, and to discern with new eyes their deeper meanings, their relation to each other and to the whole of which they are part." The first edition issued in the United States, under arrangement with the English publisher, is a limited one of 750 numbered copies. It is a specimen of fine book-making. The volume is a small 8vo, bound in a peculiar style, with Italian wrapper. $3.50. More than half of this edition has already been sold. A cheaper edition has also been issued: 16mo, cloth, $1.25.

The Rev. Dr. C. M. Mead, in his volume of lectures on SUPKENATURAL REVOLUTION, has discussed with rare ability some of the questions involved in the conflict between supernaturalism and anti-supernaturalism. The object is to meet not only the positive opposition of unbelief, but also to elucidate the grounds on which a rational faith in Christianity rests. The discussion is timely, and the author's reputation for ability and fairness is well known. The book is beautifully printed in 8vo form. $2.50.

No anthology of the British poets has received higher praises from students and critics than the FIFTY YEARS OF ENGLISH SONG; selections from the poets of the reign of Victoria, with biographical and critical notes. For the scholar and the general reader it is invaluable. Two edititions are published, in four vols., one at $5.00, the other, on large paper, limited to 250 copies, at $10.00.

New editions of Doan Stanley's WESTMINSTER ABBEY and MEMORIALS OF CANTERBURY are now ready. In mechanical execution these editions are superior to the English. The price is reasonable—4 vols. for $6.00, in a box.

The name of HARRIET MCEWEN KIM-BALL is well known to the readers of religious poetry. The author has now made a complete collection, which is issued in two forms: 1, A large-paper copy, limited to 200 copies, at $2.00, and 2, a plainer copy, at $1.50. Pr. A. P. Peabody says of these poems: "I greatly prize them as poems, for their sweet and euphonious rhythm, and for gems of pure poetic fancy that do not merely sparkle, but shine with an enduring lustre."

In the STRAY SONGS OF LIFE Mr. D. B. Duffield has collected his verses, many of which have been long and favorably known. They treat of the phase; and experiences of daily life, and the song of the singer will find an echo in many hearts. x vol., $1.50.

A new edition of that admirable collection of LATTER-DAY BALLADS is now ready. The book was issued late last year and was very cordially received. The editor has brought together numerous charming balads which have been overlooked in the various volumes in which they originally appeared. It is a small volume, daintily printed and bound. Two editions: plain cloth, $1.25; cloth gilt, $1.50.

Mr. Willson W. Blake, in his monograph on THE CROSS, ANCIENT AND MODERN, with 120 illustrations, has shown how the cross, in various form, both among the Rastern and Western nations, has from early times been known as a mystical figure. The work is quite a curiosity, and will be valued both for its literary merit and artistic worth. Svo, cloth, $7.50.

In biography may be named the new and revised edition of the life of Bishop SAMUEL WILBER-FOROE, by his son. Originally published in three volumes, the work has now been condensed into a single volume of great interest. It is a graphic picture of religious, educational, and social life in the best circles of English society. 16mo, $1.75.

HOW THEY KEPT THE FAITH, a tale of the Huguenots of Languedoc, is an historical tale of unusual merit. Not since the publication of the "Schösberg Cotta Family" has there been a better book of the kind than this. Those who are looking for a pure and wholesome story, illustrating a great truth, will find it in the volume. 12mo, cloth, $1, 50.

The readers of the Princeton Review will recall the remarkable short story of FISHIN' JIMMY, by Mr. Slossoh, published two years or more ago. For deicacy of touch and depth of feeling it has not been equalled. "It is at once," as has been said, "poem, parable, and biography, and its flavor is inexpressibly sweet and refreshing." Fishin' Jimmy was a simple-hearted, devout old man, a lover of Nature and a lover of God; and this story of life, of religion and the fruits it bore may well be pondered by all. Illustrated, 16mo, cloth, 60 cents.

Miss Rose Porter has a wide popularity among the readers of religious fiction. Twenty years or more ago she became known as the author of "Summer Driftwood." This was followed by the "Winter Fire." In her new volume, DRIFTINGS FROM MID-OCEAN, she takes up some of the threads of the others and weaves them into a narrative of life and character in the records of a trip abroad. In this, as in all her other books, there is a vein of suggestive thought and meditation on "high things" so characteristic of all her writings. 16mo, cloth, $1.50.

Among the recent volumes of sermons none are better than those of Dr. A. G. Mercer, CHRIST AND HIS TEACHINGS, 8vo, $r.50; BELIEVING AND DOING, by the Rev. Lewis H. Reid, 1580, $1.25; and GOD IN NATUBE AND LIFE, by the Rev. Walter R. Brooks, 1280, $1.50.

Attention is invited to the MEN OF THE BIBLE SERIES, prepared by eminent Ruglish scholars, of which to vols., at $1.00 each, are now ready. Among the writers in this series are, Canon Rawlinson, Dr. Farra. Canon Cheyne, and Dr. Driver. Also to that important series, the EPOCHS OF CHURCH HISTORY, of which 12 vols, have already been published.

e Messrs. Randolph & Co. have now ready a complete descriptive Catalogue of their publications, which they will send free on application.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' NEW BOOKS FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

THE VIKING AGE.

The Early History, Manners, and Customs of the Ancestors of the English-speaking Nations. Illustrated from the Antiquities Discovered in Mounds, Cairns, and Bogs, as well as from the Ancient Sagas and Eddas. By Paul B. Du Chaillu. With 1,400 Illustrations. 2 vols., 8vo, $7.50.

R. DU CHAILLU'S great popular work is the product of many years of incessant labor in the collection and arrangement of facts which throw a flood of light upon the character of the progenitors of the English-speaking race.

The author gives a complete description, with fourteen hundred illustrations, of the religious, social, political and warlike life of the Northmen. The reader follows them from their birth to their grave—sees the infant exposed to die, or "water-sprinkled"; the child in his education and in his sports; the young man in his practice of arms or in his wooing; the maiden in her domestic duties; the adult in his warlike expedition on sea or land. He learns about their dress, ornaments, weapons, dwellings, their primitive or beautifully carved furniture, their temples, sacrifices, gods, and sacred ceremonies; their festivals, feasts, and drunken revels; their ships, horses, chariots, slaves.

PRESS NOTICES.

"In these two volumes we see the ancient Norseman in his habit as he lived—in peace and war—at home and in his incursions into far distant lands. We follow him from the cradle to the grave. The work is certain to attract great attention."—PHILADELPHIA TIMES.

"Mr. Du Chaillu's work does him credit for its comprehensiveness and the labor which he has bestowed upon it."—NEW YORK TIMES.

"One turns regretfully from a work so rich in material, so profound in research. The whole life of a great people is revealed, their arts, their customs and their creeds. Nothing so important as this work has appeared for some time. It is destined to heave up old traditions and to compel men to new views of the history of civilization in Europe."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

"The clear, vivid, brilliant style of Mr. Du Chaillu lends a fascination to every topic he discusses, and the text is fairly illuminated with the copious illustrations."—BOSTON TRAVELLER.

"These luxuriously printed and profusely illustrated volumes, embody the fullest account of our Norse ancestors extant. Mr. Du Chaillu has gone very fully and very carefully over the whole of his ground. This extensive and important work must be of high interest to all English-speaking people."—N. Y. TRIBUNE.

THE AMERICAN RAILWAY:

ITS CONSTRUCTION, DEVELOPMENT, MANAGEMENT AND APPLIANCES. With 225 Illustrations. Large 8vo. $6.00 NET.

For the first time there is presented in this book an adequate account of the American Railway, an industry representing over nine thousand million dollars in its 150,000 miles of road. The appended list of subjects treated in the volume will sufficiently indicate its value and importance. In its preparation nothing has been left undone which might add to the lasting interest and value of the work. Written by the most eminent authorities in all branches of railway work the book is divided into the following chapters, each being complete and full in the treatment of its subject:

Introduction, by Thomas M. Cooley, Chairman of Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Building of a Railway, by Thomas Curtis Clarke. Feats of Railway Engineering, by John Bogart, American Locomotives and Cars, by M. N. Forney.

Railway Management, by Gen. E. P. Alexander. Safety in Railroad Travel, by H.

G. Prout.
Railway Passenger Travel, by
Gen. Horace Porter.

The Freight-Car Service, by Theodore Voorhees. How to Feed a Railway, by Ben-jamin Norton. The Railway Mail Service, by |

The Prevention of Railway Strikes. The Railway Mail Service, by The Prevention of Railway Strike, by Charles Francis Adams.

The Railway in its Business Relation Norton.

The Railway in its Business Relations, by Arthur T. Hadley.

Statistical Railway Studies, with 13 Maps and 19 Charts, by Fletcher W. Hewes.

By Prof. N. S. Shaler. With 100 Illustrations, 8vo. $4.00.

The general reader unacquainted with natural science will find here an interesting and graphic account of those phenomena of the earth's surface—earthquakes, cyclones, volcanoes, rivers, forests, caverns, etc.—which most directly affect human life. The illustrations are many and artistic.

AMONG CANNIBALS.

An Account of Four Years' Travels in Australia and of Camp Life with the Aborigines of Oueensland. By Carl Lumholtz. by Rasmus B. Anderson. With over 100 Illustrations, 8vo, $5.00.

The author lived alone in the camps of savages who had never before come in contact with white men, and describes for the first time in a thoroughly popular style the customs, habits of life, etc., of these Australian aborigines, who will soon become extinct.

Cyclopedia of Music and Musicians, Second Volume.

Edited by J. D. Champlin, Jr. Critical Editor, W. F. Apthorp. With over 1,000 Illustrations, including 36 Full-page Etched Portraits. 3 vols., 4to, Decorated Parchment Binding. This Edition Limited to 500 Numbered Sets for this country and 50 for Europe. $25.00 per Volume, NET.

"The portraits which accompany all these biographical notices constitute an extremely valuable feature of the work. There is one on the average to every page-more than a thousand in all; and besides these there are in the two volumes twenty-four full-paged etched portraits of the great masters. Moreover, there are autographs, fac-similes of famous compositions, views of birthplaces, medals, monuments, caricatures—everything. in short, that an edition de luxe ought to have. In the three features enumerated—the numerous portraits, the very complete biographic list and the combining Riemann's 'Opera Lexicon' with the ordinary dictionary—the Encyclopedia is unique."—The Nation.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS HOLIDAY BOOKS.

STRANGE TRUE STORIES OF LOUISIANA.

By GEORGE W. CABLE. With illustrations and fac-simile reproductions. 12mo, $2.00.

TITLES OF CONTENTS: How I Got Them-The Young Aunt with White Hair-The Adventures of Francoise and Suzanne-Alix de Morainville-Salome Müller-The White Slave-The Haunted House in Royal Street-Attalie Brouillard-War Diary of a Union Woman in the South.

The charm of style and the delicate flavor of romance characteristic of Mr. Cable's short stories are seen at their best in this volume. The tales have a thread of common interest and reveal many delightful glimpses of the French Creole civilization of the last and early years of the present century. The illustrations are very curious,-reproductions in fac-simile of the old manuscripts on which the stories are based. a quaint portrait of one of the heroines, etc.

WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR'S NEW ROMANCE

SFORZA: A Story of Milan. By WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR, author of "Valentino." 12mo, $1.50.

"As in his successful work, 'Valentino,' Mr. Astor chooses historical and romantic Italy for the scene of his novel. It is a tale of one of the most famous families of mediæval Italy, and gives the author the richest possible material for a dramatic plot, several well-drawn and sharply accentuated characters, and a succession of brilliantly worded pen pictures of the times he portrays."—Brooklyn Times,

"The movement throughout is spirited, the reproduction of bygone times and people is realistic. Mr. Astor has made excellent use of his historical material, and has written a romance which will heighten the reputation he made by 'Valentino.'"—N. Y. Tribune.

"A bright historical tale of Milan in the sixteenth century. He gives admirable pictures of the Milanese; he describes with the confidence of one who has gone deep into research. It is better than 'Valentino,'"—Philadelphia Press.

DONALD G. MITCHELL'S NEW BOOK.

ENGLISH LANDS, LETTERS AND KINGS.

12mo, $1.50.

"A most charming book for lovers of the purest and best literature."—Hartford Post.

"The whole book is characterized by a graceful daintiness that removes the study of English literature from drudgery and makes it a charming recreation."—Boston Journal.

"It is a bright, pleasant, chatty record, that is true to history, and full of useful hints and suggestions."— Boston Gazette.

"The style is altogether unconventional, as the reader may guess, and may well lure many into historic paths which under another guidance might be much less agreeable."—Brooklyn Times.

REVERIES OF A BACHELOR;

Or, A Book of the Heart.

DREAM LIFE:

A Tale of the Seasons.

The Cameo Edition. 2 vols., 16mo, each, $1.25.

The art of dainty and beautiful book-making finds full expression in this edition of Ik Marvel's most popular works. The cameo head in the centre of the cloth cover explains the name of the edition. Each volume contains an etching by Percy Moran.

"These books of perennial charm are bound in dark green cloth, with a cameo head on one side of the cover, with flat backs, gilded tops and rough edges, and are printed on heavy wide-margined paper with clear type. A delicate etching of appropriate design, by Mr. Percy Moran, forms the frontispiece of each."— Boston Advertiser.

 An Edition de Luxe of the above, limited to 200 copies, is issued, on Holland paper, $7.00.

By the Rev. HENRY VAN DYKE, D.D. 12mo, $1.50.

Dr. Van Dyke's volume contains the completest study that has yet been made of the Poet Laureate's works and influence. Its range is broad. For the discussion carries the author naturally into the larger field suggested by the relation of poetry to life—an important and fascinating theme. The book is of special interest in its analysis of the part which the Bible plays in Tennyson's poems.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS HOLIDAY BOOKS.

History of the United States, by Henry Adams.

THE FIRST ADMINISTRATION OF THOMAS [EFFERSON. 12mo, 2 vols., $4.00.

In spite of the many works which cover this period, it is not too much to say that Mr. Adams has here written its history for the first time, because, in fact, he discovered the material for it. This material is composed chiefly of government archives from Spain, France, England and the United States, a large part of which has never before his investigations been even opened for consultation by any historian. And it is upon these archives that the important points of his history is based.

"A most important and critical period of American history is embraced in the first administration of Mr. Jefferson, and this book covers it with a clearness and interest, as well as minuteness, that assures it an immediate and high place in the standard oistorical literature of the country."—Waskington Post.

"Mr. Adams is, in general, a very clear and vigorous writer, and never hesitates to express his own opinions in an unmistakable manner. He has made himself familiar with all the facts bearing on the subject; he draws his own inferences from them; and he states his conclusions with precision and force. There is no part of his subject that he has not touched with the hand of a master."—Boston

"The materials which Mr. Adams has had access to are "The materials which Mr. Adams has had access to are such as have been at the disposal of no previous writer. It is fortunate that they have fallen in such hands. Of his abilities for investigation there can be no doubt. The book is in perfect taste. The style is admirable; it combises clearness with elegance and simplicity with a dignity and a gravity worthy of the greatness of the subject."—N. Y. Times.

"These are among the best books of American history that have been written. It is a most admirable history, which will serve to enlighten modern readers on many subjects that have grown obscure, and to enable them to form a just idea of Jefferson's character."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The United States:

ITS HISTORY AND CONSTITUTION. By Prof. Alexander Johnston. 12mo, $1.00.

Professor Johnston's work is unique in that it presents in a single volume of about three hundred pages a lucid, scholarly, well-ordered narrative of the history of the United States from the earliest discoveries down to the present time. It is a masterly statement of the constitutional and political history of the country, comprehensive and adequate, yet wonderfully clear and compact. Its authority and decisiveness have been universally acknowledged, and taken altogether it is undoubtedly one of the most brilliant and satisfactory historical works ever written.

A Collection of Letters of Dickens.

1833-1870. Uniform with "A Collection of Letters of Thackeray." 16mo, $1.25.

"A fascinating collection, one which should be cherished by every lover of Dickens. To have this author's works and not his letters should be nominated a literary sin."—Boston Times.

"This collection will be welcomed by the many thousands of readers who still prefer Dickens to any novelist of the present generation."—New York Herald.

"A very pleasing and satisfactory volume, one which all true lovers of Dickens will enjoy."—Chicago Herald.

"The selections have been made with admirable judgment, and the result is a thoroughly representative and characteristic series of letters, showing the writer in every phase of his manner as a correspondent."—Boston Sunday Gazette.

THE MASTER OF BALLANTRAE: A Winter's Tale. By Robert Louis Stevenson. page Illustrations by William Hole. 12mo, cloth, $1.25; paper (without illustrations) 50 cents.

"We have here a fresh and striking example of Mr. Stevenson's remarkable intellectual versatility and flexibility. It is a fine novel, realistic and romantic by turns, marked by rare skill of draughtsmanship and vigor of imagination, an honor to the author and a credit to literature."—NewYork Tribune.

"The book is not merely a varied romance full of the color of strange adventure on flood and field, but a work on which its author has exercised all his distinguished talent to the end of shaping a tale that in outline and detail should be wholly satisfying to the artistic conscience."—Besten As-

"It is a tale of extraordinary originality, brilliance, and subtlety of character analysis."—Christian Union.

Personally Conducted.

By FRANK R. STOCKTON. With 46 Illustrations by Joseph Pen-NELL, ALFRED PARSONS, and others. Square 8vo. $2.00.

"Mr. Stockton has given just the sort of random comment upon the sights of Europe, both old and new, that one would expect from him if travelling in his company. Mr. Stockton is as fascinating in his sketchy talks about the interesting things he has seen across the water as he is in his fancy sketches and stories, and that is enough to satisfy the most exacting."—Hartford Post.

"It is a most pleasing book, and it has a most charming set of illustrations."

THE DIARY OF PHILIP HONE. Edited by BAYARD TUCKERMAN. In 2 vols., large 8vo, with portrait, $7.50.

"Philip Hone, a member of an old Knickerbocker family, was one of the few men of his time in America who had the leisure to keep a diary and the varied experience to make such a record valuable to posterity. His diary extends from 1828 to 1851. The political life of these years is commented upon by one who was familiar with its inner workings. Daniel Webster, Martin Van Buren, with a score of their prominent contemporaries, are familiarly described and conversations with them recorded. A graphic description is given of the famous Tippecanoe election, in which Hone took an active part on the side of Harrison.

"But probably the portion of this diary which will be most eagerly read is that relating to the social life of New York.

"The Knickerbocker of to-day will learn what company was present at his father's wedding, where his grandfather most frequently dined, and what people thought about him. The student of the history of New York will find Hone's diary a mine of information; the gossips of to-day will pause to enjoy the small-talk of their grandmothers."

- LETTERS OF THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON TO MISS J. 1834-1851. 12mo, boards, with label, uncut, $1.75.

 At the time Miss J.'s correspondence with the Duke of Wellington opened she was a very beautiful woman

At the time Miss J.'s correspondence with the Duke of Wellington opened ane was a very beautiful woman about twenty years of age.

Of a deeply devotional nature, she felt she had been especially called by God to do a great work. Looking around her for an object, her attention was drawn to the Duke of Wellington.

The Duke of Wellington was at this time (1834) a man about sixty-five years old. He was in the prime of strength and health. He had now been a widower for three years.

WAR AND PEACE.

By Count Lyof N. Tolstol. Authorized translation from the Russian by NATHAN HASKELL Dole. 2 vols., 12mo, cloth, $3.00; 4 vols., 12mo, gilt top, paper labels, $5.00.

As Count Tolstol's other masterpiece, "Anna Karénina," is unique in social, philosophical fiction, so "War and Peace" stands by itself in historical fiction. It is a panoramic novel, considered by some to be his best. This is the first complete translation into English from the original Russian and contains many interesting details never before published. The translator has added a chapter by chapter résumé of the work and a list of the principal characters of the story. With the addition of "War and Peace," we are able to furnish a substantially complete edition of Count Tolstol's works.

CONTENTS: The Town—St. Augustine, Daybreak, Noon, Night. The Country—Along the St. John's River, The River, The Woods and Swamps, The Men.

"Full of sentiment and color of the sunny land which it describes with a picturesqueness in keeping with menchanting scenery and romantic associations. The four colored plates in the volume glow with the light of Faida. The cover appropriately displays the palmetto leaf."—The Critic.

Among the full-page plates are the following:

The Old Gates (colored plate). 8t. Augustine from the Island (etching). Old Spanish Houses, 8t. Augustine. Fort Marion (colored plate). A Street in St. Augustine. Orackers Fishing.
Live Oak (colored plate).
A Back Yard in St. Augustine.
An Old House (etching).
Palmettos on the St. John's (colored plate).

TEN THOUSAND A YEAR.

A new and choicely printed edition of SAMUEL WARREN'S Famous English Novel. Wit a portrait of the author etched by F. T. STUART. 3 vols., 12mo, cloth, gilt top, $4.50: he calf extra, or half morocco, gilt top, $9.00.

The fact that a well-printed edition of the work, adapted to library requirements, has not appeared, either in England or America, since the original publication of the story in 1841, is a subcient reason for the present edition.

The author's valuable notes, elucidating many legal points in the work, are included.

Of the story itself it is hardly necessary to speak. It has always been a deservedly popular work, the first edition having been sold in two or three weeks. It has been widely read in nearly fifty years in England and America, has been translated in France and Germany; and the publishers are assured that the present edition, in clear, readable type, with choice presswork and paper, will meet with the success warranted by the excellence and interest of the work.

DE VIGNY'S CINQ-MARS.

A most beautiful edition of Count Alfred de Vigny's celebrated romance, "Cinq-Mass; at A Conspiracy under Louis XIII.," translated by Wm. HAZLITT. Exquisitely illustrated with thirteen full-page etchings and numerous smaller illustrations in the text. 2 vols., 8vo, doing extra, gilt top, $6.00 net; half calf extra, gilt top, $10.00 net; half levant morocco extra gilt top, $13.00 net.

This famous romance of the reign of Louis XIII., first published in English in 1842, and from which Bulwer gleaned considerable material for the celebrated play of "Richelieu," has been for many years out of print, and now appears for the first time with every element of attractiveses that can be lent to it by large, clear type, choice paper, and beautiful illustrations.

In all, 12 vols., 12mo, cloth extra, gilt top, $18.00; half calf or half morocco, gilt top, $36.00.

By Amelia B. Edwards, Ph.D., LL.D., L.H.D., etc. With upwards of seventy illustrations engraved on wood by G. Pearson, after drawings by the author. Revised edition, with fresh Revised edition, with fresh notes. 8vo, cloth, $2.50.

"Under her magic pen, the ruins hum with busy life, blossom with color, and echo with chant or dirge. The latest revelations of the spade, and the identifications, readings, and interpretations of scholars, are set before as in abundance. The secrets of chronology, and the reasons why the Egyptians were so different from us as well as from the Greeks and Hebrews, are set forth in few words, as only the facile expert can set them forth. In addition to the notes, which will be "nuts" to the scholar and reader seeking solid information, there is the narrative, lively, piquant, full of fun and eminently readable."—The Critic.

A Midsummer Ramble in the Dolomites. Revised edition, with illustrations and maps. 8vc. cloth, $2.50.

"It is quite a treat to fall in with this bright, breezy record, in every line of which we seem to hear the rizz of that cheery laughter wherewith its author greets every new mishap of the road, meeting scanty food, hard queters, noise, dirt, rain, bad roads, the buffeting of mountain storms, and the stupidity of mountain peasants, not mad direct personal injury to be avenged by persistent ill-humor, but as a kind of rough practical joke, rather exhibiting than otherwise."—New York Times.

ROBERT HELMONT: The Diary of a Recluse, 1870–1871. By Alphonse Daudet. Transland by Laura Ensor. With 123 illustrations from designs by Picard and Montégut. 800, paper, $5.00; half leather, $6.00. Limited (numbered) edition.

"The sureness, lightness, and deftness of Daudet's art, his constant and exquisite sympathy with nature, the ure evidence in every phrase, in every little picture or episode, of the artistic delight of the artist in his work, sale his writings the source of a pleasure that must express itself, if at all, in enthusatic hyperbole. In reviewing 'Robert Helmont' we find it hard to keep ourselves within bounds, and we sympathize with Mr. James in his desire to so that Daudet is adorable, and thus to have done with it."—Boston Advertiser.

Uniform with "Robert Helmont;"

MADAME CHRYSANTHEME. By Pierre Loti. Translated by Laura Ensor. With 199 🕮 trations from designs by Rossi and Myrbach. 8vo, paper, $5.00; half leather, $6.00. Limited (numbered) edition.

"Kindly welcome my book with the same indulgent smile, without seeking therein a meaning either good a bad; in the same spirit that you would receive some quaint bit of pottery, some grotesquely carved ivory ido, a some preposterous trifle brought back for you from this singular Fatherland of all preposterousness."—From Levi Dedication in "Madama Chrysanthème."

Uniform with "Robert Helmont" and "Madame Chrysanthème:"

FRANCIS, THE WAIF. By George Sand. Translated by Gustave Masson. With 100 illustrations from designs by Eugene Burnand. 8vo, paper, $5.00; half leather, $6.00. Limited (numbered) edition.

"The domestic morality, the quiet nature, the home feeling of 'Francis, the Waif,' may be described as such thing wonderful for George Sand. . . . And then follows, close upon the blazing track of revolution, a picture household virtue so sweet and tranquil, so full of tenderness and love, that it is difficult to believe it to be the production of the same hand."—Bentley's Miscellany.

Ward, Lock & Co.'s Announcements.

SPECIAL EDITION, READY NOVEMBER 25.

OUR NATIONAL CATHEDRALS: Their History and Architecture from the Earliest Records to the Present Time; with Special Accounts of Modern Restorations. With 189 steel plates and 199 wood-engrayings in the text. Complete in 3 volumes. Strongly and handsomely bound in cloth gilt, gilt top, wood-engravings in the text. Complete in 3 volumes.

4to, boxed, $15.00.

The publishers in issuing this work desire to point out that it contains, in addition to over 150 illustrations in the text, the beautiful series of steel engravings originally executed for "Winkies' Cathedrals." This description of the cathedrals is, therefore, quite unique in the number and variety of the representations of their various aspects desing the present century. It is also the only work of its kind which includes, in addition to the new English cathedrals, an account of the Scotch and Irish cathedrals. The narratives of the modern transformations, improvement, or in some cases injuries which have taken place in the cathedrals, are also a very distinctive feature of the work.

Massiciand. Animals. and Plants.

THE WORLD'S INHABITANTS; or, Mankind, Animals, and Plants. Being a Popular Description of the Races and Peoples now Inhabiting the Globe; together with accounts of the principal animals and plants of the great continents and islands. Fully illustrated. By G. T. BETTANY, M.A., B.Sc. 8vo, cloth gilt, $3.00.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE NEW SERIES OF

AMATEUR WORK, ILLUSTRATED. A Cyclopoedia of Constructive and Decorative Art and Manual Labour. With folding supplements and hundreds of engravings. 4to, cloth gilt, $3.00. The present volume of "Amateur Work, Illustrated," is the first of a new series, and will prove very attractive, as it contains practical articles on several especially popular subjects, including Lathe-Making, Tenting and Brecting, Furniture-making, Fretwork, Ornamental Wood-Turning for Beginners, Photography, Paper-Haging, Electrical Work, Bicycle Construction for Amateurs, Wood-Turning for Beginners, Metal-Work for the Hoosehold, Harmonium Building, Magic Lantern Slide Paintings, etc., with thousands of useful hints and wrinkles on a great variety of subjects.

NEW BOOK BY SIR GILBERT CAMPBELL, BART.

WILD AND WEIRD: Tales of Imagination and Mystery. By Sir Gilbert Campbell, author of "The Mystery of Mandeville Square," "On a Winter's Night," etc. Crown 8vo, cloth, $3.00. In the stories contained in this volume the author has skilfully distinguished the different characteristics of the various countries of which they treat, thereby avoiding all chances of that monotony in style which occasionally deters from the interest of writings upon supernatural subjects. The versatility, no less than the surprising flights of imagination here displayed, affords a just claim for these weird tales to be ranked in the same category with some of the thrilling creations of the pens of Edgar Allen Poe or Eugene Sue.

THE CONQUERORS OF THE WORLD: Being a Popular Account of the Proples and Races of Europe; their History, Ethnology, Manners, and Customs. By G. T. Bettany, M.A. B.S.c., author of "Life of Darwin," "Eminent Doctors," etc. With about 150 illustrations. 12mo, cloth gilt, $1.00. This work gives a popular description of the Peoples and Races of Europe, from prehistoric to modern times, their history, manners, and customs. The work, being profusely illustrated and handsomely bound, is admirably adapted for use as a reward or prize book.

UNIFORM WITH THE ABOVE.

THE TEEMING MILLIONS OF THE EAST: Being a Popular Account of the Inhabitants of Asia. The History of Existing and Extinct Nations, their Ethnology, Manners, and Customs. By G. T. Bettany, M.A., B.Sc. With about 200 illustrations. 12mo, cloth gilt, $1.00.

This work takes a complete survey of the vast number of races and peoples of Asia. Like its companion volume. "The Conquerors of the World," it is both inwardly and outwardly produced in a very attractive style.

EVERY CHURCH OR SUNDAY-SCHOOL LIBRARY SHOULD HAVE IT.

THE

REV. A. E. DUNNING.

Sunday-School Secretary.

16mo, Cloth, 60 Cents.

This book is so excellent that the Office of the Publishers' Werkly, Franklin Square (330 Pearl Street), New York, with a view to serve its constituency, has purchased an edition, in order to help the good work in giving the book the widest circulation. It should be in every Church or Sunday-school Library, where it will be found the most practical guide for the encouragement of Sunday-school interests, and particularly for the organization and management of Sunday-school Libraries. Sunday-school superintendents and teachers, as well as clergymen and parents, will find it an invaluable guide for the direction of good reading.

"A capital book, suggested by many inquiries which have been made of Secretary Dunning. It treats of the history, object, authorship, selection, use, distribution, and power of the library. It is exceedingly practical and sensible, is written with unusual vigor, is thoroughly interesting, is unsectarian, and has, in an appendix, a list of works suitable for a library. The portion of it which deals with the selection of books is specially valuable, and the volume only needs to become known to gain a large sale among all denominations."—The Congregationalist.

"When he was within twenty yards I stooped down, and srasping Gumbo by the ankles from behind, litted his legs from under him, making him fall forward on his hands. I ran him right at the lion, wheel-barrow fashion, the bewildered nigger instinctively putting one hand before the other before he knew what he was about. This brought us within a spring of the lion. I hurled his legs forward over his head with such force that when they struck the ground his body rose and he described a convulsive somersault. This carried him two lengths ahead of mainto the very jaws of the lion, if the latter had stayed."

A FIRST BOOK IN AMERICAN HISTORY.

WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO THE LIVES AND DEEDS OF GREAT AMERICANS. By EDWARD EGGLESTON. With Maps and numerous Illustrations. Square 12mo, half bound, 75 cents.

"The children into whose hands Mr. Eggleston's charmingly-written volume is put will have before them pictures, vignettes, etc., almost as exquisitely dainty as those which adorn éditions de luxe. Even the maps are so drawn as to interest as well as instruct, and all that fine paper, beautiful clear type, and careful printing can effect, has been done by the publishers. The text is skillfully written, and is well adapted to interest young minds in the doings of great Americans."—New York Tribune.

English seal style, $10.00.

Over the clear-cut thoughts of a modern master of classic essay, one of the foremost of American artists draws the magic pencil which has achieved so many triumphs, and starts into life the rural beauties of "April Days," "My Outdoor Studies," "Water Lilies," "The Life of Birds," "The Procession of the Flowers," and "Snow." Whether floating in her boat on Concord River, with its wealth of floral adornments, its scenic surprises in the windings of its stream in and about places made famous by Thoreau and Emerson, or in her loftier flights amid the hills of "beautiful Camden" down by the sea, where the grandeur of mountain views possesses charms to wake enthusiasm, she has exhibited the same fidelity to Nature in her beautiful pictures, the same exquisite taste in the selection of her subjects, which have characterized her previous achievements.

THE WOOING OF GRANDMOTHER GREY.

By KATE TANNATT WOODS. Illustrated by Charles Copeland; engraved by Andrew. Oblong 4to, Copeland; engraved by Andrew. Oblong 4to, cloth, $2.00.

The author recalls in the happiest manner the days of our grandparents, the methods of their living, the old-fashioned houses, the chairs, the candles and candle-sticks, the open fireplace, the crane, the old "eight-day" clock in the corner of the room, the inviting brick hearth, and with these surroundings, indicating the home-like contentment of past days, Grandmother Grey's courtship story is told with a refreshing regard for the truth, by presenting a genuine picture of old New England life and character. The author's poem touches a tender chord, and makes one yearn for the homely simplicity and rugged sincerity which characterized the families of the old country homes of New England. The narrative of the wooing is lifelike in the extreme, which gives it its charm and pathos.

LITTLE BARON TRUMP AND HIS WONDERFUL DOG BULGER.

By Ingersoll Lockwood. Illustrated by George Wharton Edwards. 4to,

By Ingersoll Lockwood. Illustrated by George Wharton Edwards. 4to, cloth, $2.00.

"As is pretty generally known, our children's books are either written by English authors or are translated from the French, German, etc. Reference, of course, is here made to 'wonder books' or pure creations of the fancy, Of good writers of stories for boys and girls—that is, stories of things which wiekh have happened—there are many, but no American has yet been able to write a book of the style of 'Alice in Wonderland.'

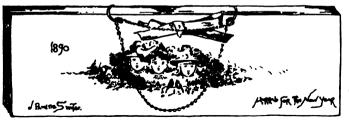

"This autumn an eminent Boston publishing house has put forth one of the most original books for young people ever written by an American author. It contains over 300 pages, and is fully illustrated by a very well-known artist whose work from month to month gives zest and charm to St. Nicholas. It is hard to say exactly what this book is like, being so utterly unlike anything as yet published. Suffice it to say that a most wonderful boy figures as its hero, supported and aided by one of the most wonderful dogs that ever lived or ever will live. The two are inseparable companions, travel together, suffer together, fight together, save each other's lives, and finally return home loaded with honors and world-wide fame. That young people will take delight in following these two extraordinary friends over land and sea, through flood and forest, into the countries inhabited by strange beings and strange animals, may be most safely predicted."

THE BOUDOIR CALENDAR FOR 1800

"HURRAH FOR THE NEW YEAR!

Printed in delicate tints on ivory cardboard, with ribbon bows, and silver chain and rings; neatly boxed. 75 cents.

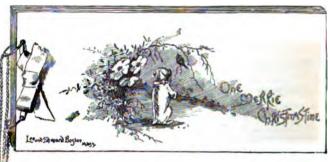

"Cute" is the proper word to "Cute" is the proper word to apply to this production, which is an illustrated calendar pretty enough to grace any parlor or brary or boudoir. A chain-and-ring attachment admits of bang-ing attachment admits of bang-months close. With each month's calendar the artist has given us a pleasing and turning theten, as the characteristic feature of the special season is exemplified, and in which diminutive lassies in divers attitudes among the birds and flowers are prominent figures. If the public doesn't take kindly to this souvenir we shall be surprised.

"ONE MERRIE CHRISTMAS TIME."

Printed in tints on cardboard, ribbon bows, and silver chain and rings; neatly boxed. 75

The designs express in many ways both the sacred and festiv ways both the sacred and festive characteristics of this day of all the year. The artist seems to have a fancy, in her decorations of this souvenir, for pugs and poodles, which are capitally introduced, and wonderful little children are planted in hills and wander in quaint costumes through lovely scenes. Nothing more appropriate for Christmas has been made.

In and Should Beston way NEW BOOK BY AMANDA M. DOUGLAS.

THE HEROES OF THE CRUSADES.

With 50 full-page illustrations by Doré. Black, white, and gold dies. $1.50. In the long and successful literary career of Miss Amanda M. Douglas her pen has brought forth nothing more pleasing than her presentation of the glorious deeds of chivalry as set forth in her latest volume, "The Heroes of the Crusades." The title itself suggests very plainly the nature of this popular book, and the interest in the author's portrayal of the truths of his tory is much enhanced by the fifty full-page illustrations by that eminent artist, Gustave Doré.

OUR BABY'S BOOK.

Elegantly printed on heavy Bristol board in colors and gold, with original designs, fastened with ribbons, and boxed, $1.50; gold cloth, gilt edges, $2.50.

signs, fastened with ribbons, and boxed, $1.50; gold cloth, gilt edges, $2.50. "The remark is not infrequently heard that this is a great year for babies. Apropos of this it may be mentioned that Messrs. Lee and Shepard publish a book which every mother should have. In it may be chronicled, as memories for grown-up days, the mother's story of the events, happenings, and incidents attending the progress of the baby. The pages with colored designs are appropriate to the leading incidents in the child's life from birth. When filled the book will be nothing less than a biography, giving date of birth, weight at various ages, name, presents received, the date of the arrival of the first tooth, when the first step was taken, and so on up to mature childhood. The idea is a happy one, and its execution through the medium of 'Our Baby's Book' is both excellent and artistic."

This is one of the daintiest of the many little books for holiday souvenirs. Children, birds, and flowers are all laid under contriflowers are all laid under contribution as subjects by the artistevery page having a delicate design in colors, giving the effect of a water-color. The printing is finely executed, and the method of binding original, making a charming holiday gift.

WITHIN THE ENEMY'S LINES.

By OLIVER OPTIC. Illustrated. Cloth. $1.50.

"This is a second volume of the 'Blue and Gray' series, and, like its predecessor, is connected with our late Civil War. Though Mr. Adams has written a war book, he has not written it in a warlike spirit. He has no wish to rekindle war fires or revive war bitterness. He has simply used the conflict as a magazine of dramatic incident, as a field in which the imagination may find ample scope. If it is a sin to be interesting, then Mr. Adams is very wicked; but this is the only wickedness in the volume, unless it be a little wickedness in some of his characters."—Christian Register.

Announce for the coming year a New Series of Foreign Literature, edited by EDMUND GOSSE, to be issued in Monthly Volumes.

IN PAPER COVERS, 50 CENTS; CLOTH, GILT, $1.00.

THE FIRST VOLUME, READY DECEMBER 12, WILL BE

IOSHUA. A Biblical Picture.

By GEORG EBERS.

This edition is issued by special arrangement with the author, and will be the ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITION in this country, the translation being made for the John W. Lovell Company, and approved by the author.

NO. 2 WILL BE

THE PROSE DRAMAS OF HENRIK IBSEN

With Biographical Introduction by EDMUND GOSSE.

A friendship of twenty years with the Norwegian poet makes Mr. Gosse, undoubtedly, the most fitting writer to supply a sketch of the life which is now attracting so much attention. The volume includes, with other plays, "A Doll's House," which has created such a sensation in Europe and in this country, translated by Mr. William Archer; "The Pillars of Society," which will be produced at Palmer's Theatre, New York, this winter, and a translation of "Rosmersholm," prepared especially for this work.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

THE BLOSSOM AND THE FRUIT, by Mabel Collins; and DREAMS AND DREAM STORIES, by Anna (Bonus) Kingsford.

In paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00. The first two issues of the Occult Series.

	MAGAZINE
FOR	1890.

In 1890 SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE will enter upon its fourth year and seventh volume. It is impossible to give an adequate summary of the year's contents in brief space. To interested readers who will send us 10 CENTS we will send a recent number and a full prospectus. Among new features may be mentioned:—

AN ADDED DEPARTMENT AND INCREASED SPACE.

It has been decided to open a department for the brief consideration of subjects of both passing and permanent interest, and for this purpose a few pages will be added to each number. This feature in the Magazine will give, it is believed, a new element of brightness and variety.

AFRICAN EXPLORATION AND TRAVEL

will be treated from several points of view. Among the articles will be one by Mr. Herbert Ward, who spent five years on the Congo River.

LIFE ON A MODERN WAR SHIP.

By MR. R. F. ZOGBAUM, the artist and writer, who has received permission to accompany the Squaron of Evolution on its cruise. The articles will be fully illustrated by the author.

HOMES IN CITY, SUBURBS, AND COUNTRY.

In connection with this will be given a paper describing how houses have been built by people of small means through Building and Loan Associations. The articles will be freely illustrated.

FICTION.

In January a new novelette in four parts will be begun by OCTAVE THANET, with illustrations by A. B. FROST. Later there will be a unique serial by an anonymous writer, of which further announcement will be made.

THE CITIZEN'S RIGHTS.

A series of articles upon a great class of rights and privileges for which the citizen pays his taxes, but of which the long-suffering American allows himself to be deprived, written by eminent authorities.

THE ELECTRIC ARTICLES

will be completed by several carefully-illustrated papers.

ERICSSON, THE GREAT INVENTOR.

Written by his authorized biographer, Mr. William C. Church.

HUNTING ARTICLES.

A group numbering perhaps as many as the successful Fishing articles published last summer.

SINGLE ARTICLES IN GREAT VARIETY.

MR. ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

will continue to contribute to the Magazine during 1890. The names of other important contributors appear in more specific announcements; and several important projects are reserved for description when the arrangements in progress for them shall be further advanced.

TERMS: $3.00 A YEAR; 25 CENTS A NUMBER.

SPECIAL OFFER. A complete set of the Magazine from the first number. Jan., '87, and a subscription for 1890, $7.50; the same, bound in cloth (6 vols.), $12.00; the numbers for 1889 and a subscription for 1890, $4.50; the same, with back numbers bound in cloth, $6.00.

CHARLES	SCRIBNER'S S	ONS,
743	BROADWAY,	NEW	YORK.

Among Cannibals.

An Account of Four Years' Travel in Australia, and of Camp Life with the Aborigines of Queens-land. By CARL LUMHOLTZ, M.A. Fully illustrated, 8vo. $5.00.

"Mr Lumholtz selected for his study the lowest race of homo sapiens known to exist—a race only just entering upon the Stone Age—that is, without even a tolerable supply of stone implements, without agriculture, without clothing of any kind, without religion, without numbers—a miserable wandering race. Here, in an unvisited corner of Northern Australia, was an indubitably veracious picture of a man's life in the infancy of the race. His book is made up of an extraordinary narrative and a series of brilliant pictures."—Baston Transcript.

Whither? O Whither?

TELL WE WHERE.

By JAMES McCosh, Litt.D., LL.D., D.D. 12mo, paper, 50 cents net.

Dr. McCosh's pamphlet is a spirited consideration of some of the questions raised by Dr. Briggs' "Whither?" rather than a review of or an answer to it. His views touch upon many of the vital points in the present theological agitation, and are sure to attract wide attention.

WE can still supply orders for imprint editions of the Christmas Bookshelf to a total not exceeding 750 copies, if orders are sent at once. The Christmas issue of the Literary News is already out of print.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE INTERNATIONAL News Co. issue "In the '400' and Out," a clever hit on America's alleged aristocracy, by Charles Jay Taylor, the inventor and delineator of the now celebrated "Tailor-made Girl." The book, though issued but a few weeks, has already met with a splendid success.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just published an important work, entitled "Among the Cannibals," which is an account by Carl Lumholtz of his four years' travel in Australia, and of camplife with the aborigines of Queensland, considered to be the lowest race of homo sapiens known to exist. They have also just ready "Whither? O Whither? Tell me Where," by Dr. James McCosh. It is a spirited consideration of some of the questions raised by Dr. Briggg' "Whither?" rather than a review of or an answer to it.

D. APPLETON & Co. have just ready in their Town and Country Library "Countess Loreley," a bright and fresh novel from the German, by Rudolph Merger. They will publish immediately "Lilly Lass," by Justin McCarthy, and "Master of His Fate," by J. Maclaren Cobban, both in the Gainborough Series; "The Doll's House," a translation of one of the most powerful of Henrik Ibsen's plays; and a new edition revised to date of "Appletons' Handbook of Winter Resorts." They have in press a book by Frank Vincent, entitled "Around and About South America." Mr. Vincent circum-navigated South America, and visited the various places of interest in the different countries, including many in Brazil. The volume will be fully illustrated. They have in press a valuable historical work in "James G. Birney and the Genesis of the Republican Party," by Gen. William Birney.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish on the 13th Mr. Browning's new book, "Asolando: fancies and facts." They bring out this week a revised issue of their convenient Riverside Edition of Browning's works, with all the author's recent corrections; Principal Shairp's "Portraits of Friends," including Clough, Erskine, Macleod, and others; "Wilbur Fisk." as the second volume in the series of American Religious Leaders, by Professor George Prentice; Mr. Lawton's scholarly and every way admirable translation and elucidation of "Three Dramas of Euripides," the Medea, the Hippolytos, and the Alkestis; "A New England Girlhood," an autobiographical book by Lucy Larcom, for the sixth volume in the excellent Riverside Library for Young People; and a new and cheaper edition of Mr. Howe's striking story, "The Mystery of the Locks."

THE JOHN W. LOVELL Co. announce for the coming year a new series of foreign literature to be edited by Edmund Gosse. The first issue. ready December 12, will be "Joshua, a Biblical Picture," by Georg Ebers, which is issued by special arrangements with the author, the translation having been made for the Lovell Company and approved by Dr. Ebers. This will be fol-lowed by "The Prose Dramas of Henrik Ibsen," with a biographical introduction by Edmund Gosse, whose friendship of twenty years with the Norwegian poet makes him undoubtedly a fit writer to supply a sketch of the life of one who is now attracting so much attention. The vol-ume will include with other plays "A Doll's House," translated by William Archer; "The Pillars of Society;" and a translation of "Rosmersholm," prepared especially for this work. The volumes will be issued monthly in cloth at $1, and in paper at 50 cents. The Lovell Company have also made arrangements with a number of English authors for novels for the coming year.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if he copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c, ed.; translations, c, tr.; n, p, in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the tradeously upon application.

A tragic tale in blank verse. The narrative gives setting to a legend of the Elizabethan period, and centres in the ruined Devonshire manor-house which in the reign of Elizabeth was the seat of Sir Richard Wyndham. The Boston Post says of it: "So truthful is the rendering of local color, so full is the poem of the breath of English air and so inhabited by English feeling, that it approves our boast that the past of England does in fact belong to us as to the old country and its traditions are native to us still. It is hard to see in what way an English poet would have felt differently in treating the same theme."

A complete edition of Edwin Arnold's poetical works, attendy published in separate volumes by Roberts, under the titles of "Poems," "The light of Asia," "Pearls of the faith," "The song celestial," "Indian idyls," "The secret of death," "Lotus and jewel," and "With Sa'di in the garden."

Austin, Jane G. Standish of Standish: a story of the Pilgrims. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin &

of the Pilgrims. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1889. c. 6+422 p. D. cl., $1.25.

As the title indicates, the characters are the Puritans, who sailed from Holland, in 1620, resolved to settle in a country where freedom of worship would be accorded them. Their perilous voyage and landing, the sickness and death that assailed them, the first New England Thanksgiving, and other facts are faithfully portrayed. Mention is made of Stephen Hopkins, Governors Carver and Bradford, John Alden, Mary Chilton, Priscilla Mollines, Rose and Myles Standish, and other names famous in New England's annals; but the interest centres in Myles Standish's deeds of prowess, and the quaint, sweet love-story of Priscilla and John. Myles Standish's sword, its ancient inscription, and several other relics of the old Plymouth Colony, make appropriate cover designs.

At twelve years, she began to write this diary, resolving to put down in it, not only all that happened to her, but her most secret thoughts and feelings. She fancied herself in love several times before her eighteenth year, but from this age until her death in 1884 she worked conscientiously at art, achieving quite a success with her pictures exhibited in the Paris Salon. Besides being a fine artist, she was a linguist and a musicasa. Considering her youth and many years of ill-health, the artwork she accomplished was quite notable. Bastien-Lepage was one of her intimate friends. Her diary is chiefly remarkable as a revelation of an unusual character. She is in turns religious, sceptical, hopeful, despairing, vain, coquettish, and frivolous. At times her criticisms of books and pictures show remarkable powers of discrimination.

Five thousand words most liable to be mispronounced are comprised in this little book, and their pronunciation clearly set forth. Each page of the book is divided into three columns. The first gives the word, without mark or division, just as we find it in books, newspapers, etc.; the second gives the pronunciation in the simplest possible manner; the third column represents a phonetic analysis of the word. The latest unabridged editions of Webster and Worcester have been consulted. The compiler is professor of articulation and pronunciation in the National School of Elocution and Oratory.

Kit Cotterill, like Lazarus of old, has wounds; they are social sores that are the outgrowth of poverty. He in turn tells of en-successes and advances, opposite theories to

Denny, rallies his forces from Bohemia; Kit, formerly settle the mooted question in three months. Kit, now Denny, rallies his forces from Bohemia; Kit, formerly Denny, lives a life of tireless work. If the result of this is not entirely satisfactory to the heroes, it is highly so to the reader, as some merriment is excited by the false positions that the young men fall into; and above all several important social problems are considered.

This volume added to Mr. Brooks' works on "The American Indian," "In Leisler's Times," and "The Story of the American Sailor" finishes a comprehensive picture of American history. The causes of wars and descriptions of battles Mr. Brooks leaves to existing histories. He makes a study of the American soldier as an individual in peace as well as war, as the man "whose valor has illumined history, whose steadfastness has redeemed failure, and whose loyalty has glorified success." He gives a chronological table of the American soldier's achievements from 1622 to 1889; a schedule of the 'organization of the army; lists of the Secretaries of War and commanders of the armies of the United States; a list of the Principal engagements of every important war which American soldiers have fought; a bibliography of the best 100 books on the American soldier, and a full well-made index. well-made index.

An introductory paper, "How I got them," gives many proofs of the truth of Mr. Cable's assertion that these are true stories of episodes known in old Louisians families, true stories of episodes known in old Louisiana families, or of strange cases that are on record in the law courts. "The young aunt with white hair," "The adventures of François and Suzanne," and "Alex. de Morainville" are stories of one hundred years ago, when Louisiana belonged to the French. "Salome Müller" relates to the strange fate of a young German girl who was sold into alavery; "The haunted house in Royal Street" is a gruesome tale of New Orleans, based on facts: "Attalie Brouillard" was gleaned from the court records, and "War diary of a Union woman in the South" is a chapter of the civil war that appeared among the Century's war papers. The book is illustrated with many fac-similes of original documents.

"Maud Florence Nellie" Whittaker and her brother
Harry were endowed with a spirit that prompted them to meet everything in the nature of reproof with a ready "don't care." The story tells how they were brought to a realizing sense of their fault by bitter experience; it also shows the danger of giving way to ebullitions of temper, offers an example in Mrs. Warren's mode of coping with turbulent natures, and affords quite a study in character.

The writer is pastor of the Shawmut Congregational Church, Boston, and author of "The Mikado's empire." This is a literary study of probably the most perfect poem in any language. Herder, Eichhorn, Godet, Cheyne, Farrar, Defitzsch, and other great Hebraists furnished the key to this "treasure-chamber of the Bible." Modern critical scholars think that Solomon is not the author of it, but that it was composed after his death to describe the ladies of the royal harem in Jerusalem and a beautiful rustic maiden from the vineyards of the north, and to contrast Galilean country life with the corrupt splendor of the court of Solomon. The Song of Songs is given in the text of the Revised Version as a drama in five acts, and this drama is then exhaustively analyzed. The author claims that with this reading this will be found to be a song of pure, true, and faithful love of a maiden for her shepherd lover. He has poetry and imagination and writes convincingly. writes convincingly.

Marie and Suzette were slaves; Colonel Bickerstaff bought them by proxy in Louisiana. On their arrival at Oaklawn, comment was excited by their diversity of appearance; later Suzette's attitude to Marie caused strange rumors to be set afloat; the slave-mother was questioned, but she stubbornly claimed her maternity to the white girl; inquiries as to the antecedents of this strange pair elicited nothing, and so matters remained until Marie excited the love of Harry Bickerstaff; then Johnson, the overseer, concocts a plot that consigns the heroine to a fate more pitiful than death. In the closing chapters Marie's identity is revealed, and her fostermother tells why she has sacrificed her charge. A novel founded upon what is claimed as the life-history of an exslave.

"Miss J." is represented as an English lady who came to this country in 1852 and died in New York some 10 years afterwards. A number of letters and her diary were found after her death in the attic of a house where she had resided. These letters, apparently from the Duke of Wellington and addressed to her, with extracts from her diary explaining her acquaintance with him, have been made into a book by Mrs. Herrick. "Miss J." made the Duke's acquaintance through writing him a letter on his spiritual condition, which she says "the Lord" prompted her to write. The Duke responded to this epistle, following it up with a visit. From this time out through a period of seventeen years they continued to correspond. The letters are silly on both sides—on the Duke's often rude and brusque, on hers full of unsolicited expressions of affection, quotations from the Bible, and endless explanations of quarrels.

c. 2 v., 9+400; 2+426 p. por. O. cl., $7.50. Philip Hone, a member of an old Knickert ocker family, was one of the few men of his time in America who had the leisure to keep a diary and the varied experience to make such a record valuable to posterity. He held the office of Mayor of New York, and for many years was high in the counsels of the Whig party, and was closely identified with the leading interests of the city. His diary extends from 1828 to 1845. The political life of these years is commented upon by one who was familiar with its inner workings. Daniel Webster, Martin Van Buren, with a score of their prominent contemporaries, are familiarly described and conversations with them recorded. A graphic description is given of the famous Tippecanoe election, in which Hone took an active part on the side of Harrison. But probably the portion of this diary which will be most eagerly read is that relating to the social life in New York. The Knickerbocker of to-day will learn what company was present at his father's wedding, where his grandfather most frequently dined, and what people thought about him. thought about him.

Our old friends, the Marches, whose adventures on "Their wedding journey" were the subject of one of Mr. Howells' most charming works, are introduced in "A hazard of new fortunes," living in Boston, advanced to middle life, and the parents of an interesting grown-up family. Mr. March has just concluded he is heartily tired of his business of life insurance, when a tempting offer comes to him to change his residence to New York and become the editor of a new magazine, Every Other Week. After much tribulation Mrs. March consents to leave her refined Boston home and live in a New York flat. The details of flat-hunting are very amusing and perfectly details of flat-hunting are very amusing and perfectly true to life. The career of the magazine, the domestic life of the Marches and that of the managaine, the domestic life of the Marches and that of the manager Mr. Fulkerson, and the moneyed man Dryfoos, who is the backer of Every Other Week, make up the book. There is, of course, a little love-making and a little tragedy, but Mr. How ells' humorous way of presenting the little troubles of ou every-day life is the chief charm.

$10. The twelve numbers of the Magazine of Art for the current year are issued as usual in a bound volume as a holiday gift-book. The many etchings, photogravures, wood-engravings, etc., which adorn it, and the numerous papers on art which are comprised within its covers, make it a most valuable and attractive work. Papers of special interest just at present are those os the portraits of Dante Gabriel Rossetti and Gladstone, and the articles on the life and works of Diaz, Danis, ny, and Millet. There are many articles on American art, and the "Chronicle of art" and the "Monthly record of American art," that are so useful in the magazine are all bound in this volume. They give a survey of contemporaneous art in Europe and America.

Munroe, Kirk. The golden days of '49: a tale of the California diggings. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1880.] c. 9+351 p. il. O. cl., $2.25.
The hero is Linn Halstead, the son of a New England minister, and just twenty-one. He was among the first to catch the gold fever, when the news was received east of the wonderful discoveries of gold made in California in 1849. Taking his small savings from the bank, he started by way of the isthmus for California. His adventures all through are just such as befel many a young man in those days who went to California. He gets out of money, meets with a rough miner, who shares his gold and claims with him and swears an everlasting friendship. Together they have a most wonderful series of adventures in their search for gold, death being often near them in many guises. The volume ends with the making of California into a State and the return of one of the "pards" as a "Senator," and the marriage of the other.

of Job. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1889.
Dr. Parker has treated this book—believed to be the oldest poem ever written—with admirable skill. His fertile conceptions, vigorous logic, apt illustrations, versatile applications, and pathetic appeals, easily place him in the highest rank of Biblical expositors. The work is not a collection of sermons, nor a formal and exhaustive commentary. It is in some sense a cross between the two. The author searches for vital points—the basal truths and primal lessons of the text—and focuses thought on those important centres. He gives the cream of the subject. The volume is divided into 47 general sections, to which are added 40 briefer articles called "Handfuls of purpose," containing many practical applications of Job's choice sayings.

The scene is Chester, A.D. 1494, nine years after the battle of Bosworth ended the War of the Roses. The battle of Bosworth ended the War of the Roses. The story is made of facts and fancies that succeeded the contest between York and Lancaster. Some of the characters are real, others fictitious, but all are singularly well drawn. Mey Morecombe, the heroine, lives with Goody Hammond, proprietress of "The Blue Dragon." In this hostelry or its vicinity most of the action takes place; nearby, Meg succors the Flemish lad, who is so important a factor in her heart's history; the pageantry of the "Miracles" can be witnessed from its roof, and interest in the view is not lessened by the parts played by Loci in the view is not lessened by the parts played by Jack and Roger; within a few paces Rob Morecombe, York-ist, busily concocts a p'ot against the opposing faction; surrounding it are the plague-stricken houses that figured in English annals. Incidents are many and rapid, dra-matic effect recurs frequently, and the book abounds in vivid descriptions.
